NEW YEAR'S BABY ARRIVES – Kameron Leibrand was the first baby born at Garrett County Memorial Hospital in 2012. Dr. Daniel Buckingham delivered him on Sunday, Jan. 1, at 10:15 a.m., weighing in at 6 pounds 2.3 ounces and 18 inches long. Kameron's parents are Kayla Leibrand and Kevin Hoover of Friendsville. He joins his siblings, Kylie Taylor, age 3, and Keagan Leibrand, age 2. The family received a basket of gifts donated by several local businesses. FOR JANUARY, SITUATION NORMAL – Wintry weather in January is nothing new to Garrett Countians, whether they be of the two-legged or four-legged variety. These horses at a Grantsville area farm know what to do to stay warm, and in fact most of them have at least some fun in snow. A significant storm came through the county this week, causing schools to remain closed on Tuesday and thus giving students an added day to their holiday break. About a foot of snow came down, accompanied by gusty wind and frigid temperatures. The next several days are predicted to be far more moderate, with daytime temps in the 40s, dropping to the 20s at night. Photo by Lisa Broadwater.

Local Woman Dies In Single-Vehicle Accident

An Oakland woman was fatally injured in an early Saturday morning single-vehicle accident investigated by Maryland State Police.

Investigation revealed that Sabrina M. Davis, 34, Cumberland, had been traveling north on Deep Creek Drive, when her 2002 Jeep Grand Cherokee traveled off the right side of the roadway, colliding with the guardrail and overturning.

Deep Creek Fire and Rescue, including Northern Rescue Squad responded to extricate passenger Tonya Coleman, 33, from the vehicle. MSP Aviation Trooper 5 was called to the scene, but canceled prior to its arrival, as Coleman was not medically stable for flight. She sustained severe head trauma and later succumbed to her injuries at Garrett County Memorial Hospital. Davis sustained moderate, non-life-threatening injuries in the accident.

Charges are pending awaiting the results of the investigation. Alcohol may have been a contributing factor.

Christmas Tree May Be Recycled At Local Landfill

The Garrett County Department of Solid Waste and Recycling invites Garrett County residents to participate in Christmas tree recycling at the county landfill during the months of January and February.

Trees will be accepted for recycling from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, at the landfill location at 3118 Oakland Sang Run Road.

Christmas tree recycling is available to Garrett County residents free of charge. A residential disposal permit is not required to participate in this program or any other recycling program in Garrett County.

Christmas trees may also be recycled at home by placing cut branches and needles under trees and shrubs as a temporary winter mulch – or by chopping them up and adding them to compost piles.

"Please remove all tinsel, garland and ornaments before recycling Christmas trees at home or the landfill location," said recycling coordinator Kim Madigan.

Persons with questions regarding the free recycling programs in Garrett County may contact Madigan at 301-387-0322 or kmadigan@garrettcounty.org.

Regalia To Present Economic Forecast At Will O' The Wisp

Dr. Martin Regalia will present an economic forecast at the next Business Before Hours, sponsored by Susquehanna Bank, on Tuesday, Jan. 17, at Will O' the Wisp.

The forum is scheduled to begin with a breakfast at 8 a.m. in the downstairs area of the Will O' the Wisp, with the program running from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m.

Regalia is the senior vice president for economic and tax policy, as well as chief economist, at the United States Chamber of Commerce. The event is billed as a great opportunity to hear how 2012 is starting off and to learn what can be expected for the next year.

"We are delighted and extremely honored that Dr. Regalia accepted our invitation to present an economic forecast to our members," said Nicole Christian, president and CEO of the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce.

"Marty is one of the nation's foremost experts on economics, and it is a real coup to have someone of his caliber come to Garrett County and address our members. I learn so much every time I hear him speak."

Regalia served as a principal analyst in the fiscal analysis division of the Congressional Budget Office, as an economist for the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System (in both the banking and capital markets sections), and as a financial economist for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

USA Today named Regalia one of the top 10 economists in the nation. Regalia and other economists received this recognition for the accuracy of their 2008 forecasts.

According to its organizers, the Business Before Hours breakfast programs are bimonthly events designed to focus on specific topics with formal presentations. The topics slated for 2012 include the legislative wrap-up, the state of the county, and tourism. Non-competing sponsorship opportunities are available for each forum.

The cost for members is set at $15 in advance or $20 at the door. The cost for non-members is set at $30. Those interested may register online or by calling Charlotte at 301-387-6171 (by January 12 to receive the advanced payment discount for members). The organizers recommend those interested make early reservations, as space is limited.

A fire that began in the flue and then spread into a Gortner area house Monday afternoon left a family of six homeless.

Police Investigating Accident Involving GC School Bus

Garrett County sheriff's deputies responded to a three-vehicle accident involving a school bus Wednesday evening at the intersection of Mayhew Inn Road and Garrett Highway.

Investigation revealed that a school bus, driven by Donald William DeWitt, Swanton, was stationary on Mayhew Inn Road waiting to turn north on Garrett Highway. A 2006 Honda SUV, operated by Gale Lynn Bosley, Oakland, was traveling north on Garrett Highway and attempting to make a left turn onto Mayhew Inn, when it was struck by a southbound 2002 Pontiac driven by Wendy Marie Miller, Oakland. The collision caused Bosley's vehicle to collide with the driver's side of the bus.

The bus had 10 juveniles on board at the time of the accident. Six of those students were released to their parents at the scene, and the other four were taken to Garrett County Memorial Hospital by Northern and Southern rescue squads before being released to their parents. All were reported

Medical Condition Is Possible Cause Of Driver's Death

A Preston County woman died following a minor vehicle accident on Oak Street, Oakland, last Thursday afternoon. Her death is believed to have been from an underlying medical condition that ultimately caused the accident in the first place.

Investigation revealed that Jacqueline Bell, 42, Rowlesburg, had been traveling east at approximately 1:30 p.m., when her vehicle struck the rear end of a truck driven by James Ford, 56, Oakland.

According to a Maryland State Police trooper, Bell was complaining of severe pain on the top of her head at the scene. She was taken by Southern Rescue Squad to Garrett County Memorial Hospital, where she was pronounced dead in the parking lot. An autopsy will be done by the Maryland Medical Examiner's Office, Baltimore.

Garrett County sheriff's deputies also responded to the scene, as well as the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department.

GALA NETS $53K FOR GARRETT COUNTY MEMORIAL HOSPITAL – A Night In Vegas, the title of the recent fundraising gala of the Garrett County Memorial Hospital, has raised a total of $53,000. These funds will go toward the purchase of nuclear medicine imaging equipment already in operation at the hospital. Nuclear medicine imaging equipment is used as a diagnostic tool to help with early detection of many diseases and, according to a spokesperson, is a valuable resource as physicians determine how to best treat their patients. "I would like to thank anyone and everyone who helped in any way with the gala," commented Wayne Johnson, 2011 gala fundraiser chairman. "Everyone showed overwhelming support even with the economy as it is at this time. There are just too many people who helped to list them all." The event was held at the Wisp Resort. Pictured above, from left, with a check representing the sum of the gala proceeds, are: William Grant, GCMH foundation chairman; Johnson; and Kathy Greaser, director of development at GCMH.

WHY AREN'T YOU TWO SLEEPING? This mother bear and her cub actually most likely are hibernating by now, as this shot was taken in early December when the weather had yet to change significantly. The mother and cub wandered onto the Berkebile farm in Accident sometime during the night, and when the family awoke, the two were in a tree next to a sheep pen. They stayed there most of the day, and Becky Berkebile got fairly close to get this picture, and others. The mother appears to be wary of the young photographer, and Becky knew well enough to hurry up with her picture-taking. There is nothing quite as ferocious as a protective mother bear. At about 4 p.m., they climbed down and went on their way.

Charged With Driving Without Valid Licenses

Garrett County sheriff's deputies made three arrests this past week involving drivers operating vehicle on suspended licenses. The following incidents are unrelated.

Deputies conducted a stop last Friday on a 1990 Chrysler four-door passenger vehicle for a driving violation on Fingerboard Road, Oakland. Friend was taken to the Garrett County Jail to await a bond hearing.

Deputies stopped a tan Dodge Intrepid on Maryland Highway Tuesday evening after the driver was identified as Tony Lynn Hebb, 30, Oakland, as he was operating the vehicle on a suspended license and privilege. He was taken to the Garrett County Jail to await a bond hearing.

Deputies stopped a green Dodge Ram pickup truck on Maryland Highway near Leon White Road early Wednesday morning for not having rear tag lights. The driver was identified as Marvin Eugene Guthrie, 42, Mtn. Lake Park, who was discovered to be driving on a suspended license and privilege. He was taken to the GC Jail to await a bond hearing.

Driver Taken To GCMH After Early Morning Accident

Garrett County sheriff's deputies responded to a single-vehicle accident with injuries early Friday morning. One man was transported to Garrett County Memorial Hospital by ambulance.

Deputies arrived at the 2000 block of Maryland Highway, Deer Park, at approximately 2 a.m. Investigation revealed that Paul Douglas Hoff Sr., 42, Oakland, had been traveling east on Maryland Highway, when his vehicle struck a telephone pole and overturned on an embankment. He was taken to GCMH by Southern Rescue Squad. Deer Park Volunteer Fire Department also responded to the scene.

Charges may be filed pending completion of the investigation. Hoff's medical condition was unknown at the time the press release was received.

State Reports First Case Of Seasonal Flu

Seasonal influenza has officially hit in Maryland, according to Department of Health and Mental Hygiene (DHMH) officials. The first laboratory-confirmed case of seasonal influenza has been diagnosed in an adult in the Baltimore metropolitan region. Last season, the first confirmed case was reported on October 14, 2010.

"Seasonal influenza is here in Maryland," said Frances Phillips, DHMH deputy secretary of public health services. "If you have not been vaccinated, now is the time to protect yourself, family, and community against this illness that affects thousands of people every year."

The virus which causes influenza is contagious, spreading from person to person through coughing or sneezing. It is also spread by direct contact with infected people and contaminated surfaces or objects. Symptoms usually begin one to four days after being exposed to the influenza virus and include fever, body aches, fatigue, coughing, and sore throat.

According to the DHMH, yearly vaccinations are important because the strains of influenza that circulate change over time. This season's vaccine is aimed at three strains that are expected to be most prevalent this season.

"It is not too late to be vaccinated," said Phillips. "Plenty of vaccine is available in Maryland. Contact your health care provider, local health department, or neighborhood pharmacy to get vaccinated."

Influenza vaccine is recommended for everyone over the age of 6 months. The DHMH says it is especially important for those individuals who are at high risk for influenza-related complications and severe disease, including:

•Children of 6 months to 18 years of age;

•Persons 50 years of age and older;

•Pregnant women;

•Persons of any age with chronic medical conditions; and •Persons undergoing therapy, or with a condition that

MSP Arrest Man After Drunken Disturbance

Maryland State Police arrested an Oakland man early Sunday morning after troopers responded to a Glen Dale Ct. residence off Glendale Road for report of a disorderly suspect.

Investigation revealed that Kraig Glenn Demastus, 28, was reportedly intoxicated and banging on several neighbors' doors, yelling and screaming. After speaking with several residents, it was determined that he was behaving in a disorderly manner and causing a disturbance. He was placed under arrest and later released by criminal citation.

What Does Investment Landscape Look Like in 2012?

As an investor, you know that 2011 was a somewhat "choppy" year, with the financial markets going through many ups and downs. So what can you expect in 2012?

As baseball Hall of Famer Yogi Berra is quoted as saying: "It's hard to make predictions — especially about the future." And these words are certainly applicable for anyone who would like an accurate forecast of the investment climate.

Yet we do know of some factors that may affect your portfolio in the months ahead. Here are a few of them:

• Strong business fundamentals — This past year, all the noise about the debt ceiling debate, the size of the U.S. deficit and the European financial situation tended to drown out some fairly good news: U.S. businesses' balance sheets were strong for the most part, borrowing costs remained low, and corporate profits were good — and corporate profitability remains a key driver of stock prices. Heading into 2012, these fundamentals continue to look positive, which may bode well for investors.

•Europe's debt crisis — Greece's economic problems made a lot of news in 2011, but they weren't the end of the story in Europe, as major financial difficulties also face Italy, Spain, Portugal and Ireland. It's by no means clear how these problems will be resolved, so don't be surprised to see them lead to intermittent, if short-lived, shocks to the markets.

• Election-year patterns — As you're well aware, we're voting for president in 2012. But you might be surprised to learn that the S&P 500 Index has shown negative returns in only three of the last 21 presidential election years. Coincidence? No one can say for sure — and at this point, no one can say if this pattern of positive returns will continue during this election year. Still, it's an interesting phenomenon.

So there you have it: the good, the bad and the quirky. Take them all together, and you still may not be able to foresee what will happen with the markets this year, but you'll have a lot to think about.

But instead of trying to predict what will happen in 2012, you may be better off following these tried-and-true investment strategies:

• Diversify your holdings. By spreading your money among a wide range of investments, you can reduce the effects of volatility on your portfolio. Keep in mind, though, that diversification, by itself, can't guarantee profits or protect against loss.

• Don't ignore your risk tolerance. If you worry excessively about market fluctuations, you may have too much risk in your portfolio, which means you may need to make some changes.

• Always look at the "big picture." Financial markets will always fluctuate. But if you can keep your focus on your long-term objectives, and make decisions accordingly, you can avoid overreacting to short-term events.

Like other years, 2012 will bring with it periods of both turbulence and smooth sailing. But by making the right investment moves, you can still chart a course that can allow you to move ever closer to your future goals.

Lessons to be Learned...

Almost never is this column related to a sports event, but given the fact that the writer is a graduate of West Virginia University, coupled with the fact that the WVU football team recorded an astounding 70-33 (yes, football) victory just hours ago in the Bowl Championship Series Orange Bowl, an exception will be made today. (Sorry, but it just cannot be helped.)

The focus, however, will not be on football specifically or on this particular game – the tactics, the game plan, plays made, records set, outstanding individual performances, the coaching, etc. – but rather on the concept of being the underdog and, against all odds, rising to the top and being successful. Such a concept does not, of course, apply only to sports.

Eighty-four percent of voting sports enthusiasts throughout the nation, including the great majority of the professional sports anchors, reporters, writers, and other "experts," predicted that the winner of the 2012 Orange Bowl would be Clemson. Most said that Clemson would not only win the game, but would do so handily. The Tigers boasted one of the most explosive offensive units in the country, several All-Americans, and a number of major victories in the regular season over ranked opponents. Meanwhile, the Mountaineers, despite also having an outstanding offensive unit, are members of the alleged "weak" Big East Conference, had "backed into" a share of the conference championship, and had some losses to some relatively unheralded teams.

A general lack of respect for WVU by the sports "experts" is certainly nothing new. In the past two BCS games (Fiesta and Sugar bowls) played by the Mountaineers, the prediction was almost the same. The powerful Georgia Bulldogs and the legendary Oklahoma Sooners would make mincemeat out of West Virginia and send the Mountaineers packing back into Appalachia, proving that they did not deserve to even be on the same football field with the likes of them. One would think that the experts would learn, as the Mountaineers hammered both the Bulldogs and the Sooners in those contests.

So there are several lessons to be learned here. One is that even the great majority can be wrong. Another is that – despite what seem to be overwhelming odds against a team, or a person, or a business, or an organization, in a wide variety of situations – hard work, dedication, determination, and belief in oneself and one's "teammates" can truly result in overcoming those odds. Another is that sometimes the best motivator is that very majority vote that predicts failure. Some of the most successful people have been those who were told that they "can't" do something.

For those of us WVU alumni and fans, it is hoped that when the next big bowl opportunity rolls around for the Mountaineers, the great majority of "experts" will be once again predicting their defeat.

To the Editor:

While we were out shopping, struggling to find that perfect last-minute Christmas gift, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) announced on 12/22/11 what they were giving us. And, unlike the commercial about some product that keeps on giving, the EPA gift is one that keeps on taking.

Their gift involves the requirement that every coal- and oil-fired power plant in this nation must reduce its emissions, in the next 3-4 years, to no more than the cleanest 12% of plants currently producing electricity.

So what, you ask. Here in eastern Kentucky our power plant will continue to run on coal, which is good for our overall economy, but our electric bills will increase by 31% by the middle of 2016 because of the addition of scrubbers to reduce air pollution. You, the readers of The Republican newspaper, may face a similar situation. This action will be devastating to many people in America.

So what can be done? Coal is presently supplying 45% of this nation's power. We need to keep it that way. The current administration is out of touch with us, the people. A change in 2012 may be what we need.

Thank you,
John F. Enyart
Ashland, Ky.

To the Editor:

This is a letter of thanks to the community of Garrett County on the announcement of my retirement from family practice.

Thirty years ago my wife Sharon and I arrived in Oakland in a snowstorm, and we left a couple days later in minus-degree weather. Sharon, being from Alabama, had rarely experienced snow at all, and certainly not temperatures below zero. We had visited about 12 towns in the Southeast, and although it was a 13-hour trip to Alabama and a far cry colder, we decided to make Oakland our first home.

We chose Oakland because it seemed like a nice small town in which to raise our two boys, education seemed good, the Garrett Medical Group seemed like a good fit, and the hospital physicians seemed to be very supportive of each other. We've never looked back.

Our sons Michael and Bryan received a first-rate education, and they had numerous opportunities in all kinds of activities. Sharon and I have also never lacked for things to do here. So many people look at small towns as limiting, but perhaps the only thing I see as limiting here are employment opportunities.

Oakland has been not only a wonderful place to live and raise children, but also a satisfying place to practice medicine. For 25 years I loved delivering babies and caring for those children, and since I gave that up, I've enjoyed spending more time with the adults in my practice. I have very mixed feelings about taking down my shingle, particularly knowing that choosing a new doctor will be difficult for many. There is a bond between patient and physician, a bond that many don't realize goes both ways. However, no one among us is irreplaceable, and we are fortunate to continue to recruit high quality physicians

Sharon and I will be remaining in Oakland, but at this major juncture in our lives we wish to thank the entire community, our friends, our sons' teachers, my partners, and other physicians, hospital employees, and my patients for all of your support.

To the Editor:

Congratulations to Garrett County's own "Everyday Scientist" for attracting the scorn and ire of Penn State's climate scientists (ref. to recent letter to the editor in The Republican). However, Dr. Raymond Najjar's recent attack on the credentials and motives of Dr. Thomas Sheahen are little more than the yelps of a dying cabal. It is the credibility of Dr. Najjar and his colleagues such as Michael Mann that we should be questioning. These gentlemen have given us the infamous and now discredited "hockey stick" model of global temperature over time that managed to ignore the inconvenient truth of the medieval warm period. It's difficult to trust the future predictions of these models when they can't even get the past right.

Dr. Najjar's paternalistic attitude of "trust me, I'm the expert" presumes an infallibility to which few aspire and even fewer possess. His assertion that the "science is settled" flies in the face of recent analysis showing that the climate sensitivity to carbon dioxide is likely only a fraction of what it was previously thought to be, and that the resulting effects on global temperatures are thus less as well (Science 2011; 334: 1385-1388).

In truth, science is never settled. It's a process of discovery and refinement that proceeds in leaps and bounds. Formal peer review is a critical component for identifying work that has been performed or interpreted incorrectly, not a weapon to accelerate publication of work from like-minded scientists and reject work from skeptics. Good science takes time and open debate rather than a rush to judgment and thence to governmental policy.

Garrett County is lucky to have Dr. Sheahen, a very bright and capable scientist, in our midst to help us understand the way things work.

Charles Buffington, MD

To the Editor:

I thank Jeff Sincell for his kind words and supportive position regarding my December 22 column ("Ask the Everyday Scientist").

Raymond Najjar of Penn State University also wrote, blasting my December 8 column, "ClimateGate 2.0." Najjar said I was misinforming readers, conveying the notion that I deliberately provided wrong information. That's a serious charge.

I will ignore Najjar's attempt to belittle my scientific background, and instead examine two scientific points he raises:

•The cause of CO_2 increase – I actually think that most of the additional CO_2 in the atmosphere (since pre-industrial times) is a result of burning fossil fuels. My phrase "plausible, but not guaranteed" is precisely how a scientist should characterize such an assertion. It really is the best choice among several possibilities. The matching of the O_2 decline with the CO_2 increase enhances that plausibility, but with O_2 being 500 times more plentiful than CO_2, the measurements are up against the noise level. Persuasive, but not guaranteed.

•The contribution of CO_2 – We agree that the greenhouse effect is mostly due to H_2O vapor. The pre-industrial amount of CO_2 has always been a smaller contributor. However, that concentration (280 ppm) was already enough to absorb over 90% of all the infrared radiation that CO_2 could possibly absorb. The additional CO_2 contribution (up to about 380 ppm today) adds only a small percentage. Hence my term "slight" is accurate regarding the CO_2 that mankind has added.

Najjar postulates "if CO_2 were to be completely removed. ..." Completely? That conjecture isn't relevant to planet Earth, where plant life requires CO_2.

Get rid of the CO_2 mankind has contributed (or double mankind's contribution), and the temperature will change about 1 degree. That's the world of infrared absorption, a field that is quite familiar to me. To argue for greater temperature variation requires estimating feedback and computer models, which I mentioned in the original article.

Najjar calls the human role "dominant"; my term would be "minor." By no means is this just a matter of "some details to be worked out." There is major scientific disagreement – with serious policy implications.

Observations and measurements, not computer models and theories, are the right way to approach a scientific issue. The best observations are the satellite images, which see the entire Earth, and that record (now 1/3-century long) doesn't show the warming predicted on a CO_2 basis.

The climate always changes, and we must live with it.

Cordially yours,
Tom Sheahen

Senator Milkulski announced $1.9 million federal funds for Randolph Lake "operation and maintenance." Milkulski affirmed commitment to keep "Maryland waterways" a priority.

Maryland waterways – except in our corner of Maryland.

Deep Creek Lake is not eligible for federal funds. The state provides no maintenance or operation monies, hence, why are there no programs for shoreline protection, aquatic grass control, or sediment removal?

Lake property owners pay for management through buffer strip permit fees and pay many other taxes and fees, like the flush tax for water that flows "down state."

In 2011, DNR informed stakeholders there are no waterway improvement funds for the lake. Yet, since 1965 we have contributed to this trust fund by paying an excise tax for every boat purchased in the county.

DNR staff informed property owners that we have the option of taxing ourselves to pay for sediment removal or "hold a bake sale." Yet, DNR acknowledges, "Deep Creek Lake has been accumulating sediment since the day the dam formed the lake." A sediment removal fund should have been created in 1925. According to DNR vision, lake maintenance will fall onto the financial shoulders of current property owners, not even lake users and beneficiaries.

We urgently need a remedy for lack of investment. Action is imperative. A DNR staff person recently referred to the lake as a "big stormwater run-off holding pond" – hardly a concept to attract tourists.

In 2010, Friends of Deep Creek Lake recommended creation of a lake restoration fund, a private-public venture led by the county as our best hope for a healthy future for our aging lake. Even the chamber consultant on tourism promotion made a comparable recommendation.

Things are changing at the county level. After six months of effort, the commissioners for the first time ever committed funds to the lake – $60,000 for the sediment study. This is 30% of what the county receives annually just from the buffer strip permit fees.

There's a lot of talk about the lake as our economic engine. We hope in 2012 there is a move from words to action. Both the business community and the county need to join lake property owners at the table, creating a watershed improvement plan and leading a serious assessment of the real investment needed to assure the future of Deep Creek Lake.

How much is the lake worth?

To the Editor:

Garrett County – Maryland's playground. But what is prosperous to some is damaging our home. The board of education is closing schools because of budget issues. One reason is that the enrollment over the past 10 years has dropped 20% and is expected to drop another 20% in the next 8 years. Why is school enrollment dropping? Because Garrett County's focus on tourism has created an unfavorable environment for young families.

Certain things happen when tourism is the top priority. First, land and home prices rise. It's great for real estate agents and certain business owners. But what starts sweet turns sour when people who live and work in GC can't afford to buy a home. Second-home buyers and speculators think land and home prices are amazing, based on their metropolitan incomes, but residents can't live here on the average GC income.

The result? Stay and live in a mobile home, or move. Morgantown, Uniontown, and Cumberland are areas where families can find similar, or even lower, housing prices, but make a better income.

Second, job creation is focused on the hospitality industry. It's difficult to raise a family on waitressing, housekeeping, or janitorial jobs. Professionals have few employment options in Garrett County, but there are plenty of cashier and service jobs.

The result? Take a job in the service industry making minimum wage or move out of GC. Several towns just outside the borders of GC offer far better employment options for professionals.

Third, when homes are sold to vacationers and retirees, the number of full-time younger families drops. Second-home owners pay property taxes, but their income taxes go to their "home" states and counties. Retirees paid the majority of their income taxes while they lived and worked in larger metropolitan areas.

The result? Like school enrollment, county income drops. The county finds other means to obtain income, which has already led to the current property tax rate. (It was supposed to be temporary). To make up for lost income, the county must close schools.

When families move, school enrollment drops. Isn't it time to make residents the priority rather than tourists? Isn't it time to recruit other industries that can support families and match the currently high real estate prices? Isn't it time to give families a reason to live in Garrett County rather than just visit for the weekend?

My New Year's resolution is to be a kinder gentler writer, so...

It is with great enthusiasm that I congratulate Mitt Romney on his spectacular Iowa win! Those courageous Iowans, especially the eight that pushed him over the edge against the ultra-right forces, are to be applauded. His .0006% margin of victory should be the beginning of a ground swell that will sweep across the nation.

To the Editor:

I want to inform readers about a story in the Baltimore Sun regarding mineral-rights leasing for industrial shale gas development in Garrett and Allegany counties. The article, titled "Gas leasing in Western Maryland spurs calls for reform (http://www.baltimoresun.com/features/green/bs-gr-gas-leasing-20111231,0,1260181.story)," details local landowners' complaints that leasing agents misled them to get their leases, and their concerns about the consequences of drilling.

This story follows news earlier this week about leasing practices by Chesapeake, the nation's leading natural gas developer, which routinely uses "shell" companies in Michigan, to make it easier to renege on mineral leases (http://www.reuters.com/article/2011/12/28/us-energy-giant-idUSTRE7BR0G420111228).

Beyond the obvious lessons that landowners can take from these stories, perhaps the most telling information can be found in the sole comments on the Sun story, from Beth Cooper, a Pennsylvania resident living amidst rampant gas development. Ms. Cooper's warning:

"Maryland, listen to me. Do not sign these leases. Keep shale gas drilling as far away from you as you possibly can. No amount of money is worth this. I live in southwestern Pennsylvania in the heart of the Marcellus shale region. Drilling has been going on here for several years. Streams are already contaminated from spills, dumping, and from seepage from several-acre-large 'wastewater impoundments' which are filled with toxic fluids. Our air is contaminated too – They put 'misters' on these impoundments to spray the fluids into the air to get the chemicals to evaporate out. The chemicals go into the air and we breathe it. Compressor stations – facilities that push the gas through the pipelines – are also a permanent part of the mix. Massive amounts of toxic fumes comes (sic) off of these as well. We already have residents whose air has tested positive for chemicals like benzene, toluene, and styrene – and so has their blood and urine. Pets and livestock have died – cancers in very young animals are common. People are already sick.

"As far as jobs go, most of the jobs are going to transient oil and gas workers from Texas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas – not to the locals.

"A number of us are trying to move to other, safer states – states with governments that aren't in collusion with the industry. Don't put yourselves in the same situation that we're in."

This should be food for thought as we make our New Year's resolutions in the mountain counties.

Maryland has implemented an Internet-based Maryland Resident Influenza Tracking Survey, a first in the nation. This tool is designed to enhance the state's existing influenza surveillance by monitoring influenza-like illnesses among residents who may not seek medical care.

Those who choose to volunteer may sign up via the Internet to receive weekly online surveys where they can report any flu-like symptoms for the previous week. Interested Maryland residents who want to learn more about influenza or to sign up are invited to log on to www.dhmh.maryland.gov and click on Seasonal Flu Information under the Hot Topics. On that page there is information about influenza and a heading "Be a Flu Fighter." The link http://flusurvey.dhmh.md.gov/ will take users directly to the Maryland Resident Influenza Tracking Survey.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

We got over a foot of snow, making it impossible for us to find the new West Virginia University dog collar that Jackson was so proud of after he got it as a Christmas present. But it was a little loose, so when he was outside and dashing here and there as he always does, he lost it. It is buried, so that it won't reappear until mid-spring, which is a long way from now. January is the month that I often feel like flying away from Bittinger and Garrett County.

Speaking of flying away or not flying away, this week there was another strange event in one Arkansas small town. Its ground was covered with dead black birds like last year. Some people think they might have panicked at the fireworks, so they flew into buildings. Many of the dead birds, at least in the news photographs, are one of my favorite birds – the red-winged blackbird.

We are facing another whole year of relentless Super PAC negative attack ads, which are now an important part of our election process. It is not any kind of positive message that most candidates run on.

One example of how peculiar our retail businesses deal with gift cards: Close to $60 billion of holiday spending was for gift cards. They are often never used, so the retail business sold them and often doesn't exchange them for any products. So it is pure profit. There is also minimal labor required, so it means fewer jobs. Another advantage is that if a person gets a $25 gift card, the retail business has virtually nothing cheaper than $30, so the buyer pitches in his own $5 to get anything for that gift card. Well, that is a very strange way to conduct business and a strange choice for consumers.

I completely lost track of what day of the week today is. I guess that New Year's Eve fell on a Saturday, then New Year's was on Sunday. Lots of government offices are closed today, Monday. But it seems to me that today must be Tuesday. I'm just all messed up. But it's right that yesterday was Sunday and I watched a Steelers game.

I found out this morning who they will play next Sunday in their wild-card game – the Denver Broncos. That means that it's Tebow, and I guess maybe God is on their side. I hope that Saint Roberto Clemente will put good words in God's ear about the Steelers, because I believe that he does have the ear of God. He lived and died as God commanded all his children, helping the least ones and most suffering people. And what else does Tebow do besides flaunt kneeling in prayer as a publicity stunt. Maybe if he loses this weekend's game against the Steelers, he will quit football and run for office.

It is hard to picture a more dreary New Year's Eve. It is so damp and foggy. I remember one New Year's Eve in my senior year of high school when I went to a party at Doug Fratz's lake house, and as the evening progressed we were not aware of how much snow was falling. But when we headed home and got onto Rock Lodge Road, there was several feet of snow in the road. We did not make it up the first hill toward the Glotfelty Cemetery, and we were stuck, big-time.

For some pitiful reason, I chose to wear no socks. I guess it was a fashion decision. It started to get too cold in the car to stand it, so we chose to walk back to the home of Donald Glotfelty, but there was no one home because his wife Cathy was at the hospital delivering their baby. Luckily, the door was not locked, but it wasn't very warm, and I remember huddling at the radiator. I have a hazy memory of some kind of involvement of a snowmobile.

I really feel for my parents while their brood was in their teens. We were not very cautious. And if I was aware in the wee hours of a New Year's in a massive snowstorm that my daughters did not come home, I would be frantic with worry.

But it did give us some good skiing. That first weekend of the New Year in 1971, a male friend from Cumberland came up to ski with me. Maybe it was 1970, because Bill was a star wide receiver at Allegany High School, but that suddenly ended when he was a bit too reckless as he was going down Boulder Run.

He suddenly pushed me and yelled, "Ski, Joan!" I should have replied, "Slow down!" because after I turned a corner, I saw Bill on the ground after a very bad fall. How bad was that his one lower leg bone was sticking out from his skin. That was the worst injury I was ever involved in but did not experience.

When the Ski Patrol came with the sled to take him down, I took my red plaid poncho, which was a bit of an odd choice for ski-wear, and put it over him. It happened that my mother was in the parking lot. I guess she was there to pick me up, but she saw my distinctive poncho on the sled. Even if I was not the one injured, she still had to do another (way too frequent) trip to the emergency room to get care for a guy she barely knew. It was a long day, and not a great day for Bill, with an injury bad enough to end his football career.

Exactly 10 years ago today, my husband and I separated. That was when my life turned very bad, even worse than the dreadful few years after my brain aneurism, which all but destroyed my carefully built life – my career and my family life.

Since I graduated from the University of Maryland, I have several times reinvented my life. So when problems in my personal life came or I needed a change in my working life, it was easy to find an appealing new adventure to pursue. Unfortunately, those options are no longer possible for me now. So here I am, right where I started.

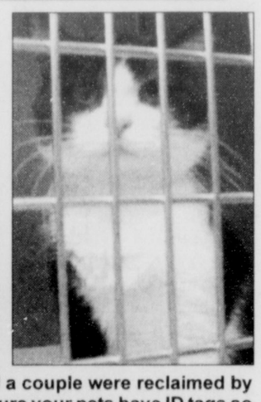
Adorable Adoptables



IN NEED OF HOMES this week at the Garrett County Animal Shelter, left to right, are a large male longhaired black Lab who was picked up along Penn Cove Road as a stray with no ID tags, a very quiet male Australian shepherd who was also picked up without ID, a collie-Lab mix named Casey who was given up by her owner, and Rascal, a very friendly 3-year-old male cat who was given up by his owner. "These and other cats and dogs are available at the local shelter," said a Garrett County Humane Society spokesperson. "Last week several dogs and cats were adopted, and a couple were reclaimed by their owners. Please make sure your pets have ID tags so you can be contacted immediately if they are brought into the shelter. Several dogs were taken out to rescues by HART. Free straw for outside dog houses is available at the shelter, courtesy of the GCHS." For more information, persons may call the shelter at 301-334-3553. Located along Oakland Sand Run Road, the county-operated facility is open Monday through Friday. Photos courtesy of the GC Humane Society, a nonprofit volunteer organization.

Strength in Numbers

One snowflake alone does not make enough snow to sled on...it takes millions. We have often heard that there is strength in numbers; when we work together we can accomplish more than we can alone. Working together, we can bring about many good and caring changes in the lives of those around us. When we worship God as a congregation, we grow in faith as we support one another. Come together at your local house of worship; find God's strength in numbers.

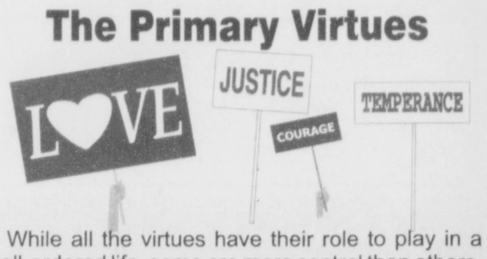
The Primary Virtues



While all the virtues have their role to play in a well-ordered life, some are more central than others. Aristotle thought that justice was the central virtue, at least in part because we are social animals and the virtue of justice concerned the reciprocity between members of society. Justice requires that we give to each other their fair share and not demand more for ourselves than is due us. But courage is also central to the moral life, because it requires courage to say and do the right thing, especially when doing the right thing may entail something fearful or dangerous. Courage is more than just doing one's duty in times of war or standing up to bullies. It is doing the right thing no matter what the circumstances. Temperance or self-control is another primary virtue, because without it we may be moved to act solely for pleasure, and not out of a concern to do what is right. A person who cannot control himself, whether in connection with anger, fear, or pleasure, is bound to be set adrift by his or her passions and by the fleeting emotions of the moment. While all of these virtues are praised throughout the Bible and are probably universal, there can be little doubt that Judeo-Christian morality puts love at the center. If we could just love each other everything else in the moral realm should fall into place.

"Jesus replied: 'Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind.' This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like it: 'Love your neighbor as yourself.' All the Law and the Prophets hang on these two commandments."

Strange BUT TRUE

• It was American essayist Logan Pearsall Smith who made the following sage observation: It is the wretchedness of being rich that you have to live with rich people.

• The word "avocado" is derived from a South American Indian word that means "testicle."

• When the miniskirt was introduced to the world in the 1960s, the reaction was swift and often harsh. Women who wore them in the Malagasy Republic were sentenced to 10 days in jail. Congolese police arrested 300 women for wearing the new style, and Egyptian law branded the garment as indecent. In Caracas, Venezuela, the clergy got involved, churches admonished women to give up their minis or "be condemned to hell." Perhaps the seeming overreaction wasn't entirely unjustified, considering the effect the miniskirt had in some places. It was reported that two women wearing minis caused a two-hour traffic jam in downtown Cairo, and a 63-year-old man in Rio De Janeiro was sentenced to three days in jail after biting the legs of the miniskirt-clad woman seated next to him on a bus.

• The first animated color TV commercial was broadcast in 1949, and it was created by none other than venerable children's book author Dr. Seuss. The ad was for the Ford Motor Company.

• Historians say that Abraham Lincoln had a shrill, high-pitched voice rather than the deep and sonorous tones we usually hear when the 16th president is portrayed in film and television.

•Those who study such things say that Americans' favorite T-shirt color is white, followed by blue and black.

• On Jan. 9, 1493, Christopher Columbus, sailing near the Dominican Republic, sees three "mermaids" and describes them as "not half as beautiful as they are painted." They were in reality manatees. Mythical mermaids have existed in seafaring cultures since the time of the ancient Greeks.

• On Jan. 14, 1639, in Hartford, Conn., the first constitution in the American colonies, the "Fundamental Orders," is adopted. The Fundamental Orders declared that "the foundation of authority is in the free consent of the people."

• On Jan. 10, 1901, a drilling derrick at Spindletop Hill near Beaumont, Texas, produces an enormous gusher of crude oil, signaling the advent of the American oil industry. The geyser flowed at an initial rate of approximately 100,000 barrels a day and took nine days to cap.

• On Jan. 15, 1919, two million gallons of fiery hot molasses floods the streets of Boston, killing 21 people and a dozen horses. The molasses burst from a 58-foot-high tank in the heart of the city. An 8-foot-high wave of molasses swept away freight cars, knocked over the local firehouse and pushed over the support beams for the elevated train line.

• On Jan. 13, 1939, Arthur "Doc" Barker is shot and killed while trying to escape from Alcatraz Prison in San Francisco Bay. Barker, of the notorious "Bloody Barkers" gang, was spotted on the rock-strewn shore of the island after climbing over the walls and tying pieces of wood together into a makeshift raft.

• On Jan. 11, 1973, the owners of America's 24 major-league baseball teams vote to allow teams in the American League to use a "designated pinch-hitter" that could bat for the pitcher, while still allowing the pitcher to stay in the game.

• On Jan. 12, 1984, a panel overseeing the restoration of the Great Pyramids in Egypt abandons modern construction techniques in favor of the method employed by the ancient Egyptians. Restorers stopped using mortar and adopted the system of interlocking blocks practiced by the original pyramid builders.

Collecting

by Larry Cox

Q: I have an unusual family heirloom that was given to my great grandparents when they were married in Buffalo, N.Y., in June 1900. It is a sea-green "pillow vase" painted and signed by Edward Diers. I've seen a duplicate in a pottery book, but no value was given. I don't want to sell it since it's an heirloom, but I am nevertheless curious about its value. My neighbor is a pottery collector and thinks it could be worth as much as $1,000 because of its unique design. -- Barbara, Yonkers, N.Y.

A: This is yet another reason why you should never put much stock in the opinions of neighbors -- even those who think they are experts -- when it comes to antiques and collectibles. I contacted several certified appraisers and they seem to agree that your "pillow vase" by Edward Diers could be worth as much as $30,000.

Q: Several years ago I bought a framed picture at a tag sale of Louisa May Alcott's "Orchard House" in Concord. I would like to know its value and if a library would benefit in having it. -- Cynthia, Barre, Vt.

A: I recommend you contact the curator of the Louisa May Alcott "Orchard House" museum, 399 Lexington Road, Concord, Massachusetts 01742.

Q: My mom recently gave me a two-gallon crock that she thinks is at least a 100 years old. It has a white glazed surface with a large "2" and Monmouth Pottery Company, Monmouth, ILL" imprinted on the side. I have been offered $150 for it, but think it might be worth more. -- Laura, Hondo, Texas

A: Take the $150. Your crock is worth about $75, according to the "Antique Trader Stoneware and Blue and White Pottery Price Guide" edited by Kyle Husfloen. I recently saw a similar crock made by the same company sell at auction for $45.

ARMONIA CELESTE GROUP TO PERFORM – The second concert in the "Before Bach" series being presented by Mountainside Baroque will take place at on Sunday, Jan. 15, beginning at 4 p.m. at the Shrine of Saints Peter and Paul, 125 Fayette Street, Cumberland. This program will feature Armonia Celeste, the group pictured. Tenor Stephen Caldwell (Rutgers University, Princeton Singers), baritone Ryan Mullaney (Our Lady of the Mountains Catholic Church, Temple University) and bass Les Anders (St. Clements Anglo-Catholic Church Choir of Philadelphia, Princeton Singers) will join the three high voices of Armonia. See story for details.

"Before Bach" Series Continues In Cumberland

The second concert in the "Before Bach" series being presented by Mountainside Baroque will take place on Sunday, Jan. 15, beginning at 4 p.m. at the Shrine of Saints Peter and Paul, 125 Fayette Street, Cumberland.

Reflecting the German heritage of the Shrine, Sunday's program will highlight music from the 17th century Roman German College, the most famous musical establishment in Rome at that time, a spokesperson said. The German College hosted a wealth of the era's most renowned musicians, notably Giacomo Carissimi, whose music will form the nucleus of this concert.

Titled "Benedicte Dominus" (Bless the Lord), the performance will feature members of the ensemble Armonia Celeste. Tenor Stephen Caldwell (Rutgers University, Princeton Singers), baritone Ryan Mullaney (Our Lady of the Mountains Catholic Church, Temple University) and bass Les Anders (St. Clements Anglo-Catholic Church Choir of Philadelphia, Princeton Singers) will join the three high voices of Armonia. Carissimi's oratorio Jepthe will be the concert centerpiece.

The instruments used in this performance will be lute, theorbo, harpsichord, viola da gamba, and baroque triple harp. Played by Paula Fagerberg of Atlanta, the harp, with its three sets of parallel strings, is a copy of the Barberini harp, dating from 1635. One of the largest and most elaborately decorated harps of the 17th century, it was often featured in paintings of the time, the spokesperson said.

While in the area, Armonia Celeste, an ensemble centered in Texas, will also be recording a CD at St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Cumberland. Malcolm Bruno, a producer and specialist from Wales, will oversee the recording.

Overflow parking in the St. Paul's Lutheran Church parking lot across the street will be allowed for this performance, the spokesperson noted.

The next concert in the Before Bach series will be a chamber program of court and theater music from England, France, Italy, and Germany for voices, violins and lute. It will take place Sunday, Feb. 18, at the Allegany Museum (3 Pershing Street), beginning at 4 p.m.

The final concert of the 2011-2012 series will be a program of music from Shakespearian England's "Golden Age," featuring the Eastman Consort of Viols, on April 15.

Mountainside Baroque, directed by Ryan Mullaney of Our Lady of the Mountains Catholic Church, and lutenist Lyle Nordstrom, a recently retired professor of music from the University of North Texas, is a new collective organization dedicated to bringing early music to western Maryland. St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Our Lady of the Mountains Catholic Church, Emmanuel Episcopal Church, and the Allegany Arts Council are supporters of the series.

Farming On The Mountaintop

Tri-State Hay, Pasture Meeting Planned At GC

The Tri-State Hay & Pasture Conference will be held on Thursday, Jan. 19, at Garrett College, starting at 8:30 a.m. with registration. Certified crop advisor and nutrient management certification credits will be offered.

Registration for the conference will be $15 per person by Friday, Jan. 13, and $20 after the 13th. Checks should be made payable to Garrett EAC and sent to Hay & Pasture Conference, University of Maryland Extension, 1916 Maryland Highway, Suite A, Mtn. Lake Park, MD 21550.

Presentations at this year's conference will challenge farmers to think about their farming operations and how forages can be part of their future.

According to a spokesperson, questions to consider are: Have you thought about what your farm operation will look like in five to ten years? What is the mission or purpose of your farm? What are you in the business to do? Have you evaluated your resources – land, forages, water, buildings, fencing, livestock, and labor?

"If you are in the forage business (grow hay, silage or pasture) you need to understand how plants grow and how soil type and properties impact forage production and grazing systems," the spokesperson said.

Ways to grow and harvest more forage from the same land, including evaluating soil fertility and selection of forage species, will also be covered. The fertility management of pastures and hay fields is a continuous process that is often only a consideration of producers during establishment, but managing fertility for the maintenance of the stand and continued productivity is important.

The advantages and disadvantages of pure stands and mixtures of grass/forbs/legumes will also be discussed. Proper management results in profitable yields and high quality forage. The end result of mismanagement is low, unprofitable yields and low quality forage.

These are highlights of two presentations to be made by Bob Hendershot, retired Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) state grassland conservationist and state Grazing Lands Conservation Initiative (GLCI) coordinator in Ohio. Hendershot provided leadership and technical guidance to conservation programs that use grasses and other forages. He was named the nation's Outstanding Pastureland Conservationist by NRCS in 1999. He was inducted into the Ohio State Conservationist Hall of Fame in 1998 and was presented the NRCS Regional Grazing Lands Conservation Initiative Support Award in 1996.

Hendershot has a pasture-based sheep operation near Circleville, Ohio, and occasionally grazes stocker cattle. He has served two terms on the board of directors of the American Forage and Grassland Council and is the immediate past president. He helped develop the Pasture for Profit Grazing Schools, the Ohio Forage for Horses and the Equine Environmental and Liability Awareness Program, and continues as an instructor and pasture walk leader.

He was presented the Ben Stinner Memorial Award in recognition of his excellent contribution to sustainable agriculture in 2009 by the Innovative Farmers of Ohio. He has been described as a knowledgeable and dynamic speaker who can assist interested operators in improving their forage management.

Other speakers will include retired University of Maryland Extension forage specialist Les Vough discussing the proper methods and problems with balage systems; Dr. Ed Rayburn with West Virginia University Extension discussing selection for earlier conception and greater calf sale weights in pasture systems; Jeff Semler from Washington County discussing dairy heifer grazing; and Jordan Milewski with new New Holland's Hay and Forage Division discussing and demonstrating proper adjustment of mower conditioners and balers.

For more information or to obtain the complete program agenda and registration materials, persons may contact the Garrett County Extension office at 301-334-6960. Information is also available online at http://garrett.umd.edu/Agnr/TriStateHayfolder/index.fm.

Surgeons there awaited his arrival and repaired a badly swollen and crushed ankle. Other than a lot of skin burns full of gravel, he is in pretty fair condition as he recuperates at home.

Injured Laker Squad Manages To Record JUCO Victory At Dundalk

Despite the fact that Garrett College men's basketball coach Dennis Gibson had only seven players dressed – and two of them limping – going into a game at Community College of Baltimore County at Dundalk last night, his squad nonetheless emerged with a 74-63 Maryland JUCO victory. It was the fifth straight win for the Lakers following a holiday layoff, lifting their overall record to 9-5.

After a lackluster first half, GC freshman Matt Gibson sparked a surge early in the second half by draining three straight 3-point buckets to help build a lead that the Lakers would never relinquish.

Garrett scored only nine points in the first 11 minutes of action, but rallied to pare Dundalk's lead to just three points, 31-28, by halftime.

"Our shooting was poor in the first half, but we ended up pulling down 21 offensive rebounds," Coach Gibson said.

Matt Gibson and Armond Perez each scored 19 points to lead the Lakers in scoring, and Perez also had seven of those aforementioned offensive boards. Patrice Tekeda, who has not played a lot for the Lakers so far this season, combined with Perez for 15 rebounds.

Antonio Butler recorded 16 points and three steals, and Din Moore also reached double figures with 11 points.

Coach Gibson noted the play of Gibson and Tekeda in particular.

"After being ice cold in the first half, Matt stepped up and hit the three straight 3-pointers," he said, "and for a guy who hasn't played much this season, Patrice really played well inside against (Alfonzo) Hawkins."

Hawkins led the Lions' scoring with 19 points, Antonio Graham hit 17, and Derek Saunders netted 15.

Guards Moore and Butler were both limping because of injury, but obviously did not let their injuries get in the way of their play.

"Normally these guys would not have played, but we only had five other healthy guys," Gibson said. "We really needed the bodies, and they did the job. I'm very proud of all seven of them."

The Lakers will play again this Saturday afternoon at Baltimore City CC, will host Montgomery County/Takoma Park on Monday (7 p.m. tipoff), and play at Essex CC next Wednesday.

Southern Overtakes Allegany After Slip In Snowflake Tourney

After suffering a defeat by Trinity, 47-28, in the Snowflake Classic (Wednesday, Dec. 28) in Oakland, the Southern High School varsity girls' basketball team took a dramatic win by the narrowest of margins, 31-30, hosting Allegany on Wednesday.

Jackie Halapy's 15 points helped Trinity pull away in the second half to beat Southern.

The Rams were still in the game after the first, trailing 15-9, but Trinity began to build on its lead as the game progressed, taking an eight-point cushion into the break.

Trinity's defense smothered Southern in the second half, allowing only eight points in the third and just two in the fourth, for the 18-point win.

Mandy Sweitzer led Southern with eight points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Lindsay Brady and Mandy Sweitzer scored eight points to lead Southern over Allegany.

Lindsie Linaburg had a game high 11 points for Allegany, which led 26-23 going into the fourth quarter.

The Rams struggled from the field through the first period, managing to score just six points.

It was the Campers who went cold in the second quarter, however, allowing the Rams to take a three-point lead into the half.

Both teams tallied 13 field goals, and the difference came at the foul line, although neither team could boast disciplined shooting from the line. Southern went 4 for 9; Allegany 1 for 8.

Southern won the jayvee game 32-24, with Holly Weissgerber and Alisha Roth both scoring 11 points. Briana Benko had eight for Allegany.

Southern, now 6-3 overall and 4-1 in AMAC play, is set to host Bishop Walsh on Monday. That game is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m.

The first loss came to St. Paul, which beat the Huskies 39-29, in the first day of competition. The second was a 73-30 loss to host team South Hagerstown.

Following the tournament were more woes for the now 0-8 Northern squad, which fell 55-20 at Hampshire on Wednesday.

Against St. Paul, Northern found itself ahead 28-25 entering the final quarter, but dried up offensively, scoring just one point over the final seven minutes of regulation.

Northern's Kristen Rayner scored nine points and was named to the All-Tournament team after scoring 14 points. Kiersten Butler finished with seven rebounds and six points and Caroline Bergstrom had eight boards and five points. Allison Yommer added nine points.

It was Tayana Stewart who led South Hagerstown past the Huskies in their second tournament matchup. Stewart scored 23 points in her team's route of Northern.

The Huskies struggled from the field, digging themselves a 17-6 hole at the end of the first. By halftime South Hagerstown had extended the lead to 31.

Rayner accounted for nearly half of Northern's offensive production with 14 points scored.

Coaches Rank Huskies Margroff And McFarland As Year's Best

SYDNEY MCFARLAND

HALEY MARGROFF

Two standouts of last year's prolific Northern High School girls' soccer team – Sydney McFarland and Haley Margroff – were recently named the girls' soccer offensive and defensive players of the year, respectively, after a vote of area coaches was taken.

McFarland and Margroff, two of four captains on Coach John Milbourne's Husky team, helped power Northern to a 13-3-1 season. The team was crowned the unanimous area champion and had a perfect 8-0-0 record in the Appalachian Mountain Athletic Conference.

The 13 wins were one shy of the single-season school record, set by the 2007 Northern team, which went 14-3-1.

The season ended one game shy of the state tournament in a 3-2 penalty-kicking loss to Brunswick in the 1A West Region championship game.

McFarland and Margroff will receive their awards at the 64th annual Dapper Dan Awards Banquet on Sunday, Jan. 29, at the Ali Ghan Shrine Club. The dinner begins at 4 p.m. and the awards program at 5.

McFarland, a senior striker, earned the best offensive player nod after leading the Northern offense to 48 goals in 14 games, including 34 in just eight Appalachian Mountain Athletic Conference contests.

The Area's Offensive Player of the Year award has gone to a Northern player for five straight years, the other winners being Katelyn Fratz (2010) and Adria Graham (2009, 2008, 2007).

McFarland, also named the AMAC's Offensive Player of the Year, finished third in the area in scoring and was runner-up in the conference.

"Sydney is a left-footed wing who excelled in placing extreme amounts of pressure on defenses," said Milbourne.

"Not only did Sydney possess exceptional speed and an exceptional shot, she was very adept at crossing the ball into the space in front of the net.

"She possessed the ability to accurately place corner kicks into dangerous territory and gave us numerous scoring chances in addition to leading us in scoring."

A four-year varsity player, McFarland scored 15 goals and assisted on seven others for 37 points. She boasted an average of 2.31 scores per game.

In the eight AMAC games, she had eight goals, tied for the conference lead with four assists, and had 20 points and a 2.50 average.

McFarland has been one of the top scorers in the area for several years. She scored 50 goals and assisted on 31 others in the last three seasons.

As a junior, she had 16 goals and 16 assists in 15 games, and ranked fourth in the area with a 3.20 average.

She had a career high 19 goals and eight assists in 16 games as a sophomore, finishing sixth in the area with a 2.87 average.

McFarland is fifth in the area in career assists with 31, and sixth in single-season assists, having had 16 in 2010.

McFarland plans to major in a physician's assistant program in college.

Defensive award winner Haley Margroff established herself as one of the area's toughest to score on throughout the 2011 season. The two-year varsity player and team captain's performance was a huge factor in the Huskies' allowing only 13 goals through 17 matchups. Northern finished the regular season shutting out six straight opponents. The team had 10 shutouts in all, giving up one goal or less in 14 of 17 games.

"Haley is an exceptionally tough defender who played an attacking style of defense in the high slot," explained Milbourne. "She was instrumental in providing us with one of the toughest defenses in the area.

"Her ability to step up and destroy an attack with her hard-nosed style of defense was second to none. And her toughness also made her a target player in our corner kick scheme."

The Huskies outscored their opponents 34-3 in eight games in winning the AMAC championship.

Margroff was also voted this year's AMAC Defensive Player of the Year.

"Haley almost never left a game and would frequently play all 80 minutes of high pressure defense, sometimes playing into the attack and even scoring," Milbourne said of Margroff, who had two goals and an assist.

"She is one of the best defenders I have ever had the privilege to coach."

Margroff, the first Northern player to be voted Defensive Player of the Year, is a member of the National Honor Society. She plans on majoring in biomedical engineering in college.

Those interested in Dapper Dan Banquet ticket information may call the Original Sports Shoppe at 301-722-5490.

Southern Takes Second Place In Bowling Tourney

The Holiday Baker Tournament of the Allegany County Inter-Scholastic Bowling League was recently hosted by Rainbow Lanes. Of the 12 area high school teams that competed in the double-elimination contest, Southern High's representative claimed a second place finish, while Fort Hill took the title.

Matches consisted of five-member teams rolling two frames per game, in a best of three setup. Prior to the competition, each school rolled three games to determine its seed. A team was eliminated when it had lost two matches.

In the tournament, tied for fifth place were Allegany and Frankfort, followed by Hampshire, which took fourth place. Coming in at the third slot was Mountain Ridge. Southern ended with its second place finish after dropping the final game to the champion Fort Hill team.

Southern won the first game in that matchup, but Fort Hill claimed the final two and the top spot.

For its victory, Fort Hill will receive a traveling plaque at the Showcase Tournament in February.

The inter-scholastic bowling league has expressed its thanks to the following sponsors: American Legion Post 13, Hampshire Bowling Boosters, Armstrong Insurance, Glass Service of Cumberland, Regina Hamm (CPA), Swearengen Construction, and Mike's Auto Repair. The league also thanks C.P. Sines and Kevin Mansfield of Rainbow Lanes for hosting the tournament.

PINK-OUT NIGHT will be held at Northern High School this Friday, Jan. 6, when the NHS varsity boys' basketball team will host county rival Southern in the first encounter of the season between the Huskies and the Rams. In addition to the game, there will be raffles of various items, some of which are pictured above, plus a free-throw shoot-out held at halftime, with all proceeds donated to the Breast Cancer Awareness Foundation. Tip-offs for Friday are 6 p.m. for the junior varsity contest and 7:30 for the varsity clash.

New Year's Resolution: Quit Smoking; Tobacco Cessation Classes Available

by Mike Wilburn, Garrett County Health Department

The thing about the New Year is that it gives us a chance to start with a clean slate. Many people set lifestyle goals by choosing to save money, to eat healthier, begin an exercise program, etc.

Another way to improve your health is to eliminate things that are bad for you. Everyone knows that smoking is not a healthy choice. Why not try to quit and improve your health and save money at the same time?

Because of all the risks associated with smoking, many people want to quit. But how can you be successful? There is no certain method that works for everyone; some people think it is easier to quit all at once, while others prefer to cut back gradually.

Whatever way you may decide, here are some tips for quitting. First, make a list of why you want to quit – "What's in it for me." You can use the list for motivation. Second, try to stay away from other smokers as much as you can for a while. Being around other smokers, inhaling the secondhand smoke will only make it harder. Third, find something else to do instead of smoking. Instead of smoking, take a short walk; the urge will pass.

Another way to increase your chances of quitting is to join a tobacco cessation class at the Garrett County Health Department. There are two upcoming classes. The first is scheduled to start on Tuesday, Jan. 10, at 5:30 p.m. at the rescue squad hall in Friendsville. The second is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 11, at the Garrett County Health Department in Oakland.

The program is free, and financial assistance for cessation aids is available. The Health Department also offers individual counseling to pregnant women who are interested in quitting

If you are thinking about quitting, get in touch with me at the Health Department by calling 301-334-7730 or 301-895-3111, or e-mailing mwilburn@dhmh.state.md.us.

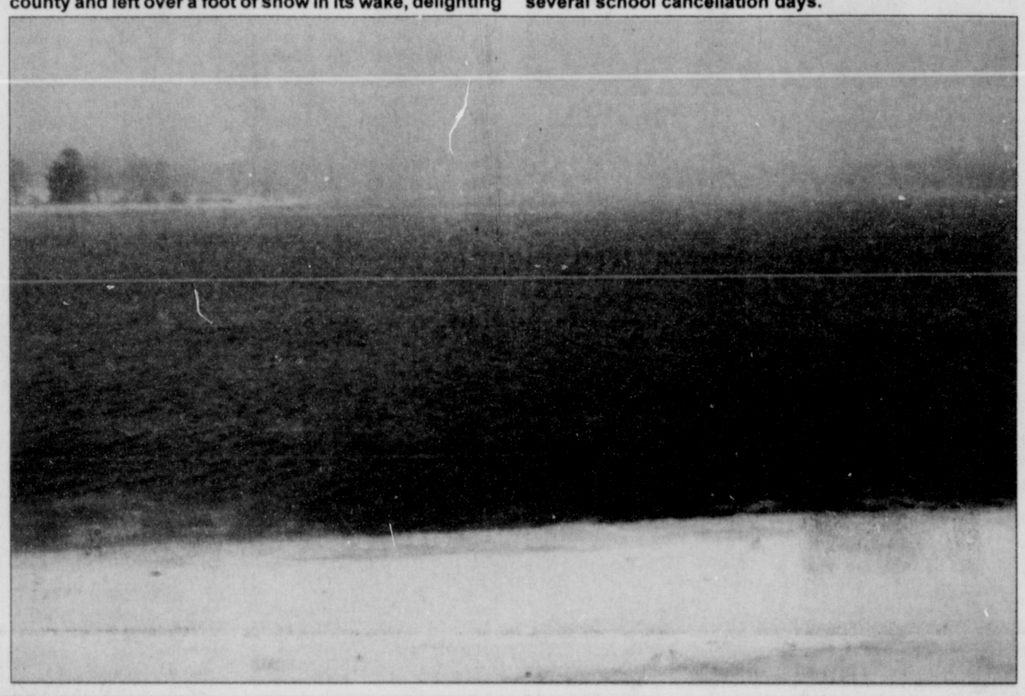
WHAT A DIFFERENCE A DAY MAKES – These shots of Deep Creek Lake were taken and submitted by Barbara Beelar, with the top photo taken on Sunday, New Year's Day, and the one below taken from the same location/angle on Tuesday. The spring-like conditions of both Sunday and Monday were rapidly replaced by an arctic blast from the northwest that descended upon the county and left over a foot of snow in its wake, delighting winter sports enthusiasts who have grown impatient with Mother Nature. Temperatures were in the 50s over the weekend, and dipped to near 0 by Wednesday morning. Tuesday was the first day of school missed in the current school year because of wintry conditions, highly unusual for Garrett County as rarely do we escape November and December – and sometimes October – without having several school cancellation days.



Ask The Everyday Scientist

KEEPING WARM

by Dr. Stephen I. Parks

Q. My Labrador retriever jumped into icy water and seemed to enjoy it! How do some animals deal so easily with the cold?

A. In school we all learn that land mammals have fur for insulation, birds have feathers, and whales have blubber. Many animals have heat-exchangers between the arteries and veins serving their limbs. All these structures help reduce the outflow of heat from the body core. In addition, some warm-blooded animals such as chipmunks and bats simply turn down their thermostats and sleep through the winter. Bluebirds select one birdhouse and pile in, 20 at a time, to snuggle together and keep warm.

These all reduce heat loss. But if the losses still are too big, the other side of the equation must change – the side where the heat comes from. The most obvious source of heat is exercise. When food energy is "burned" to operate our muscles, most of the energy is wasted, and turns into heat. Running or shoveling snow in cold weather can make us sweat under our jackets. Your Labrador probably runs circles around you. That helps her keep warm, but meanwhile you are shivering. That's your body's way of operating your muscles to generate heat when you aren't moving.

Something else goes on in mammals, and it is seldom mentioned at school. Mammals have a tissue called "brown fat." It is literally brown, as anyone knows who has butchered a deer in December. Unlike the white stuff in bacon, brown fat is not so much about storing energy as wasting it. On demand, brown fat can create an energy "short circuit." It turns food directly into heat without the need to run or shiver. Your Labrador probably has lots of the stuff.

Apparently brown fat grows and disappears on demand. People have a wide range of tolerance for cold weather. Most of us bundle up, but some seem comfortable without a jacket. In his great memoir, The Voyage of the Beagle, Charles Darwin describes the natives of Tierra del Fuego standing around naked in a snowstorm, and not appearing to be uncomfortable.

By occasionally exposing themselves to shivery-cold conditions, these people have grown internal brown fat. When they step outside, the short circuits are turned on and they burn a lot of calories to stay warm. Yes, you can actually "learn" to tolerate cold temperatures and burn calories at the same time. Sounds good, eh? Be careful, though. Hypothermia can be dangerous!

Dr Parks has a Ph.D. in solid-state physics, and most of his career has involved the design of sensors and instrumentation. Side interests include molecular biology, exotic travel, and nature study.

CELEBRATING 40 YEARS OF SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY

Reflections On First Semester

by Peggy Santamaria

The Garrett College fall 2011 semester drew to a close with final exams in mid-December. For almost 400 students this was their first college experience, and many said they found that the learning in the classroom was "top-notch," but equally important were the personal lessons they learned outside the classroom. Before heading away from campus for a few weeks' reprieve from studies, some freshman shared their thoughts and feelings about the first semester of college.

TURQUOISE BISCOE

Turquoise Biscoe, a graduate of Calvert High School in Prince Frederick, has adapted to the demands of her college level work and to scheduling her activities.

"I have learned the value of time and the importance of managing my own time, including time to get to the math lab and the writing lab," she said.

Noting that the level of studies exceeded her expectations, Turquoise also said she needed to learn to balance demands of class work with personal time.

"I needed to figure out when it was time to work and when it was time to play," she said.

She added that adjusting to her college life was made easier by her instructors.

"The Garrett College staff is very nice and very helpful," she said. "I especially enjoyed my English teacher, Mrs. Best. She always made classes very interesting."

BRODY FIKE

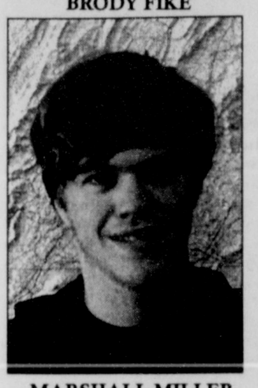
Brody Fike completed his first semester and feels well equipped to move into the next phase of college. The Northern High School graduate spoke about the demands of his studies.

"All the classes I have taken have been difficult enough to challenge my skills," he said.

Like many of his classmates, Brody found the time outside the classroom to be very important.

"I learned that college is a lot about studying and then bringing your knowledge to the classroom," he said. But he also discovered that he was up to the challenge. "I was pretty well-prepared for the level of work and the amount of studying."

DOMINIC RUGGIERO

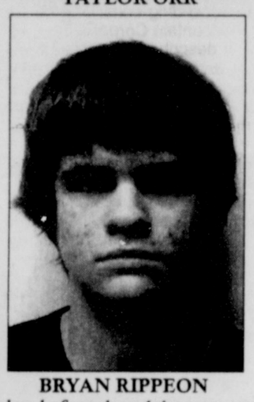


MARSHALL MILLER

LINDSEY SMITH

TAYLOR ORR

ESKEDAR TEFERA



BRYAN RIPPEON

Brody also talked about how Garrett College is providing him with both education and support.

"GC is a well-organized school, and the instructors here are very good at teaching and help students with whatever they need," he said.

Marshall Miller came to Garrett College from Southern High School with a goal of pursuing studies leading to a career in social and behavioral sciences. Though he has faced some challenges, he said he experienced an easy transition from high school to college.

"While I was at Southern, I took college prep courses. I felt prepared to enter college and was comfortable with the changes. It made it easier to acclimate," he said, crediting his high school academic curriculum.

One difference in the college experience that Marshall has found is the greater need for individual commitment.

"The instructors at Garrett College put more responsibility for studying on the student," he said.

Taylor Orr graduated from Southern High and just completed her first semester at GC. She is majoring in pre-nursing, which is articulated with the nursing program at Allegany College of Maryland. Taylor said she did not feel ready for the level of work required in the GC Allied Health Program.

"I didn't take any of the merit classes when I was in high school, and I think those classes would have better prepared me for my college work," she said.

She also went on to say that she would suggest that students considering college take some of the merit classes in preparation.

"College has been an adjustment for me, but I know now what I need to do. I would advise any incoming freshean to start right off with doing their best work," she said.

Taylor said she believes that GC was the right choice for her education.

"I think this is a really great opportunity," she said. "I took advantage of the Garrett County Scholarship program. You can't beat it. I will go to Garrett for two years of free education then transfer to ACM to finish my degree."

Bryan Rippeon, a graduate of Northern High, reflected on his first semester as a GC student.

"The classes are about as hard as I anticipated," he said,

Members Of Garrett College Staff, Faculty Make Resolutions For 2012

by Peggy Santamaria

In keeping with a long tradition, members of the Garrett College community are setting new goals for themselves in the form of resolutions for the New Year.

Ann Wellham, dean of marketing and enrollment management, has already charted her course and knows what she will need to do to meet her objective. She noted that the responsibilities of her office keep her very busy and often handling several projects at a time. Much of her work day is spent at her desk or sitting in meetings.

ANN WELLHAM

"My work is both stressful and mostly sedentary except for the time I spend moving quickly from one location to another on campus to meet with college staff and administrators," she said. "So I recognize that I need to increase the amount and type of movement I get through a balanced exercise program. The exercise will also help me reduce the effects of stress."

Wellham explained that she knows just how she will stick to her resolution.

"With the CARC (Community Aquatic & Recreation Complex) right on campus, I have easy access to the fitness equipment and the swimming pools," she said "In addition, there are some pretty interesting wellness and exercise classes that our Continuing Education and Workforce Development Division is offering at the CARC. So I'm confident that keeping this resolution will be easy and fun."

Shawn Noel, director of athletics, said he knows just what he needs to modify in his life, though he hasn't yet laid detailed plans on how to do this.

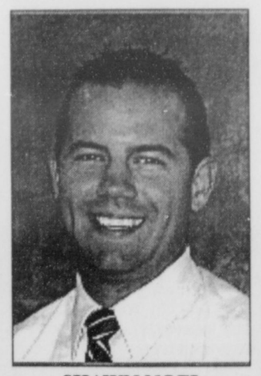
Noel's job responsibilities include oversight of nine athletic programs, plus the new CARC.

"I work a lot of crazy hours, and weekdays spill right into weekends of work," he said.

So Noel has challenged himself to redirect some of his energies.

"I need to set aside time that is not dedicated to work, he said. "I want to focus a little more on my personal life and spend more time with my girlfriend Brenda. When people get too absorbed in their jobs, they can burn out pretty quickly and become less effective. So my resolution for 2012 is to find a way to put a little balance in his life."

Christine Upole, admissions office associate, did not hesitate to identify her New Year's resolution. When asked if she knew what her resolution would be, she replied, "That's easy. I want to be able to start each day with a smile."



SHAWN NOEL

CHRISTINE UPHOLE

Upole explained that she didn't mean she wanted to plaster a fake smile on her face.

"I want to realize each day that there is so much to be grateful for and happy about," she said. "If I can feel this and it brings a smile to my face, then I will have a positive attitude."

Keeping a cheerful demeanor is important to Upole's work at the college because she occupies the first desk inside the admissions office on the McHenry campus. Current students, potential students, former students, plus staff and faculty members stop at her desk throughout the day. Almost all of them have a question or need to solve a problem.

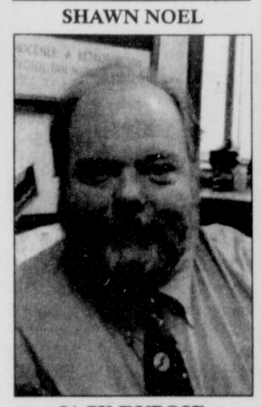
"It is easier to help people when I have a positive attitude, and I think they appreciate it," she said.

I addition to bringing a cheerful countenance to her job, Uphole plans to take advantage of the Garrett College articulation agreement with Franklin University in Columbus, Ohio, to take credit courses to be applied toward her bachelor's degree.

"I can take the classes here on campus or online. This is a great opportunity for me," she said.

Professor Jack DuBose brings his knowledge of writing to Garrett College students in a number of different venues. He works with the Northern and Southern high school students who are dually enrolled in secondary school curriculum and college classes. This he does through remote classroom teaching and visits to the high schools. On the GC campus he provides tutoring, operates the writing center, and oversees the placement testing for incoming students, making for a busy schedule.

With the approach of a new year, DuBose reflected on the changes he would like to make in his life.



JACK DUBOSE

LINDA STEVANUS

"In my teaching, I would like to be more deliberate about my planning process for all my writing classes. In my personal life, I would like to be able put more value on my own work as a writer," he said.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Maryland Department of The Environment, Abandoned Mine Land Division will be submitting an application for approval of funds to the U.S. Department of the Interior, Office of Surface Mining for the reclamation of seven (7) abandoned coal mining sites throughout Garrett and Allegany Counties. All funding will be obtained in accordance with Title IV, Section 405 of Public Law 95-87, Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977.

An agency must have an approved State Surface Coal Mining Regulatory Program and a State Abandoned Mine Land Reclamation Plan to qualify for funding under Title IV. Maryland has had approval of both programs since February 17, 1982. Funding for each project will originate from the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund, which is administered by the Office of Surface Mining.

It is the goal of the Maryland Abandoned Mine Land Division to promote the reclamation of abandoned coal mine areas in Maryland that are inadequately reclaimed or pose a public health and safety concern, degrade the quality of the environment, and/or diminish the beneficial use of land and water resources.

The Abandoned Mine Land Division would like to gather comments on the following listed projects and/or any other abandoned mine problems in the Maryland Coal Region.

A public informational meeting concerning the proposed projects will be held as follows
Wednesday, January 25, 2012
7:00 P.M.
Maryland Department of the Environment
Land Management Administration
Abandoned Mine Land Division
160 South Water Street, Room 107
Frostburg, MD 21532

Additional information concerning the proposed projects can be obtained by contacting Mr. Mike Garner, Abandoned Mine Land Division, 160 South Water St., Frostburg, MD 21532, (301) 689-1460. Written comments concerning these projects and the Maryland Abandoned Mine Reclamation Program will be received at the public hearing or by mail until Wednesday, January 25, 2012. Address all comments to the attention of Mr. Mike Garner at the address listed above.

The following is a general description of the proposed reclamation projects, including the location, County, nearest town or physical feature, and nature of the problem.

1. KEMPTON BOREHOLE SEALING AND SLUDGE POND REMOVAL PROJECT
Location: North of Kempton, Garrett County, Maryland.
39°34'14"N 79°28'55.10"W

Problem: An existing 3 ft. diameter borehole is discharging approximately 1000 gallons per minute of acid mine drainage. The borehole is undercut and collapsing creating a hazard to people. Also, an existing pond is choked with lime doser sludge which poses a health and safety hazard.

Plan: Seal the borehole using grout injection techniques to prevent further deterioration and collapse. This would eliminate the hazard and would improve the efficiency of the existing lime doser treatment system by concentrating the AMD discharge to one location, an airshaft located 1200 feet upstream of the borehole and adjacent to the doser. Remove existing pond and sludge by dredging the material, mostly undissolved lime, and disposal at an on-site location and convert the sludge pond to a wetland.

2. SELDOM SEEN GOB PILE AML ENHANCEMENT PROJECT
Location: Lonaconing, Allegany County, Maryland.
39.33.43N 78.59.20W

Problem: An abandoned coal refuse pile, gob pile, is unvegetated and eroding acidic sediments into nearby waterways. The gob pile is adjacent to a middle school and frequently visited by students and local residents.

Plan: Use the AML enhancement rule to recover the remaining coal resources at the site by removing the coal refuse to a permitted coal processing facility and stabilize the site using the best on-site soil as final cover and revegetation with grasses.

3. CLARYSVILLE BRIDGE GOB PILE AML ENHANCEMENT PROJECT
Location: Approximately 1.25 miles southeast of Frostburg, Allegany County, Maryland, immediately south of Interstate 68.
39.38.12N 78.53.53W

Problem: An abandoned coal refuse pile is creating acid mine drainage from surface water runoff that contacts the pile during runoff events.

Plan: Use the AML enhancement rule to recover the remaining coal resources at the site by removing the coal refuse to a permitted coal processing facility and stabilize the site using the best on-site soil as final cover and revegetation with grasses.

4. ECKHART BAPTIST CHURCH MINE GAS VENTILATION PROJECT
Location: 17100 Old National Pike, SW Frostburg, Allegany County, Maryland.
39.38.58N 78.54.07W

Problem: Carbon Dioxide is seeping from the Pittsburgh Coal Seam mine workings into the basement of the Eckhart Baptist Church creating poor air quality.

Plan: Install a ventilation system into the Church's foundation to remove the Carbon Dioxide and improve the air quality.

5. KINGSLAND MINE BLOWOUT PREVENTION PROJECT
Location: Adjacent to the western city limits of Lonaconing Maryland on the Tyson Coal seam and Pittsburgh Coal seam.
39.34.04N 78.59.04W

Problem: An abandoned mine entry on the Tyson Coal Seam is discharging large amounts of Acid Mine Drainage. The mine opening periodically collapses which creates a dam at the mine entrance. The mine drainage impounds behind the dam and "blows out" when sufficient pressure is achieved. Other mine entries on the Pittsburgh Coal Seam are under hydrologic pressure and have showed signs of blowing out.

Plan: Excavate and open the abandoned deep mine entry on the Tyson coal seam and install piping so that the entry remains free draining. Install several drill holes into the Pittsburgh mine workings at designed elevations to limit the mine pool and hydrologic pressure at the abandoned and collapsed mine entries.

6. KITZMILLER MUNICIPAL WELL PROJECT
Location: The intersection of North American Road and North Hill Road just west of Kitzmiller, Garrett County, Maryland
39.23.33N 79.11.50W

Problem: A completed abandoned mine project extended the Kitzmiller Public Water Distribution System to provide potable water to 26 residences whose private water supplies were impacted by abandoned deep mines. The increased demand for water has created a need for a supplemental water well to provide additional water and to act as a back up well if the primary well fails.

Plan: Drill a water well and provide the needed appurtenances to connect the well to the existing distribution system.

7. DOUGLAS AVENUE LANDSLIDE PROJECT
Location: .4 Miles Northwest of Lonaconing along Douglas Avenue.
39.34.28N 78.59.15W

Problem: A road embankment lubricated by deep mine discharges has become un-stable and is sliding towards Douglas Avenue and has already blocked off the existing road side ditch causing water to flow across the roadway. Continued movement of the landslide could block all or part of Douglas Avenue.

Plan: The proposed repair work will include the collection and channeling of mine discharges around the un-stable area, the excavation and off-site disposal of land slide material at a permitted site and the construction of a rock toe buttress/retaining structure. Collected mine discharges will be routed to the road side ditch which is their current outlet. 1/5

Is the '24' clock about to start running again?

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Kiefer Sutherland

Q: "24" was very good. Why did the producers stop it, and would they start it again? – Victor Ayres, Huntington Beach, Calif.

A: They would, and all indications are that they plan to again, and soon. After eight seasons, everyone on the Fox show was pretty exhausted from Jack Bauer's successes in saving the world ... possibly no one more so than star Kiefer Sutherland, on whom the series took a big physical toll. He's starting another drama for Fox – "Touch," which has a preview showing Jan. 25 – and producers Howard Gordon and Alex Gansa have moved on to Showtime's much-acclaimed "Homeland," but a revisiting of "24" seems much closer now.

All the concerned parties should be available to make a long-discussed feature-film version this spring, and at this writing, that was the projected start date for production. Reportedly, the script will take Bauer to Europe for his latest mission, and it's probable that the real-time aspect of the series (each season of which was supposed to amount to an actual 24-hour day) will be compressed for motion-picture purposes.

Q: What happened to "In Plain Sight" and "HawthoRNe"? I hope they weren't canceled.– Judy Guarino, Depew, N.Y.

A: One "yes," one "no." USA Network is slated to bring back the Mary McCormack-starring "In Plain Sight" for a fifth and final round in April. However, you've already seen the last of "HawthoRNe"; after three seasons, TNT decided against renewing Jada Pinkett Smith's medical drama.

Q: Has anybody from the cast of "Glee" ever been invited to be on "Dancing With the Stars"? – Cathy Murphy, Columbus, Ohio

A: The ABC competition's producers rarely discuss those they pursued and couldn't get, but we're going to make an educated guess and say that no one from "Glee" likely has been approached ... and that's mainly because of the time factor.

In September and March, when "Dancing" traditionally begins its seasons, "Glee" also is in production for its Fox airings. With the amount of rehearsal that would be involved, the actors just wouldn't have the time. Besides, after dancing all day on their own show, going and doing it for another show might not be the most enticing prospect.

Reflections On

noting that he felt prepared for the intensity of the course work in the computer science program he is pursuing.

Though he does not find the classes too difficult, he has discovered the differences between the level of high school work and the level of college work.

"I found that I had to spend a lot more time studying for classes this semester than I did in high school, he said, adding that he feels well-prepared to handle the work as he moves into his second semester.

Dominic Ruggiero, also a Northern graduate, is focusing his studies on computer network administration.

"I didn't find the college workload any larger than it was in high school, but I did find that it required more studying," he said.

The difference between secondary and post-secondary education for Dominic has not just been the amount of study time demanded, but the scheduling of that time.

"Being in college is a definite change from high school. There's a lot more individual responsibility for students," he said.

Facing his second semester, Dominic has accomplished a major task for a freshman.

"It took me a while to get used to college and knowing what to expect," he said, adding that he now has a grasp on the idea that it is his responsibility to allot sufficient time for the college workload.

GROUP VOLUNTEERS AT OPERATION CHRISTMAS CHILD CENTER – A group from Oak Grove Church of the Brethren, McHenry, recently traveled to Boone, N.C., to volunteer at an Operation Christmas Child Processing Center. Hundreds of thousands of gift-filled shoeboxes flood this and numerous other centers each fall, where they are carefully inspected and prepared for shipment to children worldwide. Since 1993, Operation Christmas Child, a project of international Christian relief and evangelism organization Samaritan's Purse, headed by Franklin Graham, has delivered more than 86 million gift-filled shoe boxes to children in 130 countries. "Volunteers play a vital role in creating a heartwarming and potentially life-changing experience for a needy child," an Oak Grove spokesperson said about helping at the processing center. "Our group had the privilege of hearing a testimony from a young man from Russia who had received a shoebox. We also heard a special message from Franklin Graham and Christmas music provided by the Tommy Coomes Band. Those attending all agreed that volunteering in the processing center was an awesome experience and received a blessing to be a part of spreading God's word through a simple shoebox. Pictured with Graham (in the first row with the dark jacket) are Bill Sines, Mack Rush, Sharon Schlossnagle, Jeffrey Rush, Larry Schlossnagle, George and Janet Fike, Cheryl Marple, Fayann Saturday, Dottie Sines, Rick and Sharon Perando, Jackie Kroll, Judy Rush, and Jill Rodeheaver.

Lindsey Smith, a graduate of Southern High, has set a goal of becoming a high school history teacher and said she is well-focused on meeting the challenges this will require. Aware that she would need to put in more hours studying while in college, Lindsey said she found it took even more time than she anticipated.

"I literally go to work, to class, and then home. When I'm home my time is consumed by school work and studying. I'm actually in the library more than I am at home," she said.

Lindsey said her instructors are supportive of her endeavors and help her whenever she needs assistance.

"I can handle the level of studying because I know it will all pay off," she concluded.

Eskedar Tefera began her college career far from her native land of Ethiopia.

"Coming to Garrett County has changed some part of me," she said. "The faculty and students are very friendly, supportive, and helpful. The school is giving me everything I need."

Living in a residence hall on campus, Eskedar said she finds the environment to be safe and supportive.

"The student RAs (resident assistants) and staff are always there when any student needs help," she noted.

The guidance and support carry over to the classrooms for Eskedar. She spoke of the personal attention from instructors and their help in staying focused on studies.

"Garrett College is a great place to be, and I suggest that anyone who wants to start college with no stress shouldn't hesitate to contact the admissions office, because they would love to help you. I can't wait 'til next semester," she said.

Second-semester classes will begin at GC on January 24, and applications are currently being accepted. Applications and information are available online at www.garrettcollege.edu or by calling 301-387-3044.

Make Resolutions

A poet whose work has appeared in many publications, DuBose also serves on the editorial board of Backbone Mountain Review, which features poetry and prose by area writers.

"It is my resolution for 2012 that I will try to put more of my poetry out for publication," he said.

Linda Stevanus serves as webmaster for Garrett College. It is within her realm to keep information up-to-date on web sites for Garrett College, the CARC, the Adventuresports Institute at Garrett College (ASI), and the Garrett Information Enterprise Center (GIEC), as well as maintain multiple Facebook pages, along with Twitter accounts and several other social media accounts that help connect students, alumni, and potential students with the current happenings on and off campus.

Her current major project involves a total redesign of the Garrett College web site. Needless to say, the scope of Stevanus's work keeps her glued to her computer screen for long hours at a time, with little or no student contact.

"I stopped by a local business to grab lunch one day, and the girl at the counter asked me what it is I do at the college," she said, "because while she sees me at her place of employment on a regular basis, as a GC student, she has never seen me on campus. While my job is vital in providing information to students, it lacks actual interaction. In the coming year, I would like to get more involved with student activities or student-centered activities.

"In taking a first step toward achieving this goal," she continued, "I recently joined the Students In Need Group – or SING – here on campus. We are a small group of faculty and staff members dedicated to providing temporary assistance to students in need of help in any form – from a small supply of food, to seasonally appropriate clothing, to any variety of needs which may arise in the adjustment to postsecondary education and the transition into adulthood. While the group is still in its planning stages, I look forward to lending a hand and making a difference in the lives of our students," she said.

Garrett College invites anyone making a New Year's resolution to consider the options offered at any of the college sites. There are opportunities available for all at the Northern and Southern outreach locations, the Career Technology Training Center in Accident, as well as on the McHenry campus, which includes the Garrett College Community Aquatic and Recreation Complex.

"Area Agency on Aging promotes the Garrett County Community Action Committee strategy of creating an environment where Garrett County residents have access to health care and support on life skills, thus increasing the number of families and individuals able to live independently."

From the Director's Desk:

Dear Readers,

As winter is now upon us we wanted to offer some belated Christmas cheer with the news that the majority of our funding for FY 2012 has remained intact, including the Senior Care program. The Senior Care program was not reduced in FY '12 as anticipated, we have been given a reprieve until FY 2013. Although this is not entirely "good" news, it does allow us the opportunity to move toward the reduction in funds through attrition. Another piece of good news is the fact our 4 year plan has been approved by the Maryland Department of Aging.

In the coming months the agency will be embarking on a new initiative and will soon become an Aging & Disabilities Resource Center (ADRC), known throughout Maryland as Maryland Access Point (MAP). The purpose of an ARDC is to bring together a network of organizations in a community to serve as operating partners to develop a single point of entry ("no wrong door") for obtaining information and services where people of all ages, disabilities and income levels may turn for objective information on a full range of long-term service and support options. We will publicize the formal opening of the site in the coming months.

The agency would like to take this opportunity to thank the many Meals on Wheels donors who so generously donated to the program during the holiday season by becoming a "Christmas Angel" or making their annual Christmas donation. Each holiday season the agency raises approximately $4,000 to support this very important program. Thanks so much for caring.

Wishing you a safe and warm winter.

Warmest Regards
Adina Brode
Director

Worried Sick

Living with Anxiety Disorders

Anxiety is an uneasy feeling that something may harm you or a loved one. This feeling can be normal and sometimes even helpful. If you're starting a new job or taking a test, it might make you more alert and ready for action. But sometimes anxiety can linger or become overwhelming. When it gets in the way of good health and peace of mind, it's called an anxiety disorder.

If you have an anxiety disorder, you're not alone. Each year, tens of millions of Americans of all ages suffer from long-term anxiety. Among children, anxiety disorders are the most common form of mental illness—one they may carry into adulthood.

"Everybody has anxiety," says Dr. Daniel Pine, an NIH neuroscientist and psychiatrist. "The tricky part is how to tell the difference between normal and abnormal anxiety."

For those with anxiety disorders, fears, worries and anxieties can cause so much distress that they interfere with daily life. The anxiety grows out of proportion to the stressful situation or occurs when there is no real danger.

Anxiety activates the body's stress response. Nearly all the cells, tissues and organs in your body go on high-alert. This stress response can wear your body down over time. People with chronic (long-term) anxiety have a higher risk of both physical and mental health problems. Some people visit their doctors because of headaches, racing heart or other physical complaints without realizing that these symptoms may be connected to how anxious they feel.

NIH-funded researchers are working to learn more about anxiety disorders. They have discovered that these conditions are caused by some combination of your genes and your environment. However, the precise events that lead to anxiety disorders are still unknown. Scientists are also searching for better ways to diagnose, prevent and treat these conditions.

There are several kinds of anxiety disorders. The major types include:

Phobias. Intense, irrational fears triggered by things that pose little or no real danger, such as heights, dogs or spiders. Among the anxiety disorders, specific phobias are the most common.

Social anxiety disorder. Leads to extreme anxiety and self-consciousness in everyday social situations. Also known as social phobia.

Post-traumatic stress disorder. Caused by trauma. This condition leads to flashbacks, nightmares and insomnia. Often accompanied by depression or substance abuse, post-traumatic stress disorder can occur at any age, including childhood.

Generalized anxiety disorder. Excessive worry about a variety of everyday problems.

Panic disorder. Sudden attacks of terror accompanied by physical symptoms that may include heart palpitations, shortness of breath, dizziness, or abdominal distress. Panic disorder is one of the most treatable of anxiety disorders.

Obsessive-compulsive disorder. Persistent, upsetting thoughts (obsessions) and repetitive rituals (compulsions), like hand washing, counting, checking or cleaning. These behaviors are done in the hope of preventing the thoughts or making them go away.

Treatment for anxiety disorders usually includes both medication and cognitive behavioral therapy (CBT). CBT is a form of talk therapy. It helps people change both the thinking patterns that support their fears and the way they react to anxiety-provoking situations. Current treatments can be highly effective for most people.

Dr. Denise Chavira, a psychologist at the University of California, San Diego, works with anxious youth in underserved, rural areas. Her team is studying ways to make CBT more accessible to these children, who may have trouble getting to therapy sessions. To help make up for the lack of in-person contact, the researchers are examining telephone and self-help approaches that focus on teaching parents how to use CBT skills with their children.

In one study, the scientists are comparing CBT training delivered to parents by phone versus in-person CBT provided to anxious youth and their parents. With a therapist's help, parents and kids create lists of anxiety-producing situations. They learn how to face their fears gradually while using CBT coping skills. Both methods encourage parents to model brave behaviors for kids, and to let kids learn how to be independent. "Some parents do this naturally, but others need some practice" says Chavira. "The phone is a less intense form of treatment, given that it only involves the parents and sessions are shorter. But even that mode can be really effective," Chavira says.

NIH-funded researchers are also using advanced imaging tools to pinpoint the areas in the brain that underlie anxiety disorders. Still in its very early stages, this approach represents a major shift from how doctors usually diagnose mental illness, which is by looking at symptoms and behaviors. Using an imaging technique called functional MRI (fMRI), scientists are scanning the brain in action—as it thinks, remembers, feels emotion and regulates the body's reactions to things that cause anxiety. By measuring changes in blood flow related to brain activity, fMRI scans produce full-color images of trouble spots in real time.

Dr. Sonia Bishop of the University of California-Berkeley uses fMRI to study people at high risk for anxiety disorders. Her team hopes to prevent anxiety disorders before patients enter a downward spiral. The researchers are working to develop a new type of CBT-related treatment that helps to retrain how patients regulate their emotions and attention.

Scientists are especially curious about brain regions called the amygdala and the hippocampus. The amygdala plays an important role in fear and anxiety by alerting the brain to danger. The hippocampus translates threatening events into memories. Once scientists discover if and how these areas contribute to illness, they might be able to develop better treatments.

"These disorders put a huge burden on the individual, the family and society," Bishop says. "Anxiety disorders are one of the most common reasons that people visit their primary health care provider."

If you are troubled by anxiety, the first person to see is your family doctor or nurse practitioner. He or she can check for any underlying physical illness or a related condition. You may be referred to a mental health specialist, who might help to identify the specific type of anxiety disorder and the appropriate treatment. With proper care, most people with anxiety disorders can lead normal, fulfilling lives.

Gene Affects Response to Asthma Drugs

Some people with asthma don't respond well to inhaled corticosteroids, a widely prescribed medicine for asthma control. Scientists have now identified a gene that may help explain why.

Asthma is a complex disease that narrows the airways in the lungs. It leads to wheezing, coughing, chest tightness and trouble breathing.

Since a poor response to inhaled corticosteroids often runs in families, scientists suspected that genes play a role. To learn more, researchers ran a genome-wide scan of more than 100 children with asthma and their parents. Variation in a gene called GLCCI1 seemed to be linked to a poor response to inhaled corticosteroids.

To double-check the finding, the scientists looked for variant GLCCI1 genes in over 900 additional children and adults with asthma. About 1 in 6 of these patients had 2 copies of the variant gene. Those with 2 variants were more than twice as likely to respond poorly to inhaled corticosteroids than patients with 2 regular copies of the gene.

"This finding helps to explain the genetic basis for the long-standing observation that some people don't respond well to what is a common asthma treatment," says Dr. Susan Shurin, acting director of NIH's National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute. Understanding variant genes might eventually lead to personalized asthma therapy that's based on each patient's genetic makeup.

Dairy Does a Body Good!

Most of us are aware that low fat milk and milk products are valuable in the development and maintenance of bone health. According to the 2010 Dietary Guidelines for Americans, there is also moderate evidence that the "intake of milk and milk products is associated with a reduced risk of cardiovascular disease and type 2 diabetes, and with lower blood pressure in adults."

The current Dietary Guidelines for Americans recommends three servings of low-fat or fat-free dairy foods every day, yet Americans consume an average of just 1.8 servings of dairy foods daily.

The dairy food group (milk, cheese and yogurt) provides key nutrients such as calcium, potassium and vitamin D. It's difficult to get enough of these nutrients without dairy foods in your diet.

What can be done to increase your consumption of dairy products? For those able to drink milk, a visit to the National Dairy Council web site (http://www.nationaldairycouncil.org) can provide you with simple yet delicious drinks and other recipes that include milk.

However, for those who would like to drink milk, but experience gassiness and bloating when consuming milk products, the problem may be lactose intolerance. A recent study found individuals who consider themselves to be lactose intolerant tend to avoid dairy foods. This can result in nutrient shortcomings that can predispose them to harmful health results such as poor bone health, higher blood pressure and increased risk of colon cancer and diabetes.

But take heart! This can be managed so that you can meet your daily dairy recommendations.

One popular way is by using lactose free milk. Lactose free milk is real milk, just without the lactose. It provides the same essential nutrients as regular milk, including calcium, potassium, Vitamin D and more.

Some additional strategies that can help people with lactose intolerance enjoy milk and milk products without experiencing discomfort or embarrassment include:

- Sip it—Introduce dairy slowly to build your tolerance
- Stir it—Mix milk with food to slow its digestion, making lactose easier to digest
- Shred & Slice it—Top foods with natural cheeses, which are low in lactose
- Spoon it—Try easy-to-digest yogurt. The live and active cultures in yogurt help to digest lactose.

For those allergic to milk protein, fortified soy milk is a healthy alternative. For those who use soy milk, check out the Round Up recipe "Power Breakfast for One."

So have a dairy nice day as you sip a drink to good health!

Goodwill Holds Annual Christmas Bazaar

In the picture is resident Audrey Feld; Laura Schroyer, RN; Peggy Nixon, Vendor

The annual Christmas Bazaar has become a highlight to the beginning of the Christmas season for the residents of Goodwill Retirement Community and their families. Each year local vendors bring a variety of goods including jewelry, crafts, baked goods, puzzles, books, etc. to sell. Staff assist residents in purchasing gifts for family members and friends. Family members, staff, and visitors also enjoy the opportunity to shop for just the perfect gift. Many residents find it too difficult or overwhelming to get to, and to shop at, large department stores. The Christmas Bazaar offers an opportunity to shop without leaving the building, offers a more limited selection of appropriate items within a specific price range, and gives back to residents who were "shoppers" the enjoyment of the sights, sounds, and smells of Christmas shopping season.

2010 Census Shows 65 and Older Population Growing Faster Than Total U.S. Population

Percentage Higher than in any Previous Census

The U.S. population 65 and older is now the largest in terms of size and percent of the population, compared with any previous census, according to a new 2010 Census brief [PDF] released today from the U.S. Census Bureau on the nation's older population. The group grew at a faster rate than the total population between 2000 and 2010.

According to the 2010 Census, there were 40.3 million people 65 and older on April 1, 2010, increasing by 5.3 million since the 2000 Census when this population numbered 35.0 million. The percentage of the population 65 and older also increased during the previous decade. In 2010, the older population represented 13.0 percent of the total population, an increase from 12.4 percent in 2000.

65 and Older Population Grew Faster than Total Population

Between 2000 and 2010, the population 65 and older grew 15.1 percent, while the total U.S. population grew 9.7 percent. The opposite happened between 1990 and 2000 when the growth of the older population was slower than the growth of the total population, with growth rates of 12.0 percent and 13.2 percent, respectively.

Population Size and Growth Varied Among the Older Age Groups

Examining the growth of 10-year age groups within the older population shows that 85- to 94-year-olds experienced the fastest growth between 2000 and 2010. This group grew by 29.9 percent, increasing from 3.9 million to 5.1 million.

Among five-year age groups in the older population, 65- to 69-year-olds grew the fastest. This age group grew by 30.4 percent, rising from 9.5 million to 12.4 million. The 65- to 69-year-old group is expected to grow more rapidly over the next decade as the first baby boomers started turning 65 in 2011.

The only older population age group to decline between 2000 and 2010 was the 75- to 79-year-old age group. This group decreased by 1.3 percent from 7.4 million to 7.3 million. The changes in this group mainly reflect the relatively low number of births during the early 1930s as fewer numbers of people entered these ages between 2000 and 2010.

Population of Older Men Increased at a More Rapid Rate than Older Women

While women continue to outnumber men in the older ages, men have continued to close the gap over the decade by increasing at a faster rate than women. The largest growth rate for a 10-year age group within the older population was for men 85 to 94 years old (46.5 percent). Women in this age group also increased but to a smaller degree (22.9 percent). When five-year age groups are compared, men 90 to 94 years old had the fastest growth rate (50.3 percent) while women increased the fastest in the 65- to 69-year-old age group (28.2 percent).

The number of men per 100 women in the older ages has increased over time as differences in male and female mortality continued to narrow and more males entered into the older population. For most single years of age above age 65, the ratio of men to women was higher in 2010 than in 2000 and 1990.

In the 2010 Census, there were approximately twice as many women as men at age 89 (361,309 compared with 176,689, respectively). This doubling point occurred about four years older than it did in 2000 and six years older than it did in 1990, illustrating the narrowing gap in mortality between men and women at the older ages.

South had Largest Number of People in Older Ages, While Northeast had Largest Percentage

Comparisons across the nation's four regions in 2010 show that the South contained the greatest number of people 65 and older at 14.9 million, followed by the Midwest at 9.0 million, and the West at 8.5 million. The Northeast had the smallest number of people 65 and older at 7.8 million but also had the highest percentage of people 65 and older at 14.1 percent. Following the Northeast was the Midwest at 13.5 percent and the South at 13.0 percent. The West had the smallest percentage of people 65 and older at 11.9 percent.

West had the Fastest Growth in the Populations 65 and Over and 85 and Over

When compared with the 2000 Census, all regions grew in both the 65 and older and 85 and older populations. The region with the fastest growth in the population 65 and older was the West (23.5 percent), increasing from 6.9 million in 2000 to 8.5 million in 2010. The region with the fastest growth in the population 85 and older was also the West (42.8 percent), increasing from 806,000 in 2000 to 1.2 million in 2010.

Rhode Island was the Only State Whose 65 and Older Population Decreased

Among the 50 states, Rhode Island was the only one to decrease in the number of people 65 and older, declining from 152,402 in 2000 to 151,881 in 2010. The District of Columbia's 65-and-older population also decreased from 69,898 in 2000 to 68,809 in 2010.

Compared with other states, Florida had the greatest share of the population that was 65 and older in both 2000 and 2010 (17.6 percent and 17.3 percent, respectively). West Virginia (16.0 percent), Maine (15.9 percent), Pennsylvania (15.4 percent) and Iowa (14.9 percent) followed in 2010.

The state with the lowest share of the population 65 and older was Alaska in both 2000 and 2010 (5.7 percent and 7.7 percent, respectively). Alaska is also notable as the state with the largest growth rate for the population 65 and older. The state's older population grew from 35,699 in 2000 to 54,938 in 2010, resulting in a percent increase of 53.9 percent.

Population 85 and Older Increased in All States

Between 2000 and 2010, all states experienced increases in the number of people who were 85 and older. However, the magnitude of growth varied among states.

Alaska had the largest percent change between 2000 and 2010 (78.9 percent), increasing from 2,634 in 2000 to 4,711 in 2010. Mississippi had the smallest growth rate (3.4 percent) and increased from 42,891 in 2000 to 44,359 in 2010. Alaska was also the state with the lowest number and percentage of the population 85 and older when compared with other states.

Other Highlights

- In the 2010 Census, there were 53,364 centenarians (people 100 and older), an increase of 5.8 percent since 2000.
- The number of people 65 and older more than doubled in 21 counties in the United States.
- Approximately 1.3 million people 65 and older—or 3.1 percent of this population—lived in skilled-nursing facilities in 2010.

The Census Bureau recently released 90+ ages in the United States: 2006-2008 [PDF], a report providing an overview of this age group and a comparative analysis of selected demographic and socioeconomic differences between the 90 and older group and their younger counterparts within the older population. The statistics, which go down to the state level, come primarily from the American Community Survey.

Aging in Place Guide:

4 Tips to Successfully Age at Home

You've surveyed the premises, asked the important safety questions, moved the master bedroom downstairs and done all the prep so your parent can safely grow old in the comfort of his own home. But now what? Plans change, health can go haywire. Here's how you can create a system of check-ins that doesn't look like hovering:

1. Create Expectations. Agree together on the importance of continuously assessing their situation. This includes how their home is being kept up, ensuring they are taking their medication properly, assessing their driving skills, etc. You may even want to begin to scout other forms of transportation for when the time comes to put away the car keys.

2. Use Technology. Establish ways you can check on them throughout the day and night. Discuss with them the advantages of using a web/nanny cam, as well as a monitoring system for falls and other emergencies. Also consider daily check-in calls or visits from neighbors or other people who will stop by to say hello.

3. Make food prep easier. Investigate Meals on Wheels or other elder agencies that make house calls. And you can stop by often to see for yourself that they're eating, taking their meds, and are functioning well.

4. Create a care team. Keep a list of "helpers"—nearby neighbors, your siblings and other extended family members, church or synagogue friends, volunteers, community outreach and elder care agencies—all of whom can be pressed into service for an emergency or just an important errand.

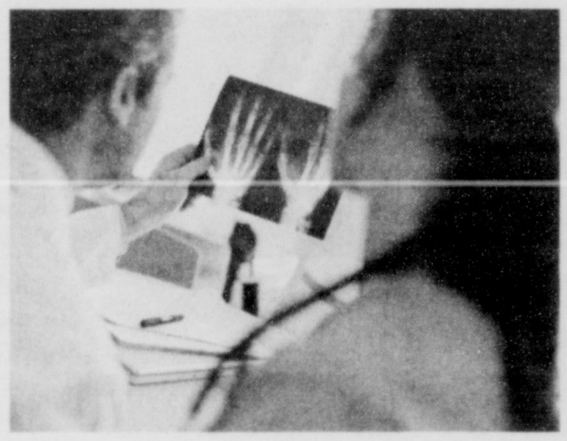
Bone Health is Expected to Decline



"Osteoporosis, osteopenia, and hip fractures are expected to dramatically increase globally, especially for men," says Denise Orwig, PhD, associate director of the Baltimore Hip Studies (BHS). The remarks were included in her presentation "Bone Health in Men and Women," delivered during Living Longer, Living Better, a reception for the Center for Research on Aging.

Osteoporosis and osteopenia—major reasons for fractures in people over age 50—are unrecognized and underdiagnosed in men. "Two million men currently have osteoporosis, and another three million are at risk," said Orwig. "The rate of osteoporosis in men is expected to increase by 50 percent by 2050, with one in four men over the age of 50 expected to develop it."

Men are at increasing risk for hip fracture. "The number of hip fractures among men is expected to double by 2040," Orwig said. "Men also have a greater rate of mortality within one year following a hip fracture. One-third of men with a hip fracture will not survive one year after their fracture." Orwig urges people to find out their T-score—a comparison of a patient's bone marrow density to that of a healthy 30-year-old of the same sex and ethnicity. This value is used in post-menopausal women and men over age 50 to predict the risk of future fracture.

The criteria of the World Health Organization are:

- A T-score of -1.0 or higher is normal.
- Osteopenia is defined as between -1.0 and -2.5.
- Osteoporosis is defined as -2.5 or lower, meaning a bone density that is two and a half standard deviations below the mean of a 30-year-old man or woman.

Baltimore Hip Studies

Led by Jay Magaziner, PhD, MS Hyg, and Denise Orwig, BHS is one of five national centers of excellence based in the Center for Research on Aging. BHS is an interdisciplinary research initiative on hip fracture recovery funded by the National Institute on Aging. Its 25 participating hospitals make BHS the world's largest hospital research network to study hip fractures.

Family Caregivers:

What You Should Know About Burnout

Providing care for a family member in need is a centuries-old act of kindness, love, and loyalty. And as life expectancies increase and medical treatments advance, more and more of us will participate in the caregiving process, either as the caregiver, the recipient of care, or possibly both.

Unfortunately, caregiving can take a heavy toll if you don't have adequate support. Caregiving involves many stressors: changes in the family roles, household disruption, financial pressure, and the amount of work involved.

As the stress piles up, frustration and despair take hold and burnout becomes a very real danger. But you can prevent caregiver burnout by following a few essential guidelines:

- Learn as much as you can about your family member's illness and about how to be a caregiver as you can. The more you know, the more effective you'll be, and the better you'll feel about your efforts.
- Know your limits. Be realistic about how much of your time and yourself you can give. Set clear limits, and communicate those limits to doctors, family members, and other people involved.
- Accept your feelings. Caregiving can trigger a host of difficult emotions, including anger, fear, resentment, guilt, helplessness, and grief. As long as you don't compromise the well-being of the care receiver, allow yourself to feel what you feel.
- Confide in others. Talk to people about what you feel; don't keep your emotions bottled up. Caregiver support groups are invaluable, as is your physician, but trusted friends and family members can help too. You may also benefit from seeing a therapist or counselor.

If you need help contact your local Area Agency on Aging to obtain information on programs you may be eligible for. Find time for yourself, give yourself small treats, find a few moments to read a book or a magazine, get a manicure or visit a friend. Remember, if you don't care for yourself, you won't be able to care for anyone else

Dehydration

Definition

Dehydration means your body does not have as much water and fluids as it should. Dehydration can be caused by losing too much fluid, not drinking enough water or fluids, or both. Vomiting and diarrhea are common causes.

Infants and children are more susceptible to dehydration than adults because of their smaller body weights and higher turnover of water and electrolytes. The elderly and those with illnesses are also at higher risk.

Dehydration is classified as mild, moderate, or severe based on how much of the body's fluid is lost or not replenished. When severe, dehydration is a life-threatening emergency.

Causes, incidence, and risk factors

Your body may lose too much fluids from:

- Vomiting or diarrhea
- Excessive urine output, such as with uncontrolled diabetes or diuretic use
- Excessive sweating (for example, from exercise)
- Fever

You might not drink enough fluids because of:

- Nausea
- Loss of appetite due to illness
- Sore throat or mouth sores

Dehydration in sick children is often a combination of both—refusing to eat or drink anything while also losing fluid from vomiting, diarrhea, or fever.

Symptoms

- Dry or sticky mouth
- Low or no urine output; concentrated urine appears dark yellow
- Not producing tears
- Sunken eyes
- Markedly sunken fontanelles (the soft spot on the top of the head) in an infant
- Lethargic or comatose (with severe dehydration)

In addition to the symptoms of actual dehydration, you may also have vomiting, diarrhea, or the feeling that you "can't keep anything down," all of which could be causing the dehydration.

Signs and tests

A physical examination may also show signs of:

- Low blood pressure
- Blood pressure that drops when you go from lying down to standing
- Rapid heart rate
- Poor skin turgor—the skin may lack its normal elasticity and sag back into position slowly when pinched up into a fold by the doctor; normally, skin springs right back into position
- Delayed capillary refill
- Shock

Tests include:

- Blood chemistries (to check electrolytes, especially sodium, potassium, and bicarbonate levels)
- Urine specific gravity (a high specific gravity indicates significant dehydration)
- BUN (blood urea nitrogen—may be elevated with dehydration)
- Creatinine (may be elevated with dehydration)
- Complete blood count (CBC) to look for signs of concentrated blood

Other tests may be done to determine the specific cause of the dehydration (for example, a blood sugar to check for diabetes).

Treatment

Drinking fluids is usually sufficient for mild dehydration. It is better to have frequent, small amounts of fluid (using a teaspoon or syringe for an infant or child) rather than trying to force large amounts of fluid at one time. Drinking too much fluid at once can bring on more vomiting.

Electrolyte solutions or freezer pops are especially effective. These are available at pharmacies. Sport drinks contain a lot of sugar and can cause or worsen diarrhea. In infants and children, avoid using water as the primary replacement fluid.

Intravenous fluids and hospitalization may be necessary for moderate to severe dehydration. The doctor will try to identify and then treat the cause of the dehydration.

Most cases of stomach viruses (also called viral gastroenteritis) tend to resolve on their own after a few days. See also: diarrhea.

Expectations (prognosis)

When dehydration is recognized and treated promptly, the outcome is generally good.

Complications

Untreated severe dehydration may result in seizures, permanent brain damage, or death.

Calling your health care provider

Call 911 if you or your child have the following symptoms:

- Dizziness
- Lightheadedness
- Lethargy
- Confusion

Call your doctor right away if you have any of the following symptoms:

- Not producing tears
- Sunken eyes
- Little or no urine output for 8 hours
- Dry skin that sags back into position slowly when pinched up into a fold
- Dry mouth or dry eyes
- Fast-beating heart
- Blood in the stool or vomit
- Listlessness and inactiveness

Also call your doctor if:

- An illness is combined with the inability to keep down any fluids
- Vomiting has been going on for longer than 24 hours in an adult or longer than 12 hours in a child
- Diarrhea has lasted longer than 5 days in an adult or child
- You or your child have excessive urination, especially if there is a family history of diabetes or you are taking diuretics

Prevention

Even when healthy, drink plenty of fluid every day. Drink more when the weather is hot or you are exercising.

Carefully monitor someone who is ill, especially an infant, child, or older adult. If you believe that dehydration is developing, consult a doctor before the person becomes moderately or severely dehydrated. Begin fluid replacement as soon as vomiting and diarrhea start—DO NOT wait for signs of dehydration.

Always encourage the person to drink during an illness, and remember that a person's fluid needs are greater when that person has fever, vomiting, or diarrhea. The easiest signs to monitor are urine output (there should be frequent wet diapers or trips to the bathroom), saliva in the mouth, and tears when crying.

Website on Medication Management for Older Adults is Launched

Nicole Brandt, PharmD, associate professor and director of the geropharm track at the University of Maryland School of Pharmacy, has created the website Medication Management for Older Adults. Developed with funding from the Geriatrics and Gerontology Education and Research Program and the Johns Hopkins Geriatric Education Center Consortium, the website expands on an earlier award-winning website—Medication Management in Assisted Living Facilities.

The new site provides information for health care providers and students on the particular needs of older adults in assisted living, nursing home, and community settings. The website includes national guidelines as well as Maryland-specific guidelines and regulations, plus conference proceedings and webinars.

Stephanie Walters, School of Pharmacy PharmD student, assisted in developing the website. MedSchool Maryland Productions, a University of Maryland School of Medicine program, designed the site.

Maintain Your Emotional Balance

Changes can be traumatic at any given time throughout our lifespan. Each of us may experience periods of stress. For older adults, changes such as retirement, serious health issues or the loss of loved ones can produce feelings of emptiness, sadness and grief. Adjusting to change may be difficult. Sometimes due to stress, the scales can be tipped from "the blues" into clinical depression. Many people have false ideas about depression. There may be a lot of misinformation in the public concerning the illness of depression. Maintaining an emotional balance is critical to achieving a healthy outlook of life. Some questions to consider are:

What is depression? Is depression just a result of aging? What are the symptoms of depression? What can I do if I am depressed? Take a few moments to test yourself with the following questions, selecting one of the answers under each number.

1. Depression is

a. A normal part of aging
b. Not a normal part of aging
c. Uncommon among older adults

2. Symptoms of depression are

a. Loss of interest in activities
b. Nervousness and/or irritability
c. Frequent crying
d. May include all of the above

3. Symptoms of Depression may be caused by

a. A thyroid disorder
b. Medications or other medical conditions
c. Both of the above

4. Medical conditions that co-exist with depression are:

a. Heart disease or stoke
b. Diabetes
c. Cancer
d. Parkinson's Disease
e. All of the above

(Answers appear at the end of the article)

Depression is treatable. The first step is to discuss your feelings with your doctor; as with any illness, early diagnosis and treatment is more effective in dealing with depression. Treatment choices are different for each individual. However, both medication and counseling used in combination are typically more effective than medication alone. Your doctor will inform you of possible side effects of medications, as well as the length of time required for your medication to become effective. The next step to keep in mind is to never discontinue your medication without another discussion with your doctor.

A resource available to those individuals suffering with depression is a program offered by the Garrett County Health Department. The Older Adult Transition Services (OATS) provides for visits by referral. You may contact 301-334-7777 for more information.

Answers:

1. b Depression is common among older adults. Doctors may overlook signs of depression because older people may be unwilling to discuss their feelings.

2. d. Depression may be related to changes that occur in the brain and body as we age. Older adults are encouraged to discuss their feelings with their doctor.

3. c. If an older adult is taking several medications for other conditions, seeing a doctor is especially important.

4. e. Depression can also co-occur with other serious medical illnesses. Sometimes medications taken for these illnesses may cause side effects that contribute to depression.

What Does "Healthy Eating" Mean?

According to the Dietary Guidelines for Americans, a healthy diet:

- Emphasizes vegetables, fruits, whole grains, and fat-free or low-fat milk products. Includes lean meats, poultry, fish, beans, eggs, and nuts. Is low in saturated fats, trans fats, cholesterol, salt, and added sugars.
- Balances the calories you take in from food and beverages with the calories burned through physicaactivity to maintain a healthy weight.

Here are some tips to help you meet the guidelines:

- Eating fruits and vegetables of different colors gives your body a wide range of valuable nutrients.
- Include foods that contain fiber such as fruits, vegetables, beans, and whole-grains.
- Eat lean cuts of meat and poultry. Trim away excess fat and remove skin from poultry before cooking.
- Pay attention to portion sizes, especially at restaurants. Smaller portions equafewer calories.
- Season your food with lemon juice, herbs, and spices, rather than using butter and salt.
- Choose foods that are baked, broiled, braised, grilled, steamed, sautéed, or boiled, rather than fried.
- When eating out, select a dish from the menu, rather than getting your money's worth at the all-you-can-eat buffet.

Quick Tip

Getting enough fluids each day is important. Did you know that beverages aren't the only way to get valuable fluids? Fruits and vegetables help, too!

Emergency Preparedness Information

Get Tech Ready

According to The American Red Cross, the Internet—including online news sites and social media platforms—is the third most popular way for Americans to gather emergency information and let their loved ones know they are safe.

Through the use of everyday technology, individuals, families, responders and organizations can successfully prepare for, adapt to and recover from disruptions brought on by emergencies and/or disasters. With effective planning, it is possible to take advantage of technology before, during and after a crisis to communicate with loved ones and manage your financial affairs.

Keep your contacts updated across all of your channels, including phone, email and social media. This will make it easy to reach out to the right people quickly to get information and supply updates. Consider creating a group list serve of your top contacts.

- Learn how to send updates via text and Internet from your mobile phone to your contacts and social channels in case voice communications are not available. Text messages and the Internet often have the ability to work in the event of a phone service disruption.
- Keep extra batteries for your phone in a safe place or purchase a solar-powered or hand crank charger. These chargers are good emergency tools to keep your laptop and other small electronics working in the event of a power outage. If you own a car, purchase a car phone charger because you can charge your phone if you lose power at your home.
- Program "In Case of Emergency" (ICE) contacts into your cell phone so emergency personnel can contact those people for you if you are unable to use your phone. Let your ICE contacts know that they are programmed into your phone and inform them of any medical issues or other special needs you may have.
- If you have a traditional landline (non-broadband or VOIP) phone, keep at least one non-cordless phone in your home because if it will work even if you lose power.
- If you are evacuated and have call-forwarding on your home phone, forward your home phone number to your cell phone number.
- If you do not have a cell phone, keep a prepaid phone card to use if needed during or after a disaster.
- Prepare a family contact sheet. This should include at least one out-of-town contact that may be better able to reach family members in an emergency.
- Have a battery-powered or hand-cranked radio or television available (with spare batteries).

The following are additional tips when making phone calls and using your smartphone during or after a disaster:

- Keep all phone calls brief. If you need to use a phone, try to convey only vital information to emergency personnel and/or family.
- If you are unsuccessful in completing a call using your cell phone, wait ten seconds before redialing to help reduce network congestion.
- Conserve your cell phone battery by reducing the brightness of your screen, placing your phone in airplane mode, and closing apps you are not using that draw power, unless you need to use the phone.
- If you lose power, you can charge your cell phone in your car. Just be sure your car is in a well-ventilated place (remove it from the garage) and do not go to your car until any danger has passed. You can also listen to your car radio for important news alerts.
- If you do not have a hands-free device in your car, stop driving or pull over to the side of the road before making a call. Do not text on a cell phone, talk, or "tweet" without a hands free device while driving.

Immediately following a disaster, resist using your mobile device to watch streaming videos, download music or videos, or play video games, all of which can add to network congestion. Limiting use of these services can help potentially life-saving emergency calls get through to 9-1-1.

- For non-emergency communications, use text messaging, e-mail, or social media instead of making voice calls on your cell phone to avoid tying up voice networks. Data-based services like texts and e-mails are less likely to experience network congestion. You can also use social media to post your status to let family and friends know you are okay. In addition to Facebook and Twitter, you can use resources such as the American Red Cross's Safe and Well program.

Go To The Dogs

Several people have told me, "You don't look your age."

I will admit, I just passed my 88th birthday, and still scamper around like a kid!

"Amazing," they say. Not really.

Clean living, non-fat foods, humorous attitude, coming from a family that was always active, and most important of all, a DOG.

I've had a dog since I was 7 years old.

I've been living in Maryland for 16 years. I came from Long Island in New York, and when I moved here I made myself a promise, I'd walk the dog or dogs, at least twice, sometimes 3 times, and if the weather was agreeable, even 4 times a day, rain or shine, heat or cold.

I now have just one dog, a frisky Lab who loves to walk, so WE walk. Each walk is at least a mile long.

Sure, I have the usual aches and pains, but a promise is a promise, and walks relieve most of the pains; the remaining ones I overlook.

I have friends, relatives, and neighbors who ask, "How do you keep so spry?" My answer is always, "Get a dog and walk."

When not walking, a dog is a lifelong friend, and a bit of petting is good for the dog and myself.

Garrett Highlands Pipes and Drums

The historic sounds of the Scottish Highlands. The pageantry of the military parade. The Scots ancestry so many of us share in the Appalachian Mountains. What is it about the Great Highland bagpipe and the sound of the drums that draws us to the proceedings? And why would we join? For seven "seniors" who recently joined the Garrett Highlands Pipes and Drums (GHPD), it was for various reasons, but had much to do with wanting to make music part of our retirement plans and pursue a long standing interest in being part of this great community band.

John MacGowan of Swanton was 28 when he first attended the World Pipe Band Championship in Scotland. Later, in 1990, he first saw the GHPD band marching in the Autumn Glory Parade. He asked the Hon. Fred Thayer, one of the GHPD founders (along with Charles P. "Chip" Evans) and then Pipe Major, about the band and was told that GPHD was a "teaching" band. When John moved to Garrett County full time, he joined the band in 2002 under the direction of Pipe Major Jerry McGee. Now John plays at as many functions as his schedule allows and provides assistance to the band as its Archivist.

Kenny Braitman retired from the FSU Administration and now has horses and a blacksmith shop in Eastern Garrett County. He decided to learn to play the tenor drum at age 58 and took up pipe instruction at age 62. "I became interested when I heard my wife, Annie Bristow (also a "senior" and the band's primary bagpipe instructor), playing with the band and enjoyed the uniqueness of Great Highland pipes and their most unusual sound. It strongly lends itself to certain types of music." Annie says of her motivation, "I started playing pipes when I was 25 and was with the Dallas band but stopped a few years later when I had a baby and then moved from Texas. I always wanted to get back to them, which I did the summer of 2004, at age 54, by registering for a GCC continuing education class with Jerry McGee. It was part of my retirement planning."

Lynn McClive Farnsworth of Accident retired from teaching, non-profit consulting, and corporate book sales at Borders, and joined at 61 after an invitation from a band member to learn the tenor drum; this drum is fun to play especially because of the theatrics. The tenor drummers are those who have learned the special technique of spinning their drumsticks around between beats, which adds great flare to the performance. Lynn was motivated, like many of our new members, because she missed music in her life. She had played oboe and cello 40 years ago.

Kenny played clarinet, John guitar, and Marci McClive (Bear Creek) played French horn. Marci has performed from time to time as a recorder player in the Marsh Mountain Renaissance Consort for the last 30 years, but her lifelong dream to play Scottish Highland tunes was satisfied when she retired. "I happened to meet Annie Bristow in the hall at Frostburg State where we both were teaching and she told me she was starting up a bagpipe instruction class. I didn't even hesitate. I can't believe I finally got a chance to play this magnificent instrument."

When asked about her learning experience, Lynn said, "I learned to play the tenor drum from short classes before each rehearsal (Wednesday nights at the Oakland Fire Hall); folks couldn't have been more encouraging." Kenny and Marci met for piping instruction for 15 lessons and then had the same encouraging experience among the pipers who suggested the pair play their practice chanters while the band practiced. They were given helpful hints about how to set up and tweak their pipes for the best sound and managing their stamina. John suggests "the bagpipes are not as hard as they look and the teachers are really supportive and helpful. The band is a great bunch of supportive people." And, they were all given much advice about the wearing of the "uniform." All members of GHPD wear the traditional Scottish kilt, the plaid design or "tartan" of the Colquhoun Clan (pronounced Cahoón) in honor of Judge Thayer's ancestry.

The band plays a regular series of parades and special concerts, all of which can be viewed online at http://www.garrettpipes.com/event.html. Most events are played within the county for various town festivals and organizations. Because GHPD is proudly associated with the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department (OVFD), it plays an important role at the Autumn Glory festival with the Firemen's Parade on Thursday, a concert at the fire hall on Saturday morning, and marching with a color guard from OVFD in the Autumn Glory Feature Parade on Saturday. The band also performs throughout the spring and summer at various Highland Festivals and parades in the tri-state area.

When discussing what it is like to be in a parade at an older age, Kenny says, "I would say that at any age marching in a parade is enjoyable, you contribute to the community, to band members, and the audience is always new as you progress down the road." This is spoken by a determined man who is a double leg amputee from the Viet Nam War, and who musters the energy to walk the parade routes, some as long as a mile. "Parades are challenging for older folks but most can be done, and there is the thrill of being in a good hometown parade," adds Lynn. For Marci it is the honor of wearing the uniform of her heritage, of playing well, and hearing the response of the crowd. She agrees with John who says, "It is soooo much fun to give delight to people." GHPD provides fanfare of a different kind and is honored to be led by members of OVFD in a color guard. A Highland military band typically has an official drum major in the lead and official banner bearers, or "guidon," great positions for older adults. These positions require only that the person learn about marching and practice the moves that go with marching a parade route while the band stops and starts its music. The band is currently recruiting individuals for these positions.

When the band stands still in "clan circle" to perform a concert, even more can be accomplished. Kenny: "Concerts are most fun for me because you don't have to walk a great distance and you can focus solely on the music. It also provides opportunity to play songs which are difficult to march to." The band has a repertoire of many tunes, which is fun but does offer a challenge to the new player. John: "We have to memorize everything; there are no music stands for bagpipes." But new pipers and drummers are coached along. Not everyone has to play everything right away. What these seniors are finding out is that the challenge of learning new tunes has a very positive impact on their memory skills, provides motivation to practice often (no boredom here), and keeps them physically active. It also improves breathing! With respect to attending practices each Wednesday at the Oakland fire hall, Kenny says, "I play each week with the band to improve my performance, see my friends, and hear fun music."

What's in a uniform? Mentioned earlier, all members of the band wear the kilt. For parades, the band wears a special shirt with the band's logo and blue "hose" with red "flashes" (socks and garters). All wear the practical "sporran," or pouch worn from the belt. For formal occasions, members wear white shirts and black tie and the black Argyll jacket. And the special shoes, Ghille brogue, are traditional. Military hardware includes the sgian dubh (skain doo) in the right "hose" and drummers traditionally wear the dirk, or long dagger. Most members of the band have chosen special buckles, kilt pins, and clan badges on their "bonnets" to honor their family history. The Grant clan tartan square worn on the GHPD bonnets honors Rev. John Grant, who recently retired from the band after many dedicated years of service. GHPD provides parts of the uniform while individual members are responsible for some of the clothing.

GHPD operates under the direction of Pipe Major Paul Browning. Alma Glotfelty is the Clan Chief. GHPD is governed by a board elected within the membership and includes members of rank. In military style, it is possible for all members of the band to earn higher rank. Band business is decided very collegially however. In addition to regular business meetings, band members get together for social gatherings which they all enjoy.

Individual members of the band play at private affairs such as weddings and funerals and occasionally represent GHPD at special events. Recently, Cecil Glotfelty, himself a veteran, performed "Amazing Grace" at the Garrett College 911 memorial for those service men and women lost in the Afghanistan and Iraq wars over the last ten years. Other members of the band play in other community groups as well. Lynn Farnsworth plays percussion for the Garrett Community Band concert and she, Kenny, Annie and Marci have formed a small ensemble called Mòrbheanna in which they play Scottish, Irish, and contemporary tunes on Gibson Fireside pipes, a smaller, indoor version of the Great Highland pipe.

GHPD offers regular instruction for pipe and drum students. You don't have to have a musical background or know how to read music. They will teach you. GHPD is also recruiting new auxiliary members for parade duty. If you are interested in joining the group, contact our Drum Sergeant, Richard Kutchman (ringorick@hotmail.com), or our Pipe Sergeant, Annie Bristow (piperannie@gmail.com). Or you may call Marci McClive at 301-501-0304. To learn an instrument, 15 lessons are provided usually for 15 weeks at a tuition of $300. If you join the band and remain playing for one year, 50% of your lesson cost is returned. Scholarships may be available. Location and time of lessons are arranged with both the students' and instructor's schedule in mind. Pipers eventually purchase their own set of bagpipes. Drums are generally provided by the band. While winter lessons are being offered by contacting Annie or Rick directly, lessons will also be offered though Garrett College's Continuing Education Division starting in April or May. You should contact Sarah at 301.387.3069 to get on their contact list.

GHPD is sponsored by OVFD, the Garrett County Arts Council, and the Maryland State Arts Council because it contributes to the cultural life of this community. For John MacGowan, living in Garrett County and having access to the high quality of performing arts here is a joy. "We are fortunate to live in an area that has so many opportunities for hearing and participating in the arts. GHPD is another musical group you can join in addition to, say, the community band, choral society and other small groups. So don't just sit on the curb and watch the parade pass you by. Stand up, put on a kilt and join in." His grandfather, who was born in Scotland, would be very proud, aye?

So what will it take for you to consider wearing the kilt?

Questions And Answers: Living Well Program

by Suzanne Carley, Garrett County Living Well Program Coordinator

What is the Living Well Program?

Living Well with Chronic Conditions and Living Well with Diabetes are evidence-based self management programs developed at Stanford University in collaboration with Kaiser Permanente. The workshops meet two and a half hours once a week for six weeks. The program is taught by 2 trained lay leaders. Workshops provide information and teach practical skills on managing chronic health problems. In Garrett County, workshops are sponsored by the Area Agency on Aging and are free to anyone 21 years of age and older.

Is the Living Well Program done elsewhere in Maryland, United States or in the world?

The Chronic Disease Self Management program (CDSMP) is available throughout the United States and many countries in the World. In Maryland, the CDSMP is known as the Living Well program. This program operates under a statewide license with the Maryland Office on Aging and is available throughout the State of Maryland.

Who has taken the Living Well Program here in Garrett County?

Eight-eight people living in Garrett County have participated in a Living Well workshop. The free workshops have been held at locations throughout Garrett County, i.e., Senior Centers, community centers, apartment buildings, churches, Health Department and fitness center. There are 6 workshops scheduled for 2012 so far.

What are the benefits of attending a Living Well workshop?

During the development of the CDSMP program at Stanford, people who participated in the program when compared to those who did not showed improvements in exercise and cognitive symptom management, better communications with physicians, spent fewer days in the hospital and had fewer outpatient visits and hospitalizations. Some of the participants in Garrett County have written letters to their physicians to let their doctor know how they have benefited from the program. The Living Well program does not conflict with existing treatments. It is designed to enhance regular treatment and disease-specific education.

How can I get involved with the Living Well program?

Lay Leaders are a very important part of the program. There is a 24 hour training period prior to being able to lead a workshop. Lay Leaders must lead a workshop within 6 months of their training to obtain their certification. After that, they only need to lead one workshop a year to stay active.

Can the Living Well program come to my workplace, church or book club?

Yes! The Living Well program can travel anywhere and anytime depending upon lay leader availability. The program is free and open to anyone 21 years of age or older here in Garrett County.

How is the Living Well program funded?

The Living Well program in Garrett County is sponsored by the Area Agency on Aging and made possible by funding under the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 and with funds granted to the MD Office on Aging by the Federal Administration on Aging. GGEAR Geriatrics and Gerontology Education and Research Program, University of MD, Baltimore, provided support for program materials such as the companion book and gas cards for lay leaders.

How can I find out more about the Living Well Program in Garrett County?

Stroke Risk Linked to Thinking Problems

Known risk factors for stroke may also boost your chance of developing cognitive problems, according to a new study. The results suggest that keeping blood pressure in check might help protect cognitive health.

Strokes occur when blood vessels that supply the brain rupture or become blocked. Without nutrient-rich blood, brain cells malfunction and die. Strokes can harm memory, language and other cognitive abilities.

Your chances of having a stroke are affected by age, blood pressure, heart health and diabetes. But what if you're at risk for stroke and haven't had one? Can the factors that affect stroke risk cause cognitive decline as blood vessels deteriorate?

To learn more, NIH-funded scientists studied nearly 24,000 people for an average of 4 years. Annual tests looked at each participant's cognitive health and likelihood of developing a stroke.

During the study, more than 1,900 people without an evident stroke showed cognitive impairment. The researchers found that high blood pressure, older age, and enlargement of the heart independently predicted cognitive decline.

"Our results emphasize the importance of early intervention to treat high blood pressure and preserve cognitive health prior to a stroke or other cerebral event," says the study's lead author, Dr. Frederick Unverzagt of Indiana University School of Medicine.

Notes From the SHIP Office

What are Your Medicare Part B premiums like in 2012?

Your premium, the monthly fee you pay for Medicare coverage, will most likely go up slightly next year. Most people with Medicare Part B outpatient insurance will pay a monthly Part B premium of $99.90 in 2012. This is an increase of $3.50 for people who have paid $96.40 since 2009.

You've paid the same Part B premium amount for the past three years because there was no Cost of Living Adjustment (COLA) to Social Security benefits in 2010 or 2011. The COLA increases your Social Security check each year to reflect increases in the cost of living. By law, your Social Security check is not allowed to decrease because your Part B premium increased. This is called being "held harmless." Because the amount of your Social Security check stayed the same since 2009, so did the amount deducted for your Part B premium.

In 2012, the standard Part B premium will be $99.90. The COLA will raise Social Security benefits by 3.6 percent. This increase in Social Security benefits, for most people, will be greater than the Part B premium increase, so most people will not be held harmless in 2012. Instead, they will see their premium increase by $3.50 and will pay the standard 2012 Part B premium of $99.90.

There are a few exceptions to this. People who were not held harmless or were new to Medicare in 2010 or 2011 paid higher premiums of $110.50 or $115.40. Their premium will decrease to $99.90 in 2012.

In addition, people with higher annual incomes – above $85,000 for a single person and $170,000 for a couple – pay more for Part B. Their Part B premium in 2012 will be based on their income.

If you have a Medicare Advantage plan, such as an HMO or PPO, you may have to pay an additional premium to the private insurance company that provides your Medicare benefits.

What is Hospice

Centuries ago, hospice meant a place of refuge for the wary traveler to seek rest and care. Over the years, hospice has developed into a concept of providing care in the home, nursing home, assistant living homes and group homes for the terminally ill. Our services include pain control, physical, emotional, social and spiritual support for the patient and the patient's family during the illness and through the grief and bereavement process.

Hospice of Garrett County, Inc., a non-profit organization began caring for the terminally ill in 1983. We operate under the direction of a seventeen member Board of Directors. Our Hospice Team consists of a Medical Director, Executive Director, Registered Nurses, Certified Nursing Assistants, Social Worker, Chaplain, patient care volunteers, bereavement support, office staff and auxiliary volunteers.

Who needs Hospice? Patients that have been diagnosed with a terminal illness with a prognosis of six months or less to live if the disease pursues its normal course. When the disease doesn't take the normal course, the patient may remain on Hospice as long as they continue to decline. Many people assume that we only admit cancer patients; this isn't the case. Any illness that is reason for the six month prognosis qualifies you for admission. To list a few: ALS, Heart Disease, Respiratory Failure, Renal Failure, Dementia, General Decline, End Stage Alzheimer's and others.

Hospice care is available to persons of all ages. The youngest patient in Garrett County's Hospice was 6 months. The oldest was 104.

Referrals & Admissions: A family member, patient, friend, physician, or a health care professional may make a referral. The patient must be aware of the referral and the patient's physician must order the hospice care.

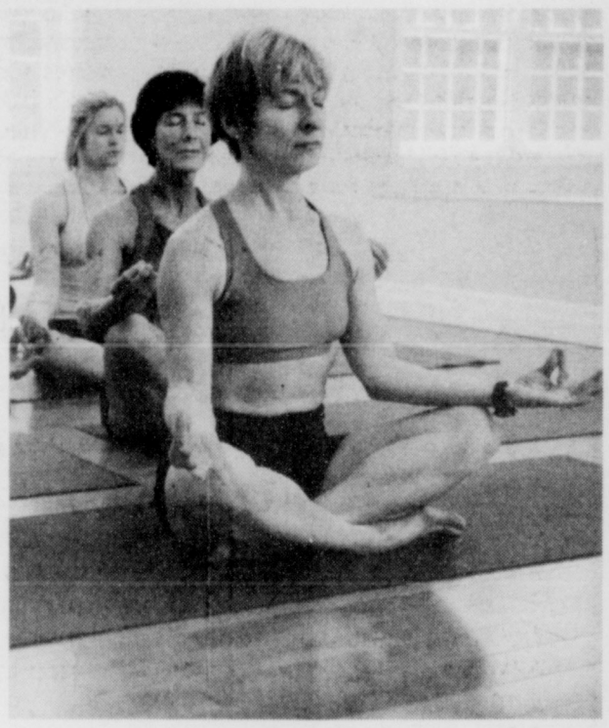
The patient will be eligible for services if he or she has been diagnosed with a terminal illness and desires palliative (symptom control) rather than curative treatments.

Volunteers

Hospice is always in need of more volunteers. Patient care volunteers attend volunteer training classes on subjects such as HIPAA, patient privacy, confidentiality, infection control, personal care, signs and symptoms of approaching death and listening skills.

For more information you may call Hospice of Garrett County at 301-334-5151 and in the Grantsville area at 800-521-5252.

Yoga or Stretching Eases Low Back Pain



Weekly classes of yoga or intensive stretching can reduce low back pain and improve back movement, a new study shows. Both types of classes were equally effective, and their benefits lasted for months after the classes ended.

Low back pain is the most common cause of job-related disability and a leading reason for missed work. Many treatments exist, but none have proven highly effective against long-lasting back pain.

Small studies have hinted that yoga might help. Yoga often combines physical postures, breathing techniques and relaxation. Some experts suspected that yoga's mind-body focus might give it an edge over other exercise treatments for back pain.

To investigate, NIH-funded scientists randomly divided over 200 people with low back pain into 3 groups. One had weekly classes of yoga for 3 months. Another had classes of intensive stretching. The third group received a self-care book that suggested exercises and lifestyle changes to reduce back pain.

After 3 months, the yoga group had less pain and more back movement than the self-care group. The yoga group remained better even at 6 months. However, stretching was just as effective as yoga.

"We expected back pain to ease more with yoga than with stretching, so our findings surprised us," says Dr. Karen J. Sherman of the Group Health Research Institute in Seattle. "Our results suggest that both yoga and stretching can be good, safe options for people who are willing to try physical activity to relieve their moderate low back pain."

You're Never Too Old

Keep Active as You Age

We've all heard that exercise is good for you. Did you know that it's as true for older people as it is for any age group? You're never too old to get moving, get stronger and improve your health.

Fitting exercise and physical activity into your day can enhance your life in so many ways. Regular physical activity can improve your balance and boost or maintain your strength and fitness. It may also improve your mood and help you manage or lessen the impact of conditions like diabetes, heart disease, osteoporosis and depression.

Despite these proven benefits, exercise and physical activity rates among older people are surprisingly low. Only about 30% of people ages 45 to 64 say they engage in regular leisure-time physical activity. This falls to 25% of those between the ages of 65 and 74 and 11% of people age 85 and older.

Experts recommend 4 types of exercise for older adults: endurance, balance, strength and flexibility. Brisk walking, dancing and other endurance exercises improve the health of your heart, lungs and circulatory system. These exercises can make it easier for you to mow the lawn, climb stairs and do other daily activities. Strength exercises include lifting weights or using resistance bands. They can increase muscle strength to help with activities such as carrying groceries or lifting grandchildren. Balance exercises can help prevent falls—a major health risk for older adults. Stretching, or flexibility exercises, can give you more freedom of movement for bending to tie your shoes or looking over your shoulder as you back out of the driveway.

"Even if you haven't been active previously, it's important to get started and stay active," says Dr. Richard J. Hodes, director of NIH's National Institute on Aging. "We know that people want to live independently for as long as they possibly can. By exercising regularly and including more physical activity in their daily routine, older people can preserve their physical function, which is key to doing the everyday things they want to do."

To help you get started and keep moving, NIH brought together some of the nation's leading experts on aging, exercise and motivation. They developed a guide to exercise for older adults. The guide serves as the basis for a new national exercise and physical activity campaign for people ages 50 and older. It's called Go4Life.

"Older adults can exercise safely, even those who have physical limitations," Hodes says. "Go4Life is based on studies showing the benefits of exercise and physical activity for older people, including those with chronic health conditions."

Go4Life exercises are designed to be done safely at home without special equipment or clothing. The free book Exercise & Physical Activity: Your Everyday Guide from the National Institute on Aging is the core resource for the campaign. Other free materials, such as an exercise DVD and tip sheets, are also available. "Workout to Go," a mini exercise guide, shows you how you can be active anytime, anywhere.

To learn more, visit the Go4Life website. You'll find exercises, success stories and tips to help you stay motivated. Or call 1-800-222-2225, or e-mail niaic@nia.nih.gov.

Looking at Lupus—An Attack from Within

Lupus is a complex and mysterious disorder. It arises when the cells that are supposed to protect your body from disease mistakenly assault your own healthy cells and tissues. This attack from within can damage your joints, skin and most other parts of your body. NIH-funded scientists are working to uncover the causes of lupus and find better ways to diagnose and treat the disease.

"Just about anyone can get lupus, but it mostly affects young women. It can rob them of the prime years of their lives," says NIH's Dr. Mark Gourley, an expert on lupus and related disorders. The disease often strikes between the ages of 15 and 44. Lupus afflicts about 9 times more women than men. For unknown reasons, African American women are at especially high risk.

No one knows what causes lupus. But researchers suspect that a combination of genes and the environment is to blame.

Lupus comes in different forms. The most common and serious type is called systemic lupus erythematosus. It can cause severe problems throughout the body. Other types can cause temporary skin sores after sun exposure or long-term rashes that may lead to scarring.

Lupus can be difficult to diagnose because its symptoms vary so widely. People with mild lupus may have just a few symptoms, such as skin rashes or achy joints. In other cases, lupus can harm essential organs, including the kidneys and brain.

"Diagnosis is one of the biggest challenges patients can face," says Gourley. "The most frequent and common symptom is overwhelming fatigue." But extreme tiredness could be mistaken for many other disorders, including sleep problems. Because of the variable symptoms, some patients can go for months or years without an accurate diagnosis.

No single test can identify lupus, either. Your doctor might perform some tests to rule out other possible causes of your symptoms. Blood tests can also determine if you have certain immune system proteins called antibodies that might be a sign of lupus. These tests also detect inflammation, an internal irritation and swelling that can be caused by your immune system mistakenly attacking your own healthy cells.

Lupus has no cure. But medicines and lifestyle changes can help control it. Patients with joint or chest pain might use anti-inflammation drugs, such as ibuprofen or naproxen. Corticosteroids are stronger drugs that can suppress inflammation, but long-term use may lead to severe side effects. Other drugs can block production or stop the function of immune cells.

In March 2011, a new medication called belimumab was approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. "It's the first new therapy to be approved for lupus in over 50 years," says Gourley. The drug is expensive, and it doesn't work for everyone. Still, it's led the way for several promising new therapies now being tested in clinical trials.

You can take other steps to lessen or prevent lupus symptoms. "Follow your typical mom's advice," says Gourley. "Get plenty of sleep. Eat right. Take good care of your body and exercise. Wear sunscreen. And if you're on medications, take them as your doctor recommends. That's the best thing you can do for lupus."

Weighing in on Dietary Fats

Some Fats Are Healthier Than Others

With the winter holidays upon us, you'll likely be surrounded by family, friends and plenty of good food. Many of these foods, though, can be high in fat. Learn which fats are naughty and which are nice to your health. Then you can make smarter food choices.

We need a certain amount of fat in our diets to stay healthy. Fats provide needed energy in the form of calories. Fats help our bodies absorb important vitamins—called fat-soluble vitamins—including vitamins A, D and E. Fats also make foods more flavorful and help us feel full. Fats are especially important for infants and toddlers, because dietary fat contributes to proper growth and development.

"Fats are really the most concentrated source of energy in the foods we eat, and our bodies need that energy," says NIH nutritionist Dr. Margaret McDowell. "Fats are truly an essential nutrient."

Problems arise, though, if we eat too much fat. Dietary fats have more than twice as many calories per gram as either proteins or carbohydrates like sugar and starch. Excess calories, of course, can pack on the pounds and raise your risk for diabetes, cancer and other conditions.

Eating the "wrong" kinds of fats can trigger additional health hazards. "Some fats are better for our bodies than others," McDowell says. "We should really aim to eat the right types of fats."

Foods can contain a mixture of different fats. Unsaturated fats are considered "good" fats. They're sometimes listed as "monounsaturated" and "polyunsaturated" fat on Nutrition Facts labels. These can promote health if eaten in the right amounts. They are generally liquid at room temperature, and are known as oils. You'll find healthful unsaturated fats in fish, nuts and most vegetable oils, including canola, corn, olive and safflower oils.

The so-called "bad" fats are saturated fats and trans fats. They tend to be solid at room temperature. Solid fats include butter, meat fats, stick margarine, shortening, and coconut and palm oils. They're often found in chocolates, baked goods, and deep-fried and processed foods.

"When we eat too many solid fats, we put our bodies at risk. These fats tend to raise total blood cholesterol, as well as the part of cholesterol known as low-density lipoprotein (LDL) cholesterol," says McDowell. "When those cholesterol levels are out of whack and too high, it's a risk factor for cardiovascular disease."

"When there's too much cholesterol in the blood, the excess can get trapped in artery walls and build up," adds Dr. Catherine Loria, an NIH expert on nutrition and heart health. "The buildup can develop into atherosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, which can lead to coronary heart disease."

Experts say that the total fat intake for adults ages 19 and older should be 20% to 35% of the calories eaten each day. For children ages 4 to 18, it should be 25% to 35%.

Experts also say you should get less than 10% of your calories from saturated fatty acids. NIH-funded studies have shown that replacing the solid fats in your diet with healthful unsaturated fats can have a positive impact. "When you look at total fat intake, using unsaturated fats in place of some of the saturated fats actually lowers your total cholesterol levels, and mainly your LDL cholesterol levels, which is a good thing," says Loria.

Other NIH-funded research found that, when it comes to weight loss, the source of calories—whether from fat, protein or carbohydrate—isn't as important as the number of calories you consume. But when it comes to risk factors for heart disease, replacing some carbohydrates with protein or unsaturated fats can greatly improve blood cholesterol. In a specialized diet designed to lower blood pressure, using unsaturated fats in place of some carbohydrates boosted blood levels of "good" cholesterol (HDL cholesterol) and caused a more healthful drop in blood pressure.

"It's about becoming a label reader," says Joanne Gallivan, a registered dietitian who heads NIH's National Diabetes Education Program. To eat healthy, she says, "you need to read the Nutrition Facts label to learn the amount of fat and calories in the food, the amounts per serving, and what percent of calories come from fat." The nutrition label also shows the amounts of unhealthy saturated and trans fats.

Eating healthy fats and less total fat can be especially challenging over the holidays, however. "You want to enjoy the foods and the celebration. You shouldn't think of the holidays as a time to deprive yourself," says McDowell.

One way to cut fat at holiday gatherings is to simply reduce your portion sizes. "Choose more lean meats, like poultry without the skin. Eat more fruits, vegetables and whole-grain foods," says Gallivan.

When preparing recipes, try to use lower-fat ingredients. "Low-fat and fat-free yogurt and milk still contain the important proteins and minerals found in the full-fat versions, but you're getting less saturated fat and cholesterol," McDowell says. "In some recipes, you can use applesauce or egg whites, instead of oil. In general, bake, broil or grill instead of frying."

Learn to read between the lines on Nutrition Facts labels. "If a food is labeled 'low-fat,' that doesn't necessarily mean it's low in calories," says Gallivan. Nonfat cookies, crackers and other products may contain added sugar and salt to boost their flavor. Added sugar can add calories, and too much salt can raise blood pressure.

"If you indulge a bit over the holidays, just be sure that the next day you go back to following a healthy meal plan and being active," says Gallivan. And remember, when it comes to saturated or trans fats in your diet, you'll help your health if you choose wisely and trim the fat.

Healthy Goals for 2012 Are Within Your Reach

As the calendar changes from 2011 to 2012, it is a good time to consider some reachable goals to enhance our quality of life. Modest lifestyle changes now may help us stay active in the coming years.

Keep in mind that research shows it is not too late for smart food choices and other good health habits that can help reduce the risk of chronic diseases like heart disease, osteoporosis, and diabetes.

We are here to help you, one step at a time. Each month our senior nutrition sites provide a brief "nutrition tidbit" to add to your knowledge and smart choices.

In addition, some special programs are available as a result of our partnership with the University of Maryland Extension.

For instance, in January, at the Mary Browning Senior Center in Oakland, a four-session program "Health by Design" will be presented. These sessions will include hands-on activities and taste testing.

Then in March and April the multi-session "Eat Smart Live Strong" program is designed with older adults in mind. It will assist in making reasonable yet healthy food choices, as well as, incorporating simple ideas to keep us active. This program will be presented at the Grantsville Senior Center and the Mary Browning Senior Center in Oakland. Check your BBQ list of activities for the day and time.

As these programs get near, flyers will be displayed at the Senior Centers and other locations.

So, making wise food choices as we grow older might be easier than you think! Especially if you mark your calendars and take part in these fun and motivating upcoming programs!

Recipe Round Up Winners!

Everyone wins when we find ways to add nutritious dairy items to our meals. Usually we receive recipe suggestions that can be incorporated into our noon senior center meal sites. This time our Recipe Round-Up winners have introduced a creamy lunch or dinner dish, as well as a healthy breakfast dish. Congratulations to both our winners for their creativity and willingness to share their recipes! Below you will find both of the recipes.

First Place Recipe Round Up Winner

Creamy Cabbage Casserole

Submitted by Alma Ream

1 can cream of celery soup (reduced sodium if available)
1 cup half & half; or 1 cup canned evaporated milk (non-fat or skim if possible)
2 tablespoons flour
1/16 teaspoon black pepper or Mrs. Dash
6 cups cabbage, coarsely chopped
2 tablespoons margarine
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan Cheese
1/c cup Provolone cheese, shredded
Paprika

1. Spoon soup into mixing bowl. Add half & half (or evaporated milk), flour, and black pepper. Mix well.
2. Place half of chopped cabbage in greased baking pan.
3. Top with half of soup mixture. Add remaining cabbage and top with remaining soup.
4. Cut margarine into pieces and scatter over top.
5. Bake uncovered at 350 for 1 hour.
6. Remove from oven and stir.
7. Return to oven and bake for an additional 30 minutes or until cabbage is tender.
8. Remove from oven and sprinkle top with parmesan cheese and provolone cheese.
9. Return to oven and bake additional 2 minutes or until cheese is melted.
10. Sprinkle with paprika and serve hot.

This recipe provides 3 grams of fiber and a days recommended amount of Vitamin C. Using this recipe with non-fat half & half or evaporated skim milk and margarine will limit fat and saturated fat to about 2 grams.

Use of evaporated milk (whole or skim) in place of half and half will provide extra milk nutrients to the dish.

Creamy Cabbage Casserole will be featured at the Mary Browning Senior Center on Friday, February 17th. If you would like to try it, make a reservation for lunch and join us. To make a reservation, please call Cindy at 301-334-9431 extension 134 before 9:00 am February 17, 2011.

First Runner Up

Power Breakfast for One
Submitted by Nancy Stallings
3 tablespoons oatmeal, regular
3 tablespoons quinoa, cooked
1 teaspoon almond meal
1 teaspoon pecan meal
1 teaspoon walnut meal
1 cup vanilla soy milk
½ apple, peeled, cored, and cut into small pieces
1 large pinch cinnamon

1. Combine all ingredients in a microwavable bowl
2. Mix together with spoon
3. Microwave on high 2-3 minutes
4. Stir again. Enjoy!

This recipe calls for soy milk, which does not contain lactose or milk proteins. Lactose- reduce milk or low-fat milk could also be used, depending on your health situation.

Although this recipe may require some detective work to locate "quinoa" ("keen wah"), it will result in a very healthy breakfast choice, with just a little more effort than microwaved oatmeal. A suggestion for the almond, pecan, and walnut meal is to finely chop one or two of each type of nut.

Cheers to a dairy healthy breakfast and dinner!

Pleasing Yogurt Breakfast Parfait

cup low-fat vanilla yogurt
1/2 cup crunchy low-fat cereal or granola, divided
1/2 cup fresh fruit, sliced (i.e. strawberries, blueberries, pineapple)

To assemble parfait, begin with 1/2 cup yogurt in the bottom of a bowl or tall glass. Add 2 tablespoons cereal and 1/4 cup fruit. Repeat. Top with the remaining 2 tablespoons of cereal.

Funding Allocated For Gypsy Moth Control Projects

The Garrett County commissioners on Tuesday unanimously approved allocating funds to participate in two Maryland Department of Agriculture gypsy moth aerial suppression projects this spring. Spraying will take place in mid to late May, after trees have leafed out and the newly hatched caterpillars can feed on them.

"The very rough total estimated cost to the county for both projects and surveys is at least $37,480," wrote Robert Tatman, MDA Forest Pest Management Program, in a letter to the commissioners last month.

The goal of the program is to identify developing pest infestations in order to respond appropriately before significant damage occurs.

Tatman noted in the letter that MDA has identified several areas of gypsy moth populations that may cause tree defoliation in Garrett County, and asked if the commissioners would be interested in participating in the two projects.

"One is our traditional Cooperative Gypsy Moth Suppression project, which would include federal grant monies," Tatman wrote. "This would be all areas that averaged over 250 gypsy moth egg masses per acre."

The county will cost share 25 percent, if the MDA can get a federal grant. If not, the cost share will be 50 percent.

Tatman noted that the county will cost share only on nonstate owned lands, or approximately 415 acres for a 25 percent estimated cost share of $5,680. This does not include the cost of egg mass surveys, which would be a minimum of $8,250.

"The estimated total cost to the county for this traditional program is $13,930," Tatman said.

The second project will

Nearly 7,000 Have Toured New Museum

According to numbers provided by the Garrett County Historical Society, nearly 7,000 persons – representing seven countries besides the United States – have visited the society's new Transportation Museum in Oakland since its opening in late August of last year.

Bob Boal, society president, said that he is pleased with the level of interest in the new facility, which was made possible in large part via a grant from the Howard and Audrey Naylor Family Trust.

"In just over four months, there have been 6,889 visitors to the new museum," he said, adding that the society's other museum, also in Oakland, averages between 6,000 and 7,000 visitors per year.

There were 65 visitors in the final days of August following the official opening of the new museum, 1,302 visitors in September, 4,069 in October (the majority during the Autumn Glory Festival), 775 in November, and 678 in December. The lower numbers in November and December are partially the result of fewer hours of operation during the winter months.

"While most of the our visitors, as expected, are Americans, we have also had guests from Canada, England, Germany, France, Bulgaria, Brazil, and Australia," Boal said.

Governor O'Malley Considers Tax Hikes As General Assembly Opens

by Dave Nyczepir
Capital News Service

ANNAPOLIS – Maryland's 430th General Assembly session convened Wednesday, promising more than a few tough votes in the coming weeks as Gov. Martin O'Malley's agenda may call for raising the state's sales or gas taxes.

A tax increase would generate the revenue needed to fund many of O'Malley's job creation initiatives and help address the $1 billion budget deficit the legislature faces in its $14 billion operating budget.

Controversial same-sex marriage and wind-farming bills are also on the General Assembly's agenda this session.

O'Malley is toying with the idea of raising the state sales tax by 1 cent to 7 cents, but will consult with General Assembly leaders before deciding, said the governor during an interview with WEAA 88.9 Wednesday morning. Also on the table is the much talked about 15-cent increase to the gas tax.

"We'll be rolling these proposals out over the next few days," said O'Malley, of the possible revenue-raising alternatives.

While legislators braced for the proposed tax increases, some said they wouldn't be well-received.

"I think it will be a year of cutting," Senate President Thomas V. Mike Miller Jr. said at the WEAA taping.

Though O'Malley said finding money to renovate roads and fund school construction is essential for job creation, some legislators argue tax hikes are counterproductive.

"The worst thing you can do is raise taxes," House Minority Leader Tony O'Donnell, R-Calvert, said. "That's a job killer."

In his brief speech before the House of Delegates on opening day, O'Malley praised Maryland for creating 27,000 new jobs last year. The governor hopes to continue this trend by proposing more than $370 million in school construction funding and renovations in the budget for fiscal 2013, which he said will create approximately 12,000 jobs.

With job creation being the governor's primary focus, Delegate Pat McDonough, R-Baltimore County, hopes to ensure that these new jobs are unavailable to illegal immigrants with legislation requiring verification of citizenship upon hiring.

"I want those jobs, new jobs, to go to American citizens," McDonough said.

Legislators will also contend with two hot-button environmental issues this session – fracking and wind farming.

Hydraulic fracturing – or "fracking" – which involves extracting natural gas from rocks, is already in use in nearby states. An advisory commission released a set of recommendations Dec. 31.

Delegate Wendell Beitzel, R-Garrett, a fracking supporter, said he thought there would be a push to pass some sort of bill this year.

Wind farm supporters turned out for a rally in front of the State House an hour before the General Assembly's official opening. Addressing the crowd, Sen. Paul Pinsky, D-Prince George's, a leading supporter of a wind farm bill that faltered last session, called for a "culture change" in the state's approach to energy production.

"It's time for Maryland to be in the forefront with wind energy," Pinsky said. "We have to change the old and move to the new in order to have a future."

With O'Malley expected to introduce a new same-sex marriage bill, delegates are organizing early to gain four or five votes to push the legislation through the House, where it stalled last session.

Last year, O'Malley said he would sign same-sex marriage legislation if it reached his desk. This year he has

Garrett, Allegany County Commissioners Ask Governor To Authorize Gas Drilling

The Garrett County and Allegany County commissioners asked Gov. Martin O'Malley last week to authorize natural gas drilling in their two counties.

"We respectfully request your thoughtful considerations to encourage the Marcellus Shale Safe Drilling Initiative Advisory Commission to expedite their review, and encourage you to direct the Maryland Department of the Environment to authorize the process of allowing for the safe extraction of natural gas in our respective counties," the commissioners wrote to O'Malley in a letter dated Jan. 4. "Your leadership on this important matter will enable Garrett and Allegany counties, along with the state of Maryland to benefit financially both short and long term, and assist our region and nation in a meaningful step toward energy self-sufficiency."

The commissioners added that they continue to watch with great concern the impact that the nation's energy dependency has had in shaping domestic and foreign policies.

"As you are no doubt aware, our respective counties are uniquely positioned to provide to our state and country the prospect of contributing a substantial and viable energy source to meet

NOPE, NOT HERE – While snow is most certainly in the forecast for the next several days, it is doubtful that the fall will be quite like it is in Alaska right now. Longtime Garrett County resident Chuck Bowman, who moved to Alaska in 2010, posted this remarkable photo on Facebook this week. This is a mountain pass leading to Valdez, which is the oil-exporting terminal on the south coast of Alaska, adjacent to Anchorage. That area has received nearly 20 feet so far this season, with snow falling continually for 24 days, breaking records there. Garrett County is far behind, with not much more than two feet as of yet. More should come this weekend, with forecasters calling for a few inches tonight and perhaps a few more tomorrow. And who knows what the rest of the season will bring. Sometimes February is the most dramatic month of all. And sometimes it's not.

Sheriff's Office Awaiting Evidence In Pedestrian Death

Sheriff Robert Corley provided an update concerning the Dec. 8 pedestrian accident along Bittinger Road that resulted in the death of Kenneth Wayne Friend.

Sheriff Corley advised that witness interviews and other information have led to the probable identification of the vehicle that struck Friend, as well as the operator, but verification and any further action remain pending the results of testing of evidence by the Maryland State Police Crime Laboratory.

"Because of the volume of evidence submitted to the Crime Lab around the state, I am unable to provide a time frame for when the sheriff's office can expect to receive the results of the analysis. However, once results are returned and after careful review from the state's attorney, we will move forward with our investigation," said Corley.

GC Commissioners To Begin Drafting Land-Use Management Regulations

The Garrett County commissioners are moving forward with their plans to draft land-use management policies, they announced during their public meeting on Tuesday. Commission chair Jim Raley stressed the public will have opportunities to make suggestions and voice their concerns about the proposed regulations.

"I don't want people to believe and perceive that this is a done deal, that they're not going to get any input, because that's not the intent," commission chair Jim Raley noted.

He said the commissioners intend to conduct this issue just as they have conducted many issues so far. The current board members were sworn in about 13 months ago.

"I think we took on the turbine issue when we first took office," Raley said. "We've taken on the Marcellus issue. We've had discussions about Deep Creek Lake and lake management and those things. And I think that we can have a civil – what I call dinner table discussion – amongst ourselves and the citizens if this is a direction that we want to go."

The commissioners explained in a press release that ongoing interests in the development of shale gas, industrial wind energy, and even junkyards have "brought to light" the concerns that exist for property owners.

Raley noted at Tuesday's meeting that Garrett is the only county in the state that does not have countywide zoning. He also noted that efforts by local lawmakers to enact certain land use regulations through the state legislature regarding wind turbines have been rejected in the past by other legislators, who point out that Garrett County has the authority to enact such policies on a local level under Article 66-B.

"The absence of any reasonable and prudent land management policy for Garrett County leaves the citizens, visitors, businesses, and property owners vulnerable to what many view as an exploitation of our lands," the commissioners stated in their press release. The rest of their statement is as follows:

"The commissioners have requested that a land-use policy be explored and drafted by staff that can be shared with the Planning Commission, organizations and the general public. The direction will be to take into consideration the ongoing changes to land use in Garrett County and discussing potential reasonable standards for what are viewed as potential harmful effects of said usages.

"The continuing absences of a comprehensive approach, and the insistence of the state that we have statutory authority to enact regulations to help address basic issues affecting the county have led the county commission to share the concern of many citizens. Citizens, organizations, and stakeholders have also expressed apprehension about the lack of responsible ability to manage areas of concerns regarding the potential for changing land uses on a large-scale basis throughout the county.

"Many feel the failure to act will only allow other institutions and entities to shape and control the future

Proposed School System Changes Draw Large Crowd To BOE Meeting

Emotions ran high at Tuesday's meeting of the Garrett County Board of Education, as concerned citizens, many of whom hail from the Friendsville area, filled the board room to express their opinions and grievances with the recent five-year plan set forth by the board to right the school system's budget woes.

The board was scheduled to take action on a proposal to reconfigure the grade structure of the school system – a move that would place fifth grade students in middle schools – but that action was postponed until Tuesday, Jan. 17, in light of some of the issues addressed in the public comments portion of the meeting.

BOE members heard and took note of the information put forward in that public forum, which was schedule for 4 to 4:30 p.m., but ran well over 2½ hours. A video feed of the meeting was set up in the main lobby area of the Garrett County Board of Education building to accommodate the overflow of participants and onlookers.

Many of the concerns voiced dealt with the issue of young students being emotionally and developmentally unready for the change of venue, the unintended consequences of housing fifth and eighth graders in the same building, the strain placed on elementary students by the extended commute times, and the loss of the more "nurturing and intimate" setting provided by smaller class sizes.

Some of these concerns were addressed by Sue Waggoner, interim superintendent of schools, in a presentation earlier in the meeting. Waggoner expressed that the board had considered and shared the majority of these concerns, laying out a tentative but detailed schedule for students in the event the reconfiguration took place.

According to the presentation, in the larger middle school each grade would have its own "pod" within the school and be kept separate from the other grades. Each grade would have its own lunch shift and every student would also be assigned his/her own home room. Enrichment/remediation periods would also be built into each schedule.

Furthermore, fifth and sixth graders would be heterogeneously grouped and on a different bell schedule than

Friendsville Responds To Proposed School Closings; Forms Committee

In response to a proposal by the Garrett County Board of Education to close Friendsville Elementary School, an emergency meeting was held by the mayor, town council, and a group of Friendsville's concerned citizens. The meeting took place in December, prior to the school system's Christmas break, with the expressed purpose of informing local parents of the board's plans to balance its budget.

"I feel that this would have such a negative impact on the students and community of Friendsville as a whole," stated Spencer Schlosnagle, mayor of Friendsville.

"Our children are our future – and the future of Friendsville – and we cannot let this school closing happen."

According to the board, the closing of Friendsville Elementary is being based on the decline in student enrollment over the past few years. The Friendsville Advisory Committee has been formed to research the feasibility of the school closings and their impact on the students and the community as a whole.

Friendsville Elementary is one of three schools in line to suffer the consequences of funding cutbacks felt throughout Garrett County – setbacks shared by communities across the state of Maryland.

Faculty members were notified on Dec. 13 of the proposed closing of Friendsville, Dennett Road, and Kitzmiller schools. If the proposal to close these schools becomes a reality, they would be scheduled to close at the end of the current school year. This action is part of a five-year savings plan that couples the school closings with program and staff cuts, such as the elimination of the driver's education program, and also with the realignment of grade levels (fifth graders would be moved from elementary schools to middle schools).

The total anticipated savings from closing these schools is thought to be over $2 million. The action would eliminate the costs associated with utilities and the upkeep of the facilities, but also remove teaching, custodial, and secretary positions.

The advisory committee plans to research the impact on the education of children in larger classrooms, transportation times and distances and their costs, the impact on other community organizations and businesses, whether or not others schools can reasonably accommodate more students, and the cost of accommodating these students.

As a member of the advisory committee, Mayor Schlosnagle stated, "The [committee] is working to save our school. It is not a done deal and we need everyone's help to save our school.

"A lot of things need to be factored in here, and the impact on our children, the family and the community needs to be considered."

Attorney General Settles With Two Local Builders

Maryland attorney general Douglas Gansler announced recently that his Consumer Protection Division's Home Builder Registration Unit entered into settlement agreements with 27 home builders from throughout the state.

Through the settlement, these builders have agreed to pay penalties totaling $26,000 to settle allegations that they operated without being registered, failed to disclose required information to the unit in their registration applications, or otherwise violated Maryland's building laws.

Of those 27 home builders,two – Eagle Rock Construction LLC and Eric Paugh Contracting Inc. – are from Garrett County.

"Home builders must be registered before they can enter into contracts to build homes for consumers in Maryland," said Gansler.

"Home buyers can protect themselves by checking with us before they sign a contract with any builder. Make sure you're dealing with a company that is in good standing with the state laws designed to protect consumers."

Gansler encourages all new home buyers to verify that their builder is registered by contacting the Home Builder Registration Unit at 410-576-6573 or toll-free at 877-259-4525, or by visiting the attorney general's web site at www.oag.state.md.us/homebuilder.

Del. Beitzel To Continue Weekly E-Mail Newsletter

Del. Wendell R. Beitzel has announced the continuation of his weekly e-mail newsletter to keep constituents informed about issues during the 430th regular session of the Maryland General Assembly, which started yesterday in Annapolis. This will be the second year for Beitzel's weekly newsletter.

"This is an opportunity to keep the citizens of Garrett and Allegany County informed of the many very important issues of the 90-day session," Beitzel said.

On the agenda for consideration is a proposed $.15 gas tax increase, which will be part of the O'Malley administration's legislative agenda. The proposed plan would increase the state's share of the gas tax by $.05 annually over a three-year period to replenish the Transportation Trust Fund. Moneys from the gas tax, tolls, and titling fees are all used for both roadway improvements and mass transit.

"An increase in the gas tax will be felt the most in rural areas because we travel the longest distances to go to the grocery store and to go to work," Beitzel said. "I oppose this tax increase."

Also on top of the governor's agenda is the legalization of same sex marriage, the delegate noted. Currently, six states and the District of Columbia have recognized marriages between same sex couples. In 2011, a bill narrowly passed the Maryland Senate, but met opposition in the Maryland House of Delegates. Since then, the governor, who was once uncommitted regarding the subject, has pledged support for the bill this year.

"I have always believed marriage is between a man and a woman," Beitzel said. "Maryland law currently reflects that definition, and I oppose making any changes."

Another large issue on this year's agenda is legislation regarding septic systems in Maryland. A recent report by the Task Force on Sustainable Growth and Wastewater Disposal has recommended a number of items regarding septic systems, including at least a doubling of the Chesapeake Bay Restoration Fee, otherwise known as the "flush tax."

There are also a number of local issues of importance that will be discussed this legislative session. Beitzel said such issues as school funding, Marcellus shale development, and the like will all be at the forefront of his agenda.

Those who would like to receive Beitzel's free electronic newsletter may contact his Annapolis office at 410-841-3435 or e-mail delegatebeitzel@gmail.com.

One Taken To GCMH Following Physical Assault

A Loch Lynn man was arrested by Garrett County sheriff's deputies Tuesday evening following a domestic assault that occurred at his residence.

Roger Ray Reckart, 36, was charged with three counts of second-degree assault after fleeing the scene. He was later located in Oakland and transported to the Garrett County Jail to await a bond hearing. One victim was transported to Garrett County Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries.

GCSO Arrest Two On Drinking And Driving Charges

Garrett County sheriff's deputies arrested two people on drinking and driving charges this past week. The following cases are unrelated.

Deputies located a disabled vehicle on Deep Creek Drive blocking the intersection with Convenience Pass at approximately midnight last Friday. The driver was identified as Jennifer Lynn Doolan, 28, McHenry. She was determined to be under the influence of alcohol. She was charged with DUI, driving while impaired, and displaying expired registration plates. She was taken to the Garrett County Jail and later released pending trial.

In a separate incident, deputies stopped a Dodge pickup truck on Deep Creek Drive for speeding. The driver was identified as Devon Williams Pook, 21, South Park. He was subsequently charged with DUI, DUI per se, DWI, and speeding. He was taken to the Garrett County Jail and later released pending trial.

BROAD FORD STUDENTS CARE FOR MILITARY – To show their appreciation and concern for United States service men and women, fourth graders at Broad Ford Elementary School held a drive for various items to be given to injured soldiers in nearby veterans' hospitals. The youngsters collected enough items to fill several boxes. They gave non-perishable snacks, books and magazines, iTunes and phone cards, toiletries, and cards and letters from the students themselves. "Members of the Deep Park VFW Post 10077 graciously volunteered to personally deliver these items to the hospitals," said teacher Kimberly Weimer. In the front, from left, are student Zach Rohrbaugh, Paul Hoff, and Brayden Warnick. In the second row, same order, are Brandon Wood, Will Holtschneider, and Alex Spencer. In the back are Past Commander Paul Everly, Michelle Shahan, Parker Meyer, Lexie Hinebaugh, and Post Commander Bob Hensley.

Friendsville Man Arrested On CDS Possession Charge

A Friendsville man was arrested by Garrett County sheriff's deputies following a traffic stop last Friday evening.

Deputies stopped a dark Chevy passenger vehicle on Old Morgantown Road for not having rear tag lights illuminated. The driver was identified as Laura Renee Casteel, 19, Friendsville, and the front seat passenger was Ricky Scott Moats, 27. A K-9 scan of the vehicle alerted to the presence of a controlled dangerous substance. A search of the vehicle led to the arrest of Moats on a possession of marijuana charge. He was taken to the Garrett County Jail and later released.

Two Arrested After One Driver Leaves Accident Scene

Two people were arrested on drinking and driving charges following a single-vehicle accident on George Washington Highway Monday afternoon. Garrett County sheriff's deputies responded to the 5 p.m. scene.

Investigation revealed that the driver of the disabled vehicle was Cassandra June Ringer, 47, West Virginia, who had fled the scene by the time deputies arrived. Witnesses claimed to have seen another vehicle leave the scene in the direction of Ben DeWitt Road. Ringer was located at the home of James Richard Riggleman Jr., 49, Oakland, who was also found to be driving under the influence of alcohol.

According to a statement by Riggleman, he came upon the scene of the accident and picked up the driver to render assistance. He then drove her to his home.

Ringer is charged with false statement to police, failure to remain at the scene of a property damage accident, failure to control speed to avoid a collision, driving under the influence, driving while impaired, and driving without a license. Riggleman was charged with DUI and DWI. Both were arrested at the scene. Ringer was escorted to Garrett County Memorial Hospital for treatment of minor injuries.

Woman Sentenced For Burglarizing Local Residence

A 19-year-old Cumberland woman pleaded guilty in Garrett County Circuit Court last week to first degree burglary. Heather Renee Sager's plea was taken by Judge G. Gary Leasure, who was assigned the case upon the recusal of Judge Jim Sherbin.

Leasure sentenced Sager to three years in the Division of Corrections and suspended 18 months of that sentence. She will be on probation upon her release from the Garrett County Jail. Conditions of probation include having no contact with the victims of the burglary and paying restitution of $735, jointly and severably with any other co-defendants who are later found guilty.

Sager was arrested and charged by Garrett County Sheriff's Office investigators who determined she had participated in one of three events at a Swanton-area residence last June and July. After being developed as a suspect in the case, Sager was questioned and admitted her involvement in the crime and assisted officers with the recovery of some of the stolen property, according to the state's attorney.

The co-defendants have cases pending in Circuit Court.

In an unrelated case, Eric Michael Livesay, 28, Providence, R.I., pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine. Judge Sherbin then sentenced Livesay to two years in the Division of Corrections and suspended the sentence. Livesay was placed on two years of probation and ordered to participate in drug counseling, and to pay fines and costs of $1,505.

Livesay was arrested and charged by Maryland State Police last July when the vehicle in which he was riding was stopped for traffic violations. After other occupants of the vehicle were found in possession of drugs, officers conducted a thorough search of the vehicle and found that a backpack, belonging to Livesay, contained cocaine.

In other Circuit Court proceedings last Friday, Helaina Marie Lamastus, 23, Accident, was found not guilty of six counts of animal cruelty by a jury. Lamastus was charged by investigators with the Garrett County Humane Society last January after they located six puppies on property adjacent to the residence where Lamastus was then living.

According to the state's attorney, the animals were outdoors and were not being provided shelter from the weather, which included snow and temperatures with the wind chill below zero. The puppies were seized and provided care by the Humane Society and local veterinarians.

Co-defendant Cambria Nicole Nuzum, 21, was previously found guilty of the crimes in District Court, sentenced to a suspended sentence, and granted probation before judgment.

Criticism and Credit...

Editorials generally fall under one of two major categories: criticism or credit. The one that appears in this corner today covers both categories.

First, the criticism:

It is disappointing that the Garrett County commissioners agreed, along with all three Allegany County commissioners, to sign a letter directed last week to Governor O'Malley to "encourage the Marcellus Shale Safe Drilling Initiative Advisory Commission to expedite their (sic) review, and encourage you to direct the Maryland Department of the Environment to authorize the process of allowing for the safe extraction of natural gas in our respective counties."

Drilling for gas in the Marcellus shale is under moratorium in Maryland, by order of O'Malley, possibly extending as late as August 2014. The aforementioned commission was appointed by the governor to work with the Maryland Department of the Environment and the Department of Natural Resources to study the industry and all potential risks to the environment before the state would give the go-ahead for drilling.

While drilling in the Marcellus shale under Garrett County may well be a major boost to the local and state economy, it seems prudent that the study should be allowed to run its course, especially in light of continued concerns and incidents surrounding the industry. Just this past weekend, there was an Associated Press article that centered on the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's halting the delivery of fresh water, abruptly and without explanation, to a community near Allentown, Pa., where residential wells have indeed been tainted by a natural gas drilling operation. Also, there now seems to actually be a connection between the drilling and recent occurrence of earthquakes in the Midwest.

As stated repeatedly in this column, the various negative effects of drilling, both definite and potential, are significant, placing our local, tourist-based environment and property values at risk. Taking the extra time to complete the commission's work is essential.

Now the credit:

The county commissioners deserve the highest accolades for their courageous decision announced Tuesday to begin discussing, considering, and ultimately drafting some county-wide, land-use regulations. (We will avoid using the Z-word.) It is precisely the absence of all land-use regulation that has opened our county to both the wind industry and, probably within a few years, drilling in the Marcellus shale layer.

As stated here on numerous occasions, land-use regulation generally works quite well in our local municipalities that already have it, as well as in the Deep Creek Lake watershed. Written properly, such regulations protect, not inhibit, the rights of all property owners, be they residents or owners of business and industry.

To the Editor:

Funds are short in Maryland, as in many other states, I think one way to get more money in the state's coffers is to have the sheriff's office and MSP to start stopping more drivers who just disobey traffic laws.

One particular place that really irks me is the intersection of Rt. 219 and Sang Run Road. On one occasion this week, I sat in the bank parking lot for exactly one hour and counted the vehicles that didn't stop – just blew off the stop sign, as the drivers saw no traffic coming in the direction they were turning. Here are the startling counts: 62 vehicles approached – two actually stopped, six slowed down to a crawl, but didn't stop. The other 54 plain-out didn't stop and just zoomed on through, turning either north or south on 219.

This happens not only at this particular intersection, as I have witnessed it all over Garrett County. Someone is going to get seriously injured or killed.

I for one would love to see a camera mounted by the state that would result in citations being sent to these so-called drivers.

Thanks for publishing my letter.

To the Editor:

I remember a time when the Relay For Life event drew hundreds of people. There were luminaria bags all around the track and lots of creative teams who would decorate their campsites and spend the night surrounded by family and friends. It was fun!

The interest in the Relay has dwindled over the years. Unfortunately, cancer has not. There is still a huge need for Relay monies. Lots of people don't support Relay because the funds don't stay completely in Garrett County. What most people don't realize are the many ways that monies generated by the Relay benefit all people dealing with cancer.

The American Cancer Society (ACS) funds millions in cancer research each year. Relay For Life/ACS monies increased the cure rate for most childhood leukemias to more than 80%. These monies pay for the cancer hotline, where people can dial 1-800-ACS-2345 and speak with a live person with any cancer questions. The ACS also has helped to increase federal funding to allow low-income women access to breast and cervical cancer screenings, doubled the funding for the National Institutes of Health and the National Cancer Institute, offer clinical trial insurance coverage in 17 states, advocate for stronger no-smoking ordinances, funding of Hope Lodges that provide free lodging to patients, funding of Camps for Kids to help children with cancer, offer several programs to assist patients, and provide cancer awareness and prevention tips. Nearly all of the information gained over the years about cancer has come from the ACS.

Some of the myths about Relay are that you have to have a team and stay up all night and walk the track, and other rules. Not true. You do not have to be on a team, and you do not have to stay up all night. You can come and watch, have something to eat, visit with friends, hopefully donate a little money, and leave when you like. You can come for an hour or stay all night.

The kick-off for the Relay is Jan. 18 at 6 p.m. at the Garrett College Continuing Education Building. If you would like to organize a team or learn about being on the planning committee, please try to attend. If you can't make the meeting, call Brittany Friend, community manager for the ACS, at 301-722-2145, or e-mail her at Brittany.Friend@cancer.org. This year's Relay will be held on June 8-9 at Southern High School.

To the Editor:

I applaud the letter of Sherry White. She is exactly right! I have lived in Garrett County all my life, and in order to get a decent-paying job have had to go out of the county. My husband also has to travel out of the county in order to make a living for us. Yes, he works for the industry that so many people loathe and fear, the gas industry. The gas industry puts food on our table, clothes on my kids' backs, and gas in our vehicles. It also goes into our local stores and restaurants from our pocket.

We have been looking some time for a home in GC, but sadly there is nothing affordable for us, so we search in neighboring West Virginia. GC isn't for us locals, it is for tourists. While we appreciate their business, we do not appreciate their rudeness and always being in a hurry. I don't know how many accidents I have to avoid being in weekly just to drive to Oakland.

We pay tourist prices in stores, not a common working person's prices for the salaries people make around here. Most of the business people don't care about their own county people, just what they can take in from tourists.

Being a "local" is just a bad situation in this tourist trap. We need to break the walls down and get some industries in here to give jobs with salaries that people can live on. There is nothing wrong with being a cashier or waitress, but that is a more suitable job for a young person without the responsibility of a family.

I was looking forward to my kids being "Huskies" like me, but with the three schools in danger of closing, that will only overwork the teachers, school staff, and bus drivers even more. How will bigger class size help our children get a better education? Maybe instead of giving money to things that aren't as important as our children's future, the county should invest in schools. I am seriously considering some other form of education when my kids are school age.

Thanks, Garrett County, for letting us down.

To the Editor:

A recent letter to the editor addressed the legislative request from our Garrett County commissioners which would require the county to bargain with the union that has been representing our county roads workers for over 30 years. The county has been negotiating with this union for years. The employees of the Garrett County Roads Department, in the past, have cooperated with the county, going as far as voting to give up wage increases. They work long hours under conditions that are nearly impossible, especially during the winter months. I hear many residents comment on the great job that our county roads employees do with our roads system.

The best way to predict their future actions is to look at their past performance. There should not be any problem managing this department in the future. Nothing major is changing in practice between the commissioners and the roads employees. These employees have worked continuously for over 30 years. I would expect this work ethic to continue.

The majority of the Garrett County commissioners have expressed, on behalf of our citizens, the desire to bargain collectively with our Garrett County Roads Department employees. As I understand, both commissioners and union reps do not want any work stoppages, and will avoid them. Union representatives and commissioners support the choice to join the union or not. Membership is voluntary.

If you support legislation that would recognize the bargaining rights of our Garrett County roads employees, contact your legislators or contact one of your friends or family who is currently employed by the Garrett County Roads Department.

I hope that the citizens of Garrett County will stand with their friends and neighbors and support the efforts of our county roads employees. Because of their dedication, we have immediate access to our highways after a storm and those visiting our county are able to reach their destination to ski, hunt, fish, raft rivers, seek lodging, and enjoy our restaurants.

To the Editor:

Senator George Edwards was recently quoted in a news article as encouraging people to attend the PACE reception in Annapolis to show their support for Marcellus shale gas drilling, noting the educational efforts being made by the "opponents." The senator's encouragement is typical of the mind-set of our local representatives who see reasonable and valid questions raised by concerned citizens about fracking as somehow being "opposition."

Casting people with valid concerns as "antis" is poor politics and a poor attitude. This is an old and dirty political dog that just doesn't hunt anymore. If anything, this kind of rhetoric seeks to divide a community rather than bring it together.

Our elected officials represent all of us who have invested our lives and fortunes to live in this beautiful area of Maryland. Their position on the matter should represent all of us and be a voice of caution and reason as Maryland sorts out all of the conflicting reports about fracking, jobs, economic benefit, and risks.

Their performance to date has been clearly pro-drilling and pro-industry. Maybe they cast their lots a little too early. In the shale commission meetings they speak little to the needs for safety, health, and the environment. While out-of-state companies stand to make billions from our gas resource, they worked to lower the severance tax rate. At every opportunity to represent concerned citizens, they sit in silence. At every opportunity to proffer the interest of the gas industry, they are outspoken.

Garrett County has grown and changed over the past few decades, as have the interests and needs of its people. This divisive mind-set is typical of boomtown economics that flows from those who seek nothing but to get rich quickly. Our representatives should be above this.

Are our representatives fair-minded enough to start to speak out for those with reasonable concerns?

To the Editor:

This country, and this county, face serious issues in 2012. Citizens of this country, and this county, can make good decisions about these issues if they are given full, complete, and accurate information. The problem is, our elected officials, at the national, state, and county level, either don't understand the facts, or they are intentionally misleading voters.

For example, at the national level we are told that while President Obama inherited the worst economic situation since the Great Depression, his policies have failed to stimulate job growth and we have the most anemic recovery ever.

But let's look at the facts. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the economy lost 4,146,000 private-sector jobs in 2009, Obama's first year in office. However, in 2010, 1,215,000 private-sector jobs were added, and another 1,826,000 were added in 2011. The economy lost 1,105,000 private-sector jobs during Obama's first three years in office.

President Bush inherited a much less severe recession. In 2001, Bush's first year in office, the economy lost 2,266,000 private-sector jobs, and another 619,000 jobs in 2002. In 2003, the economy added 84,000 private-sector jobs. The economy lost 2,801,000 private-sector jobs during the first three years of the Bush administration – more than twice as many jobs lost during the first three years of the Obama administration. Which administration had the most anemic recovery?

Locally, we are debating drilling for natural gas in Marcellus and Utica shale. Our elected officials in Annapolis and Garrett County advocate drilling now, at least in part, because, they argue, the natural gas in Marcellus shale will reduce our dependence on foreign oil.

The fact is that efforts are under way to build a factory to convert Marcellus shale natural gas into liquefied natural gas and ship it to Europe where prices are 4 to 5 times higher than those in the U.S. Marcellus shale gas is not going to increase supplies in the U.S. because it will be shipped to Europe by multinational corporations who want to maximize profits.

"Truthiness" is a "truth" that a person (an elected official) claims to know intuitively "from the gut" or that it "feels right," without regard to evidence, logic, intellectual examination, or facts. Our elected officials need to stop relying on "truthiness" and start relying on facts to inform people concerned about these critical public issues.

Sincerely,

our domestic needs now and into the future," the commissioners' letter read.

The MDE and Department of Natural Resources have prepared and released Part I of the Marcellus Shale Safe Drilling Initiative Study. The 46-page document is available for public viewing online at garrettcounty.org and mde.state.md.us.

O'Malley signed an executive order on June 6, 2011, establishing the Marcellus Shale Safe Drilling Initiative, which placed a moratorium on drilling/fracking in the state until at least August 2014. The order also called for a study to assist policy makers in determining whether and how gas production can be accomplished without unacceptable risks of adverse impacts to public health, safety, the environment, and natural resources.

The order required MDE and DNR – in consultation with an advisory commission made up of a broad array of stakeholders – to undertake the study of drilling for natural gas from the Marcellus shale in western Maryland.

The Advisory Commission members are chairman Dr. David Vanko, a geologist and current dean of the Jess and Mildred Fisher College of Science and Mathematics at Towson University; Sen. George Edwards (Allegany and Garrett counties and parts of Washington County); Del. Heather Mizeur (Montgomery County); GC Commissioner Jim Raley; Allegany County commissioner William Valentine; Oakland mayor Peggy Jamison; Shawn Bender, division manager at the Beitzel Corporation and president of the Garrett County Farm Bureau; Steven Bunker, director of conservation programs, Maryland office of the Nature Conservancy; John Fritts, president of the Savage River Watershed Association and director of development for the Federation of American Scientists; Jeffrey Kupfer, senior advisor, Chevron Government Affairs; Dominick Murray, deputy secretary of the Maryland Department of Business and Economic Development; Paul Roberts, a Garrett County resident and co-owner of Deep Creek Cellars Winery; Nick Weber, chair of the Mid-Atlantic Council of Trout Unlimited; and Harry Weiss, esquire, partner at Ballard Spahr LLP.

The Advisory Commission's next meetings are scheduled for Friday, Jan. 27, in Annapolis and Monday, Feb. 27, in Hagerstown.

students in the seventh and eighth grades. Classes would last 35 minutes and have four minutes between them.

"Our sources of funding are limited, and unlike the federal government we are not allowed to carry a deficit," stated Waggoner when asked about the budget crisis.

"We feel we must do what is best to protect and maintain the integrity of our school system, and the quality of our students' educations."

It was at the second forum for public comment, following the meeting's executive session, that Charlotte Sebold, who had been elected by the board as its new president about an hour prior, informed those in attendance that the action on the reconfiguration proposal would be moved to a special board meeting at Southern Middle School on Tuesday. The public participation portion of that event is scheduled for 8 p.m.

CHEER TEAMS FARE WELL IN CONTESTS – Members of Jessica's Creations traveled to Washington, D.C., this past weekend to compete in cheer competitions. The Toxic Twist Crew and WMXA cheerleaders took part in a "red carpet competition experience," according to Jessica Crosco, coach. The teams train in Oakland and children from Garrett County as well as the surrounding area make up the teams. The Youth Toxic Twist HipHop team won first place and was the division winner in the contest. One Toxic member, Brandon Wood, received an outstanding overall award. "We are very proud of these team members, as they are the nation's defending champions," said Crosco. The teams also traveled to Pittsburgh last month. Youth Toxic took first place, and the senior and junior teams took second place in the senior cheer division. The youth cheer team finished in second place, and the "tiny" cheer team took third. The athletes will travel to Richmond, Va., this weekend to compete. Pictured above in the first row, from left, are Beau Brenneman, Kiara Friend, Ainsley McCroskey, and Keri Slaubaugh. not be part of the traditional Cooperative Gypsy Moth Suppression project and does not qualify for federal money.

"This second project would be an effort to get a step ahead of a potential gypsy moth outbreak," Tatman told the commissioners. "In this project I am hoping to spray the areas we have identified that do not have an average of 250 gypsy moth egg masses per acre, but do have at least one survey point with at least 250 gypsy moth egg masses per acre."

The county's cost share will be 50 percent, but only on nonstate owned lands, or approximately 940 acres. The estimated cost of this project is $23,550.

County administrator Month Pagenhardt noted that the commissioners allocated about $16,500 for gypsy moth suppression in their fiscal year 2012 budget. Additional monies for the county to participate in the MDA's spring projects will come from contingency funding.

Land owners interested in taking a gypsy moth self-survey/assessment may visit gcforest.sailorsite.net.

Begin Drafting of Garrett County, which may not necessarily balance the interests of all of the stakeholders.

"The purpose is to have an open dialogue about land use and allow for input from all citizens through open forums and public meetings," the statement concluded. "Once the draft proposal is complete, the document will be shared on the county web site, at public libraries, and citizens who desire a print copy will have one made available."

Director John Nelson, Garrett County Department of Planning and Land Development, indicated the drafting process would take several months.

"I feel a sense of urgency to deal with this issue," Commissioner Gregan Crawford said, noting that more wind turbine projects are planned for Garrett County.

The county's Permits and Inspections Division issued a meteorological tower permit last month to Synergics for a tower on St. John's Rock at Four Mile Ridge near Avilton. "Met" towers are used in preliminary stages of turbine projects to determine the amount of wind at proposed sites.

The county also issued a met tower permit in October to EDP Renewables North America for its Winding Ridge Project in the Friendsville area.

In addition, Clipper Windpower Development has expressed interest in a met tower permit for its Fair Winds project at Allegheny Heights on Backbone Mountain.

"I'd hate to see us vulnerable once again if [those projects] develop and we don't have any say in the process," Crawford said.

The commissioners' first work session on drafting the proposed regulations is scheduled for next Tuesday, Jan. 17, at 2:30 p.m. Although the session will not be a forum for discussion on the issue, the public is invited to the event.

Maryland Schools Ranked #1 For Fourth Consecutive Year

The Maryland public school system has now made this a habit: ranking first in nation for the fourth consecutive year, according to an independent national report being released today.

Education Week, the nation's leading education newspaper, looked at data in six critical categories over the past four years, and once again found that Maryland's state education system ranked at the head of the class.

Maryland's grade of B+ placed at the top of the list in Education Week's annual "Quality Counts" tally. Massachusetts, New York, and Virginia followed Maryland, with B grades. As has been the case since the report's inception, most states received grades in the C ranges or below.

Interim state superintendent of schools Bernard Sadusky said that Maryland has never wavered from the goal of having the highest quality schools in every neighborhood.

"Schools are only as good as the school in your neighborhood, where your child or grandchild goes to class, or where you work as a teacher," Dr. Sadusky said. "Education Week's detailed analysis offers us a positive review of our efforts, and we are immensely proud of the ranking. We use it as fuel to redouble our efforts to strengthen every classroom."

Maryland has not been "treading water" since gaining the top slot in the nation in 2009, according to Sadusky. In 2010, Maryland became

CHRISTINE M. HAYNES

Christine Minshall Haynes, 92, passed away quietly on Monday, Jan. 9, 2012, surrounded by all of her children, at her home in Boca Grande, on Gasparilla Island, Fla. This was as it should be. Recently asked her preference regarding her obituary, she said that she wanted it to state, simply, "She be gone..." This is classic Chris. However, she was dissuaded from this course by friends and family, who were convinced that a mere three words would not suffice.

Chris, as she was known to her intimates, was born Christine Koblegard Minshall on Oct. 5, 1919, in Tulsa, Okla., to the late E.R. Minshall and Marie Koblegard Minshall. The Minshalls settled in Oklahoma prior to statehood, and Mr. Minshall was one of the area's earliest independent oilmen.

Although the family's principal residence remained Tulsa, throughout her childhood, Chris's family generally summered in Petoskey, Mich., and wintered in Ft. Pierce, Fla., where enclaves of Koblegards and Minshalls were located. This moving about was an early family tradition, to which her family attributes Chris's wanderlust and lifelong love of the road.

She was a graduate of Tulsa's Holland Hall college preparatory school (1937) and the University of Tulsa (1941). She married H.C. Haynes of Clarksburg, W.Va., in 1942, and is survived by her five children from that union, Robert Alexander Haynes III, Cambridge, David Read Haynes, Wrightsville, Pa., Sarah Haynes Cowan, Fredericksburg, Va., Richard Blackmur Haynes, Santa Cruz, Calif., and Diana Haynes Runyon, Boca Grande. In addition to seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, Chris is survived by many nieces and nephews and one first cousin, Jane Minshall, San Diego.

Chris was also preceded in death by her three siblings, Paul L. Minshall, E.R. "Buzzy" Minshall Jr., and Virginia Minshall Zehring.

Chris was the niece of Marie Selby, Sarasota, Fla., and like her Aunt Marie – one of whose endowments created the Marie Selby Botanical Gardens – Chris inherited a great love of plants and gardening. A master gardener, Chris was instrumental in the establishment of the Heathcote Botanical Gardens of Fort Pierce, Fla., having been a major contributor to that organization's vision, labor, and resources.

Chris's life is defined, in large part, by her intelligence, curiosity, love of the visual arts, books, and music, an interest in other cultures, a keen sense of social justice, and her notable generosity to family, friends, and worthy causes. Her friends were many and varied. Of note, in her later years she counted among her great friends many people, much younger than she, who were drawn irresistibly to her vivacity and passion for life.

Despite their sadness at her passing, her family and friends are warmed by the very real knowledge that much of who she was is being passed on through them as a result of their expression of those same qualities – her gift to them.

In recent years, Chris has called several places "home," maintaining residences in Fredericksburg, Va., Mtn. Lake Park, and Boca Grande, and rotating between the three as it suited her. At her request, Chris's ashes, in equal parts, will be cast into the Gulf of Mexico near Boca Grande and interred at the Oakland Cemetery near Mtn. Lake Park.

A memorial service will be held in Mtn. Lake Park this summer, presided over by her long-time friend and neighbor, Rev. Manning Smith, followed by a wake, complete with music provided by a Dixieland jazz band. She would approve.

A firm date has not been set; rather, the event will take place, as Chris would have said, "after it has warmed up enough that the oak leaves are the size of a squirrel's ear."

In lieu of flowers, please consider making a donation in Chris's name to the Boca Grande Health Clinic, Heathcote Botanical Gardens, or the Nature Conservancy.

Anecdotes, photos, and condolences may be shared online with the family at www.englewoodfh.com.

ARMED SERVICES REVIEW

Julie A. Bittinger has been specifically identified for early promotion to senior airman in the U.S. Air Force. The airman was awarded the new rank ahead of other Air Force members by a "Below-the-Zone" promotion board, which considered the airman's time in grade, time in service, job performance, military knowledge, bearing, exceptional qualifications, self-improvement efforts, and best overall record.

According to an Air Force spokesperson, the Below-the-Zone program provides an opportunity for exceptionally well-qualified airman first class to a one-time consideration for promotion to senior airman six months prior to the fixed fully qualified phase point. To be selected and considered for the promotion, the airman must meet specific requirements outlined in Air Force regulations and must be recommended by the commander.

Bittinger is a flight security controller assigned to the 341st Missile Security Forces Squadron at Malmstrom Air Force Base, Mont. The senior airman has served in the military for two years.

The 2009 graduate of Southern High School is the daughter of James K. Bittinger II and Donna S. Bittinger, Oakland.

Genealogy Help Is Available Tuesdays At Oakland Library

Ruth Enlow Library genealogy specialist Venessa Stacy is now available at the Oakland library on Tuesdays from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. to assist patrons in researching local history and genealogy. She previously was in the library on Mondays.

Stacy holds a bachelor of science degree in social studies secondary education and has worked in public and university library systems consistently for 10 years.

The genealogy specialist is a grant-funded position made possible by Western Maryland Regional Library, offering limited weekly hours for in-depth assistance with history and genealogy questions.

Some assistance, however, is available at the Oakland reference desk during normal library hours. Inquiries also can be e-mailed to genealogy@relib.net or mailed to the Ruth Enlow Library, 6 N. Second, Oakland, MD 21550. Patrons also may call 301-334-3996 with questions.

"The staff cannot conduct genealogical research for patrons," noted a library spokesperson, "but we will search library resources in an attempt to answer specific questions. If an answer cannot be found, we will assist patrons in locating other institutions, web sites, and/or knowledgeable people who may be of help."

The in-house local history and genealogy collection at the Oakland library focuses on resources relating to Garrett County, with materials also available on surrounding areas in Maryland, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania.

Online resources – such as Ancestry Library Edition, HeritageQuest Online, and the Ruth Enlow Library Obituary Database – are accessible by going to the library's web site at www.relib.net and selecting the Hist./Genealogy tab on the home page. Ancestry Library Edition must be accessed from a public computer within the library. HeritageQuest requires a library card number when accessed outside the library.

The Ruth Enlow Library Obituary Database is accessible from within the library or remotely without requiring a library card number. It currently contains death notices appearing in The Republican from 1877 to 1909.

For complete listing of services and programs available from the Ruth Enlow Library, persons can visit www.relib.net.

OTT Taking Reservations For Winter Comedy

Reservations are now available for Ken Ludwig's comedy titled Moon Over Buffalo. Reservations are strongly encouraged and may be made by calling Our Town Theatre at 301-334-5640, ext. 1.

The play is scheduled for presentation on Feb. 1 through 4 at 8 p.m., and Sunday, Feb. 5, at 2 p.m. The theatre management suggested that this play is suitable for those age 14 and older.

Tickets are $8 per person for Wednesday, Thursday, and Sunday, and $10 each for Friday and Saturday.

The cast members are Jack Spencer, Judy Bertsch, Marshall Thayer, Ashley Roush, Mikey Virts, Jen Virts, Erin Peacock, Paul Blank, Bill Mead, Kerry Dillsworth, and Frank Shap. Amy Marple is the stage manager, and Jane Avery is the director.

The plot involves Charlotte and George Hay, an acting couple who are on tour in Buffalo in 1953 with a repertory consisting of Cyrano de Bergerac and Noel Coward's Private Lives.

"Fate has given these thespians one more shot at starring roles in the movie The Scarlet Pimpernel, and film director Frank Capra himself is en route to Buffalo to catch their matinee performance," Avery said. "Will Charlotte appear or run off with their agent? Will George be sober enough to emote? Will Capra see Cyrano, Private Lives or a disturbing mixture of the two? Hilarious misunderstandings pile on madcap misadventures in this valentine to theatre hams everywhere."

Questions may be addressed to Avery at 301-334-5640, ext. 3.

EGLON MOUNTAINEERS
Trevor Spaid, reporter

On Jan. 9, members, Cloverbuds, and parents of the Eglon Mountaineer 4-H Club heard Robin Feather, local president of the Union Ambulance Squad, talk about Emergency Training, specifically on how to properly make a 911 call.

Emergencies are of two types: medical emergency, and traumatic medical emergency. Information given by the caller to the dispatcher is extremely important, and some facts, such as the new 9-U address, what kind of injuries are being reported, who is injured, and the type of emergency, are necessary for a proper and prompt response from the local squad. She also brought up the fact that the squad personnel is made up of community volunteers, and that in the near future, our members would be of age to become volunteers that are vitally needed to continue this emergency service.

Savannah Arnett led the group in singing "What's Your Name, My Little Boy." Devotions were presented by Jonathon Blamble and Trevor Spaid. Sierra Evans led the pledges.

Jackie Blamble, health chairman, led discussion on "How to Brush Your Teeth" and asked members to name the brand of toothpaste they used. Apple slices were used as an example of a healthy snack.

Prior to the business meeting, a poster workshop was conducted by Stacey Evans and other parents. Members' ideas were translated into poster form. Completed posters and photos for the county 4-H contests are to be given to leader Linda Lewis by Feb. 1.

Dates for future workshops and citizenship activities were discussed. A workshop called "6 Easy Bites" will be held on a Saturday in February.

The club voted to give the Preston County 4-H Foundation a membership donation of $25, IFYE program $25, and a check to the foundation to cover club insurance for members.

Danielle Blamble gave a project talk, "My Cats."

The next meeting, Feb. 11, will have a program on flag folding and etiquette, and more project talks and demonstrations are expected.

Rams Roll Over Huskies, But Fall To Sentinels And Miners

After rolling over county rival Northern, 70-48, in Oakland on Friday, the Southern High boys' varsity was defeated twice in 24 hours this week, falling to host Fort Hill on Monday, 76-59, and losing to Mountain Ridge, 48-28, Tuesday in Frostburg.

The results left the Rams with an overall record of 7-3, which they will put on the line this Friday evening at Tucker County.

Rams D.J. Ritchie hit a game-high 20 points and teammate Kurt Gangler was right behind with 18 in Friday's win over Northern, a game that was close until the third quarter.

The score was knotted at 14-14 at the end of the first period, and the Huskies out-scored the home team in the second stanza by a 17-10 margin to take a 31-24 advantage into the locker room at halftime.

Whatever Ram coach Jon Hegeman told his squad during the break seemed to work, as Southern out-scored the Huskies in the third quarter by a 22-8 margin to take a 46-39 lead into the final period. The Rams continued to pour it on down the stretch, out-scoring the Huskies in the final quarter by a 24-9 margin to secure the lopsided win.

Also reaching double figures for the Rams was Wyatt McBee with 11 points.

Leading the Huskies in scoring was Pat Sines, who netted 16 points and also had five rebounds. Tyler Yutzy also reached double figures with 13 points.

The loss dropped the Huskies to 3-5 overall. They also fell to Fort Hill on Tuesday. (See other story for details.)

The Southern junior varsity team extended its record to 8-0 by topping Northern in the first game of the evening, 63-45, as the Rams had four players finish with double figures. Reese Haskiell led all scorers with 18 points, while teammates Derek Hinebaugh netted 15, Kevin Harris recorded a double-double with 12 points and 10 rebounds, and Lucas Ritchie added 10 points.

Northern's top scorers were Andrew Moser and Trevon Jones, each with 12 points, and Jonah Schneider with 10.

From the tip-off to the final buzzer of Monday's game against Fort Hill, the Rams were never really in control, as the Sentinels kept them at arm's length on the scoreboard.

The Rams trailed at the end of the first quarter, 21-16, and were down by seven, 35-28, at halftime. The Sentinels stretched their lead to 56-38 by the conclusion of the third stanza and were never seriously threatened in the fourth.

While Gangler recorded 20 points for the Rams, and McBee netted 13, D.J. Ritchie finished well below his scoring average with just seven points. Kevin Colaw chipped in with eight points.

Kammari Powell hit a game-high 21 points to pace Fort Hill offensively, Garrett D'Atri scored 18, Mark Kelly finished with 13, and Jarrett Wolfe scored 11 points and also pulled down a game-high 11 rebounds.

The win lifted the Sentinels' record to 7-3 overall, and broke a 3-1, second-place tie with the Rams in the Appalachian Mountain Athletic Conference standings. Allegany leads the AMAC rankings with a 5-0 mark.

The SHS junior varsity also sustained a 45-42 loss – its first of the season – to the Sentinel jayvees in the first game. It was Southern's first defeat in nine starts.

The Rams came from behind to take a two-point lead via a long-range bucket by Lucas Ritchie with 1:10 to play. But a bucket by Fort Hill's Dalton Gaus knotted the score at 42-42 with 46 seconds to play. The Sentinels regained possession after a Southern foul with 20 seconds left. The score was still tied at 42-42 when Sentinel Brandon Stotler got fouled on his put-back basket with just one second remaining. He then hit his free throw to give his team the 3-point win.

Southern was led by Reese Haskiell with 10 points and five assists, and Derek Hinebaugh, also with 10 points. Ritchie and Kevin Harris followed with eight points apiece, and Harris also grabbed eight rebounds.

Three Fort Hill players each scored nine points.

The Miners of Mountain Ridge all but shut down the typically potent offense of the Ram varsity on Tuesday, as Ritchie was the only SHS player to reach double figures. Gangler netted only five points, and McBee went scoreless.

The Rams trailed by just a basket at the end of the first quarter, 10-8, trailed at halftime by a 22-15 margin, and were well back at 41-23 when the fourth quarter began.

Montana Bradley and Dan Strietbeck led the Miners in scoring, with 13 and 12 points, respectively, while teammate Caleb Fazenbaker just missed double figures with nine points.

It was only the fifth win in 11 starts for the Miners, who evened their AMAC record at 3-3.

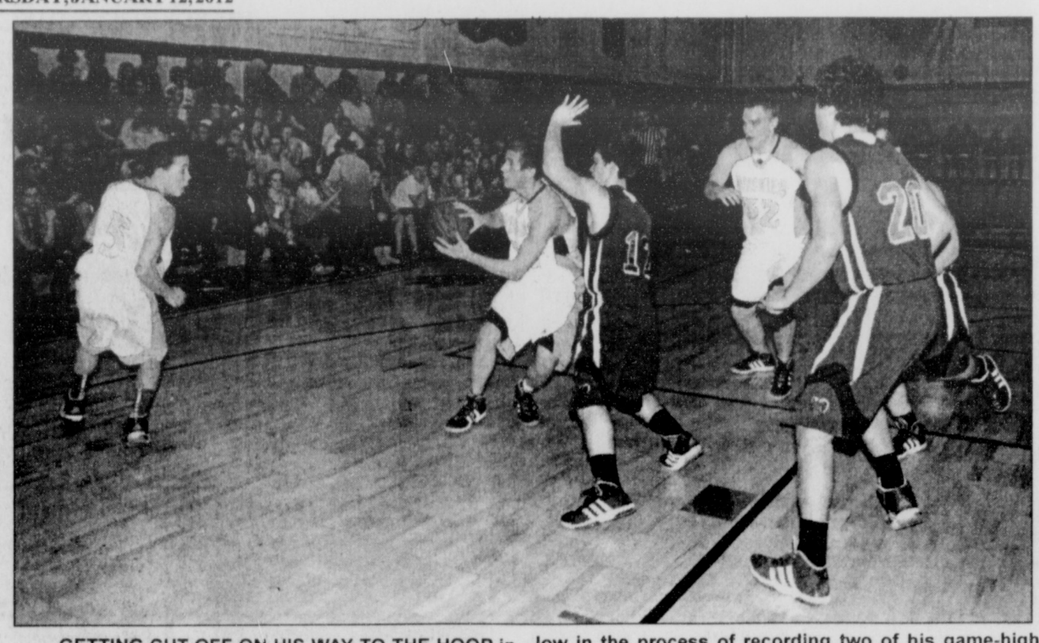
The Southern junior varsity got back on track in the first game, defeating the Mountain Ridge jayvees, 52-40.

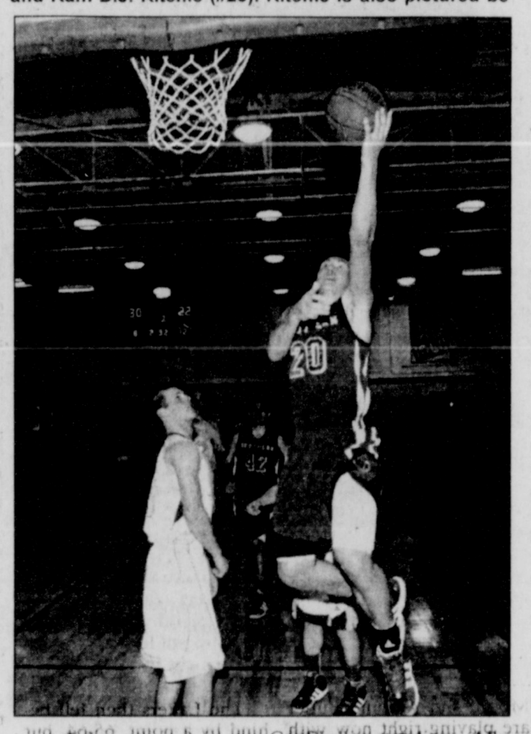
The Rams led throughout the game, affording Coach Dave Ritchie the opportunity to play everyone on the team.

Reese Haskiell and Matt Mayles led Southern in scoring, with 13 and 12 points, respectively. Lucas Ritchie and Derek Hinebaugh added nine points each, and Kevin Harris pulled down six rebounds.

Jake Hafer led the Miners with a game-high 17 points.

After Friday's games at Tucker County, the Ram teams will host Bishop Walsh next Tuesday, with the jayvee contest set to tip off at 6 p.m., and the varsity clash to get under way at 7:30.





GETTING CUT OFF ON HIS WAY TO THE HOOP in the photo above is Northern Husky Pat Sines, who is being blocked by Southern Ram Brian Wildman and decides to pass off to teammate Robert Hill (#5). The Rams coasted to a 70-48 win in the first meeting between the two local teams this season, held Friday on the Huskies' court. Sines led the Huskies in scoring with 16 points. Also identifiable in the photo are Husky Nick Ruff (#32) and Ram D.J. Ritchie (#20). Ritchie is also pictured below in the process of recording two of his game-high 20 points, while Northern's Jeremy Bender, left, makes sure that he does not commit a foul. Southern's Kurt Gangler was right behind Ritchie in scoring, as he recorded 18 points. Huskies Fall To Rival Rams, Golden Tornados, Sentinels

It was a tough week on the basketball court for the Northern High boys' varsity, as the Huskies were hammered by county rival Southern in Oakland on Friday, 70-48 (see other story), lost to host Keyser on Saturday, 53-33, and were dominated by visiting Fort Hill on Tuesday, 74-51.

The results left the Huskies with an overall record of 3-6 and an Appalachian Mountain Athletic Conference mark of 1-3.

Against Keyser, the Huskies fell behind early and never seriously threatened the Golden Tornados, as they trailed 15-7 at the end of the first quarter, were down 30-10 at halftime, and were behind 37-22 when the fourth period began.

Pat Sines was the only Husky to reached double figures, as he netted 12 points.

Leading Keyser were Corey Armstrong and Jamison Jones, who each scored 11 points, with Jones also getting seven rebounds and four assists. Wyatt Nelson provided 10 points and eight boards.

The Northern junior varsity dropped the first game, 49-42. Danny Fife led Keyser with 16 points and Andrew Bosher was the scoring leader for the Huskies with 11 points.

In Tuesday's contest with Fort Hill, the Huskies kept things close through the opening period and trailed by just two points, 19-17, when that quarter ended. They were down 37-25 at halftime, and the Sentinels then took a commanding 55-34 advantage into the final stanza.

Jarrett Wolfe ripped the nets for 30 points to lead Fort Hill (8-3 overall, 6-1 AMAC), while Mark Kelly finished with 14 points.

Tyler Yutzy led the Huskies in scoring with 18 points, and Jeremy Bender also reached double figures with 13.

The NHS jayvees fell in the opening game, 51-35, with Dalton Gaus and Austin Chris each netting 15 points to lead the winners. Adam Warnick scored 10 to pace the Huskies' offensive effort.

The Northern teams will try to get back into the win column this Friday at home against Bishop Walsh. They will travel to Allegany next Tuesday.

Rams Down Bishop Walsh, Best Mountain Ridge In Away Game

Hosting Bishop Walsh on Monday, the Southern High varsity girls' basketball team took a dominating win, 52-31, behind a big effort by Alycia Horner.

That win was followed by another on Wednesday, when the Rams bested Mountain Ridge, 50-38.

Against Bishop Walsh, the top-ranked Southern squad was led by Horner, who had 14 points, and by Mandy Sweitzer, who tallied a double-double (10 points and 14 rebounds).

In all, nine Rams scored in the matchup, including Alli Shaffer and Hannah Horne, who each added eight points.

Southern got off to a good start, making it 18-7 after one quarter. It was 29-18 at the half and 37-25 entering the fourth quarter.

Kelsey Buser led Bishop Walsh with 14 points.

Southern won the jayvee game 38-22. Alicia Roth had 15 points and Crystal Tobery nine for the Rams. Hailey Mock tallied nine in the game for Bishop Walsh.

Facing Mountain Ridge, Rams Kambrie Bosley and Mandy Sweitzer each scored 10 points, while Sweitzer added 11 rebounds to her stat sheet.

Mountain Ridge played enough defense at the start to keep the game close through the first quarter. Southern began to pull away in the next period, however, and took a 9-point lead by halftime.

The Rams began to break down their opponent in the second half, keeping Mountain Ridge from putting together any substantial offensive drives. Southern allowed only eight points to be scored and had an 18-point advantage by the end of the third quarter.

The defense for the Rams wasn't quite as lights out in the final quarter, but the team had plenty of breathing room and left Frostburg with a 12-point victory.

Sarah Raines had 14 points and 11 rebounds, while her teammate Shae Winner added 11 points for Mountain Ridge.

The Miners won the jayvee game 39-25 behind 17 points scored by Amie Blank. Roth scored 14 for Southern.

With the wins, Southern has won six of its last seven games and is now 8-3 overall (6-1 in conference).

The Rams will next play host to Hampshire on Saturday. That game is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Men's Basketball League Results Are Announced

In the Oakland Men's Sunday Basketball League games played Sunday afternoon, teams sponsored by Taylor-Made, Hutton Auto, and Fox's Pizza were all victorious.

Taylor-Made topped D&L Coal/ALL Construction, 60-51, with Jason Brenneman and Max Cadorette pacing the winners in scoring with 25 and 23 points, respectively. Dylan Evans and Zane Harvey netted 17 and 14 points to lead D&L/ALL.

Joe DiSimone's game-high 26 points paved the way for Hutton Auto's 66-47 thrashing of Terra Alta VFW #578. Teammate Todd Slaubaugh also reached double figures with 11 points. Scott Giorko scored 16 and Brad Sisler finished with 10 points to lead the VFW.

Fox's held off Automated Packaging to record a 61-57 win. Mike Browning and Doug Copeland each scored 15 points for the winners, J.J. Bolyard was right behind with 14, and Ryan White netted 12. Hitting a game-high 24 points for Automated Packaging was Ted Kitzmiller, while Jason Shank added 15 and Matt Stephens chipped in with 10.

Games slated for this Sunday afternoon will pit D&L/ALL Construction against Automated Packaging in the 6 p.m. contest, Terra Alta VFW vs. Fox's Pizza at 7 p.m., and Taylor-Made against Hutton Auto in the 8 p.m. tip-off.

Currently racked with injuries and team vacancies for other reasons, the Garrett College men's basketball team dropped two of three Maryland JUCO Conference games this past week. The Lakers lost to host Baltimore City, 89-77, on Saturday, regrouped to defeat visiting Takoma Park on Monday, 85-75, and then dropped a tough, 75-72 contest last night at Essex CC.

Among those players currently missing from the Laker lineup are veteran Frank Holloway, Jordan Grady, and Ed Herpel, all with injuries and, according to head coach Dennis Gibson, not expected to play for the remainder of the season. Guila Panzo was injured before the winter break, and is still sidelined, two other players have been rendered academically ineligible, and another has left the team.

"On top of that, Din Moore and Antonio Butler are playing right now with various sprains," said Gibson, "so we're pretty thin right now."

The primary individual nemesis for the Lakers in Saturday's clash with Baltimore City CC was Carlos Smith, who scored a game-high 25 points.

Even though they were missing four starters with injuries, the Lakers got strong efforts from Dan Brown and Patrice Tekeda, and GC led their hosts at halftime, 45-42. However, the Lakers' shooting went cold in the second half and they ultimately wore down.

Garrett trailed in baskets by a 34-30 margin, but hit a total of 11 3-pointers, compared to just five by the Panthers, so it was at the foul line that the home team actually won the game. The Lakers had only 10 opportunities from the line for the entire game and hit six of them, while Baltimore drained 15 of 19 attempts (79%).

Brown led the Lakers in scoring with 19 points, Matt Gibson and Din Moore each recorded 12, with Gibson hitting four long-range buckets. Tekeda added eight points.

Other Panthers reaching double figures in scoring were Donte Stuckey and Sean Farr with 15 apiece, and Warren Wright with 13.

Despite their depleted ranks, the Lakers were able to rally and then hold off Takoma Park on Monday to get back into the win column.

Garrett came out on fire at the tip-off and raced out to a 14-point lead, which the Falcons cut to seven, 39-32, by intermission.

The Lakers then fell behind by a point, 65-64, but pulled back out in front with a 3-point bucket by Moore and never relinquished the lead.

Armond Perez gave one of his best performances of the season, as he recorded a double-double with 22 points and 13 rebounds. Brown and Tekeda each connected for 17 points, Moore netted 11, and Gibson finished with 10. Tony Butler reached double figures in rebounds with 10.

Leading the Falcons offensively was Marcellus Watson, who finished with a game-high 27 points. Matthew Johnson scored 14 points, while Brandon Davis and Ivan Flores each contributed 10 points.

In a reversal from the Baltimore City CC game, the Lakers had 30 opportunities at the foul line, compared to only nine for the Falcons. The Garrett players converted 22 of those 30 attempts. Takoma Park finished with a 31-30 edge in baskets.

Details of last night's 3-point loss to Essex CC were not received by presstime this morning.

The Lakers are scheduled to host Catonsville on Sunday, with that tipoff set for 2 p.m., and then entertain Hagerstown CC next Wednesday in a 7 p.m. start.

one of a few reform-oriented states to be awarded a portion of the federal government's $4.3 billion Race to the Top funding, which has helped the state strengthen standards for students and educators, build a new data warehouse, and improve educator evaluation. Just last month, Maryland received an additional four-year $50 million federal grant to help continue its reform efforts in critical early childhood education programs.

Maryland's 2012 ranking in Quality Counts is based on state education policies and student performance that reflect nearly two decades of work under recently retired state superintendent Nancy S. Grasmick and Dr. Sadusky to solidify the preK-12 curriculum; state accountability and standards; educator effectiveness; and work on school readiness, high school reform, and preparation for college and the workplace.

Quality Counts uses more than 100 indicators to develop its report, making it what many believe is the most broad-based look at educational quality that is currently available. Individual grades reported by Education Week show Maryland's consistent strength throughout the report card.

•Chance for Success – Maryland received a B+ grade. This category includes such factors as parental education, family income, student performance, and graduation rates.

•K-12 Achievement – Maryland received a B grade (up from a B- last year). This category includes National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) scores and an analysis of achievement gaps. This grade ranked third in the nation.

•Transitions and Alignment – Maryland tied for first in the nation with an A grade (2011 data). This category includes early childhood education, college readiness policies, and workforce policies.

•School Finance – Maryland received a B+ grade. This category is based on school funding and equity in finance.

•Standards, Assessments, and Accountability – Maryland received a B+ grade. Maryland has a long history of high standards and detailed statewide accountability programs.

•The Teaching Profession – Maryland ranked third in the nation with a B grade (up from fifth last year). Maryland continues to improve the quality of its education workforce.

Today's announcement by Education Week continues Maryland's long history of success in the annual review. Maryland has consistently worked to strengthen policies and improve student achievement, according to Sadusky. The state placed third in 2008, the first year the publication issued a comprehensive ranking, before gaining the top spot for the first time in the 2009 Quality Counts report. Maryland's lead on the rest of the nation grew with the 2010 report, and its success has been confirmed over the past two years.

"None of this success would be possible without the efforts of the staff of the Maryland State Department of Education, members of the Maryland State Board of Education, and local system superintendents, administrators, and teachers for continuing to shine a spotlight on improving student achievement," Dr. Sadusky said. "Our schools benefit greatly from being a bipartisan issue in our state, and we've had strong and consistent support from the governor, the Maryland General Assembly, educators, parents, business leaders, and the public at large."

Most of the state-level data gathered by Education Week comes from a policy survey of the states conducted in the summer and fall of 2011. In addition, the publication draws on data from such organizations as the U.S. Department of Education, U.S. Bureau of the Census, and the American Federation of Teachers.

promised to actively fight for the legislation, giving supporters hope his influence could make the difference.

"It's having the governor and the [House] speaker have persuasive conversations, and, if necessary, a little strong-arming never hurt," said Delegate Heather Mizeur, D-Montgomery.

GARRETT COUNTY MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

LOCAL TEENS DONATE TRUCKLOAD OF FOOD – The Deep Creek Baptist Church youth boys' Sunday school class recently reached its goal of filling a dump truck full of food. "Our goal was to raise food for the food pantries of Garrett County," said Jason Heath, associate pastor. "We hope that the families of Garrett County will be greatly blessed with the food donated. It seemed like an unreachable goal for a few teenage boys to fill a dump truck, but they worked hard and met the goal that they set for themselves. The church is proud of the boys working hard to serve others." Heath expressed his appreciation to those who helped meet that goal with food and monetary donations. Left to right are Heath, Joshua Lahay, Brother Mark Spurrier, Drew Miller, and Mikail Perrine. Not pictured are Austin Forrester, Corey Horner, and Dakota Lambert.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

I saw on the Pittsburgh NBC channel that it is time for the Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg. It is quite a wonderful event. I remember one year in the last couple years of my high school career, Marla Frickey joined my father and me to visit it. It is somewhat similar to an indoor state fair show, without the unnecessary carnival.

The House of Representatives cut funding to the energy assistance program. Maybe I will not get my assistance, which I really count on to bring me through the pretty cold transition times, like at the end of this winter and next fall. And which part of the Pittsburgh media market do you think has the coldest weather? You would think the far northern parts like Butler would have the coldest weather. But, no, it's Deep Creek in Maryland, where it was in the 20s last evening and this morning.

But virtually all the snow is gone from around my house, except for a few small streaks in the corn field.

It is a bit of a sad day for me, because my Caitlin and Mere must go back to Morgantown for their spring semester. That means that they will not be here for today's Steeler play-off game in Denver. There were a large number of Steeler fans in Denver to greet them when they arrived yesterday in the mile-high city.

My girls were delighted to read the editorial in last week's issue of The Republican about how West Virginia University sports teams do not get their fair share of attention. Like yesterday, the basketball team won by a significant margin against the always formidable opponent, the Georgetown Hoyas.

Sadly, we are all reminded of what happened one year ago today, Jan. 9, when a clearly insane man got hold of a large calibre automatic weapon and killed six people at a Congresswoman Gabrielle Giffords "meet and greet" for her constituents in Tucson, Ariz. A 9-year-old little girl was among the dead. Giffords was able to change her life, although nothing will be the same for her. I don't know if she will be able to continue to serve her nation as a member of Congress.

While I looked at my late grandfather in his casket, my most treasured memory is of his old, work-damaged hands, which were still quite strong just before he died. I remember the sight of him using those fingers bent from arthritis to braid my horse's tail before I learned that skill. I learned mainly by watching him do it. Then, I had a dream of doing it for myself, and then I could do it for myself.

But all of my most important memories about my dearly departed grandfather are of how they affected my life while he was still alive.

I don't want my not fully adequate life insurance policy to be used on a grueling, endless funeral-home viewing of my dead body. According to various life insurance ads, the average American funeral costs more than $6,000. That much money could be better spent to help my daughters continue on the road toward their future. And I deliberately choose to send flowers to any critically ill people while they are still alive, so they can enjoy them.

I think a perfectly reasonable alternative to spending big money on floral arrangements for funeral displays would be to give the bereaved family something to grow, like some bulbs from your daffodils or a rose bush or other flowering bush. Even if you have a large older lilac bush, you often can find baby lilac shoots under it, and simply give them to various friends. That's what Dennis Friend did for me. My lilac bush is a descendant of some from the Friend family in the Swanton area.

There is a whole array of evidence for several voyagers from various nations discovering the Western Hemisphere many centuries before Columbus reached one Caribbean island. There are many places along the Pacific Ocean shoreline from South America to an island off the shore of California that show distinct evidence of Polynesian culture, from the huge stone statues on Easter Island off the coast of South America. Also, some special kind of fish hooks in that California island perfectly match the ones still used in the South Pacific region. A widely known claim is that the Vikings reached the Atlantic coast of Canada, but other evidence shows that they also reached mainland USA. Some scholars say that an Irish clergyman and company might have landed in Connecticut.

Even more odd is the legend with some evidence to back it up that some group of Israelis might have landed around South Carolina, where a significant number of the Cherokee tribe still live, and some show signs of ancestors not of Native American lineage. But so far, DNA studies have not confirmed that. Also, a stone in one Southwestern desert has what appears to be an etching of the Ten Commandments in the Cherokee language.

And, get this: In a coastal region of Central America, people found fragments of pottery that seem very similar to ancient Japanese pottery.

I am fascinated by these kinds of things. One unformed ambition from my childhood was to become an archeologist. So I collect various little pieces of artifacts from the site of the old house belonging to our barn. I know for sure that house used to be the home of Oral and Emma Glotfelty, and my father grew up in it. Also, the grief-stricken Yoder family once lived here. They lost seven children within a few months during one epidemic of some fatal disease that killed many of our local ancestors. After those bad times, the Yoders moved west to Kansas. But their children's graveyard always fascinated me. Of course, during my childhood I believed that it was an Indian burial ground.

But those seven grave markers are typical of the Bittinger area's oldest graves: just fairly flat and smooth field stones. There are several of that kind of grave marker in the Glotfelty Cemetery, and the old Cherry Glade church cemetery off Foxtown Road has a number of those very basic markers. There are even some in the large Bittinger Cemetery across the road from my church, Emmanuel Lutheran Church on Maynardier Ridge Road.

This includes the grave of my Native American ancestor William Bittinger. He was the Shawnee baby taken home by a Bittinger couple after they killed his parents. They raised him like their own child, and he married an adopted female cousin. Their offspring was Alice Bittinger, mother of my Buckle grandfather.

My Aunt Helen Englar has an extensive collection of Native American arrowheads found in the fields of her Brenneman grandparents, now the home of Richard and Regina Brenneman.

Even if Ben Roethlisberger is not 100 percent and his ankle hampers his mobility, even 80 percent of Roethlisberger is better than 100 percent of Tebow. At least that was true for the first quarter.

The last thing I want to see is Tebow have success. His show-off behavior gets on my nerves.

Ask The Everyday Scientist

HIGGS BOSON (PART I)

by Dr. Tom Sheahen

Q. What is this special atomic particle that scientists are searching for, and why is it in the news so much these days? Why is it important?

A. The Higgs Boson is the focus of interest by physicists because it is speculated to be the particle that "carries" a certain special force between quarks, and causes particles to have mass. To answer your question, I'll split the topic in two: first about how the search is conducted (this week); and then why it is important (next week).

For a particle to be predicted first by theory, and later found experimentally, has happened many times previously in particle physics: the positron, some leptons, quarks, etc. The neutrino, predicted in 1931, wasn't found until 1954. The relevant theory in this case is called SUperSYmmetry (SUSY), and it provides a powerful way to organize and understand the fundamental forces of nature. The appeal of SUSY is because it make sense out of a zoo of observed particles that have connected properties.

Electrons have a small mass, $m_e = 9 \times 10\text{-}31$ kg, and the familiar Einstein formula $E = mc^2$ enables us to express the electron mass in units of energy: $m_e = 1/2$ MeV (million electron-volts), which is a very handy unit in which to discuss particle masses.

Protons have much greater mass, nearly 2,000 times heavier: $m_p = 936$ MeV; the neutron has $m_n = 938$ MeV. Many more assorted particles have different charge, different spin, etc., but a particle's mass is an easy parameter by which to categorize it. To look for a particle whose mass is believed to lie in a certain energy range, you must build a particle accelerator strong enough to reach that energy.

Particle accelerators have been around for most of a century, and get bigger with each generation. They've long since outgrown the size of a typical physics lab. The largest ever built in America is at Batavia, Ill. (suburban Chicago), and is called FermiLab. It's a circular loop 4 miles around, reaching energies in the teravolt range (1 TeV = 1 million MeV).

A particle accelerator brings the speed of subatomic particles up to very near the speed of light, giving enormous kinetic energy to each particle. An entire beam of such particles zips around in a huge circle. The beam stays inside a vacuum chamber shaped like a very thin doughnut. Strong magnetic fields guide the particles in their circular path, while electric fields add energy and speed.

It is also possible to manufacture anti-particles, by occasionally directing the beam into a fixed target. We capture and accumulate anti-particles produced there, and then project them as a beam traveling in the opposite direction within the very same tunnel. At selected intersection points, these beams come up head-to-head against each other. That kind of accelerator is termed a collider.

Head-on collisions are necessary in this business. When a particle moves at nearly the speed of light, hitting a stationary object is like hitting a bug with your automobile windshield – you barely notice the splatter, and keep on going.

Although most particles miss and just "pass in the night," occasionally there is a head-on collision, which is so energetic that a wide assortment of particles appears in the debris of the collision. Armed with a great deal of theory, physicists interpret the results they see in the debris pattern. The analysis process is sped up by computers that recognize patterns for all the usual collisions between protons, hadrons, leptons, and their various anti-particles. When something shows up that doesn't match any normal pattern, that causes excitement. Then it's time for a closer look.

The expected numerical mass of the Higgs Boson is too high to be reached by FermiLab, even though FermiLab found (over a 30+ year period) the necessary evidence to confirm the existence of many other quarks and gluons, which gave SuperSymmetry theory its present credibility. Still, the FermiLab accelerator has now been shut down.

To reach the Higgs energy range, the Large Hadron Collider (LHC) was built in a huge 17-mile circular tunnel under the Swiss-French border near Geneva. (The name hadron applies to medium-to-heavy particles.) Construction took a decade. The LHC accelerator first went into service in 2008, but within a few days, a component failure disabled many magnets. Following over a year of repairs, since 2010 they have gradually been increasing the energy incrementally, to prevent another component failure and catastrophe.

Now the LHC is running about half of full energy (7 TeV expected), and there is hopeful anticipation throughout the physics community. Everybody wants the Higgs Boson to be found, and the sooner the better. That's why the physics news nowadays is focused on this experiment.

Next week: Why it is so important.

Dr. Sheahen lives at Deep Creek Lake and has taught physics at Garrett College. Persons wishing to submit questions for this column may e-mail them to newsroom@therepublicannews.com.

TEENS HOLD BLANKET DRIVE – The Grantsville Involvement Group and the Happy SADD Club of Grantsville held a blanket drive for the homeless of Garrett County. The members collected new and good used blankets and donated them to Community Action for distribution. Early in December they held a free community event at the Grantsville Senior Center. Participants could have their pictures taken with Santa and Mrs. Claus, and share cookies, hot chocolate, games, and crafts. More than 230 blankets were donated to this project, which was designed to help people with no place to stay as a result of various circumstances, such as fires, job losses, or being new to the area. Wal-Mart shopping card winners at the event were Allison Broadwater, $100, and Brian Tiemersma, $50. Pictured above are some of the many blankets donated by county residents. "It was a tremendous turn-out for the blankets and the event," said Sharon Menges, outreach worker for the Garrett County Health Department and coordinator for the two groups. "I think people had a really good time." Anyone interested in joining either group may call Menges at 301-334-7730 or 301-895-3111. Pictured above left to right in front sitting on the blankets are Bailey Tiemersma, Derek Silbaugh, and Brian Tiemersma; sitting behind the blankets are Tereka Lloyd, Tiffany Hutzel, Jeanette Bland, and Sabrina Silbaugh. Standing at left are Menges, Kista Wilt (Mrs. Claus), and Tina Broadwater; standing at right are Jimmy Beitzel, Linda Green, Wilma Hutzel (in front), and Robin Jones. Participants not pictured are Brian Broadwater, Andy Beachy, and Haley Moon.

Local Residents Among Grads Of Allegany College

Allegany College of Maryland graduated the largest fall class in its history when 231 students, including some from Garrett County, were recognized at commencement exercises on the Cumberland campus. The graduates earned a total of 253 associate degrees and certificates.

Garrett County students who earned either degrees or certificates are as follows:

Scarlett Fost, Bittinger, pharmacy technician certificate; Hannah Sines, Friendsville, medical assistant; Samantha Beachy, occupational therapy assistant, Sarah Broadwater, occupational therapy assistant, Amanda Cady, nursing, Susan Dyche, nursing, Martin Green, medical laboratory technology (biotechnology option), Kelly Knox, phlebotomy/EKG certificate, and Melissa Miller, phlebotomy/EKG certificate, all of Grantsville; Lisa Mauricci, McHenry, nursing; and Ginger Paugh, Oakland, occupational therapy assistant.

Medical Terminology Class Scheduled At Grantsville Center

Garrett College will hold a medical terminology course at the Northern Outreach Center, Grantsville, Jan. 25 to Feb. 29, on Mondays and Wednesdays, from 6 to 9:15 p.m., and Saturday, Feb. 18, from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The course includes an analysis of medical terminology designed to give a clear understanding of medical terms on the basis of roots, prefixes, suffixes, and derivatives.

It is intended for beginners in the health care field or to supplement the knowledge of those working in any type of medical setting such as physician offices, nursing homes, clinics or other facilities where health services are rendered.

The course is also offered as one in a series of the medical coding and billing curriculum.

Anyone who would like additional information may contact Terry Beachy, Northern Outreach Center coordinator, at 301-895-4700 or terry.beachy@garrettcollege.edu.

CELEBRATING 40 YEARS OF SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY

TAKES EMS TRAINING "TO NEW HEIGHTS" – Former Garrett College advanced life support student Doug Beitzel is a full-time career paramedic and firefighter for the Cumberland Fire Department and a flight paramedic for LifeNet 8-1, Air Methods Corp., using his skills, knowledge, and experience to provide emergency medical aid to people in dire situations. Pictured above in his "This is My GC" T-shirt, Beitzel stands next to one of the LifeNet 8-1 helicopters in which he and his team provide life support services to patients while in the air en route to a medical facility. Pictured below preparing for take-off, Beitzel is also a member of the Helicopter Emergency Aerial Tactical (HEAT) Team, which is operated jointly by the Cumberland Fire Department and Maryland State Police Aviation Division. Above right, he (back to camera) and a partner demonstrate a rescue-preparation maneuver while in the air. See story.

Former Garrett College Student Takes His EMS Training Sky High

by Peggy Santamaria

When Doug Beitzel decided to start the Garrett College Emergency Medical Services training in 1994, he had no idea where that choice would lead him. Today, not only does he serve as the Garrett College Emergency Services Training Center's Advanced Life Support (ALS) training coordinator, he is also employed full time as a career firefighter/paramedic for the city of Cumberland, in addition to working full time for LifeNet 8-1, Air Methods in Hagerstown.

Air Methods Corporation, the nation's largest provider of air medical emergency transport services and systems, is dedicated exclusively to air medical transport. The company transports close to 100,000 patients annually who require intensive medical care from either the scene of an accident or from general care hospitals to highly skilled trauma centers or tertiary care centers. Air Methods operates a fleet of 418 helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft at 311 bases serving 45 states, and is headquartered in Englewood, Colo.

Working two 24-hour shifts per week, Beitzel's team handles two types of calls.

"The first type is a scene call, which is what people normally think of as a medevac," he said. "We fly to a scene, pick up an injured person, and fly the patient to a trauma center.

"The second type of call is hospital-to-hospital," he continued, "which usually occurs when a smaller hospital has a critical patient it can't serve. The hospital will call us to come get the patient for transport to a bigger hospital with more capabilities."

It is in the latter transports that Beitzel said he feels he is really using the skills he acquired in his Garrett College training.

"This is where more of my critical care training comes in," he said. "We go into ERs, ICUs, even the operating rooms, and pick up patients and transport them. That includes all equipment, like IV pumps, ventilators, balloon pumps, etc. I would say our call volume in Hagerstown is 50/50 – half scene calls and half hospital-to-hospital. It's all about getting the patients where they need to go to get better."

Beitzel's transports are not always just a short hop, either.

"I have even done an international run," he said. "I took a patient from Las Vegas to London; by private jet, of course, not helicopter."

Beitzel's skills in emergency medical transport are also called into play as part of his work for the Cumberland Fire Department, where he is a member of the highly trained air rescue team known as HEAT (Helicopter Emergency Aerial Team). He was selected to serve as a paramedic for the HEAT team when it was first organized in 2003 by the Cumberland Fire Department in cooperation with the Maryland State Police Aviation Division, The team members are qualified to perform extreme rescue missions which might require deployment of a rescue basket, including a high-angle rescue or swift-water rescue.

Among the emergency interventions in which the HEAT team has participated were a West Virginia mine rescue, swift-water deployment to the Potomac River in Washington County, two downed aircraft in the area of West Virginia's Jefferson National Forest, a power plant smokestack rescue, and wilderness and mountain rescues in West Virginia and western Maryland.

The journey that brought Beitzel to this high-powered medical rescue work began when, as a volunteer firefighter for Garrett County in 1992, he responded to 9-1-1 calls.

"I saw people who were injured and sick, and I wanted to be able to help them more than I was able to at the time," he said. "So becoming an EMT (emergency medical technician) seemed to be the next natural step for me."

Beitzel enrolled in the Advanced Life Support (ALS) program at the Garrett College Emergency Services Training Center, which provides initial training and continuing education for ALS providers in Maryland Region I (Garrett and Allegany counties). Classes were held in Frostburg, a central location for the region.

Participating in the Garrett College program was a highly positive experience, Beitzel recalled.

"There are advantages to smaller programs, and I enjoyed the personal attention we got in the classes," he said. "At that time, Jim Koon was the coordinator of the program. He is now the program director. He became a mentor and good friend. Our friendship grew, and I enjoy working with him now."

When Beitzel took the paramedic course, it was a one-year program, though it has expanded to a two-year process.

"My life was very full while I was taking the training," he recalled. "I went to school two nights a week and attempted to get several hundred hours of clinical time done. This was while I was still working full time at Sincell Publishing in Oakland," he said.

During that hectic time, Beitzel said he was thankful to Jean Tressler, coordinator of operations in the Garrett College Continuing Education and Workforce Development Division, who oversees the Emergency Medical Services programs.

"Jean was very helpful with all the clinical time, schedules, and things like that," said Beitzel. "I am very lucky she has remained in her position because I work very closely with her now as the coordinator."

Beitzel described his responsibilities as Emergency Services Training Center program coordinator for Garrett College.

"CRT-Is and Paramedics go through a 1-2 year course to be functional on emergency calls," he said. "I coordinate the program, set clinical schedules, schedule instructors, and follow the students' progress. I'm a lead instructor for lab nights and run the SimLab – an actual ambulance that was donated to us for training purposes."

Tressler, having worked closely with Beitzel first when he was a student and now as a colleague, noted that in addition to handling the curriculum and instructors he also serves as clinical liaison with the hospitals, rescue squads, and fire/EMS companies.

"Prior to assuming this role, Doug was first an ALS student and then an instructor for the college," she said. "He was an excellent student and continues to be a well-prepared instructor who receives outstanding student evaluations. He is key in the day-to-day operations of the ALS training.

"I appreciate all that Doug does for us and enjoy working with him very much," Tressler continued, adding, "In fact, the SimLab would not have happened if it weren't for Doug's dedication and persistence."

Tressler noted that Advanced Life Support and other emergency responder classes will be offered by Garrett College during the spring semester. She encourages anyone who is interested in finding out about these programs to go online to www.garrettcollege.edu, select Continuing Education, and click on EMS Brochure. Persons may also telephone Tressler at 301-387-3085.

"We invite people to stop in our admissions office at the McHenry campus Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. to fill out an application or get information about enrolling at Garrett College," she added.

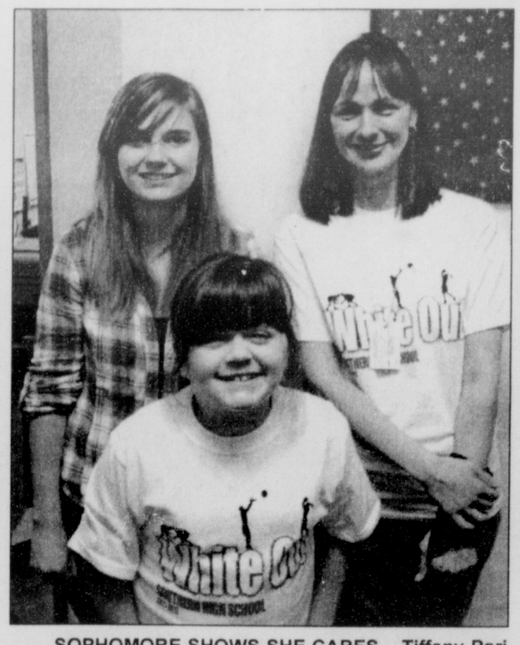
HONESTY REWARDED – Southern High junior Daniel Ashby was chosen as the November RAM (Random Acts of Maturity) Student of the Month for citizenship. Daniel received the honor after he turned in a large sum of money he found on the classroom floor to his psychology teacher Doug Oxford. According to Oxford, a female student had dropped the money in the prior class; she was so appreciative that someone was honest enough to turn it in. "This would have been the easiest thing in the world to pocket. No witnesses and no one would have known," Oxford said. "I think character is demonstrated best when no one is around but you and God." Ashby received a $25 gift card to Uno Restaurant, which sponsors the RAM Student of the Month. Pictured above, from left, are Ashby and Oxford.

RAM SHOWS MATURITY – Southern High School junior Clarissa Lloyd was named as the October RAM (Random Acts of Maturity) after a nomination by unified tennis coach Nan Gangler. The character trait for October was tolerance. Lloyd displayed tolerance after she was left without a partner at the Special Olympics and agreed to play with an athlete from another school for an exhibition match. "The young man she was paired with had a kidney transplant within the last year and needed her assistance and support," Gangler said. "Clarissa gladly played the match with him and helped him tremendously even though it was an exhibition. I think she had as much fun as he did, and it was great to see the cooperation between players and schools. She was tolerant of his immobility and spent most of the match running after balls with a smile on her face." The RAM student of the month is sponsored by Uno Restaurant, which provided Lloyd with a $25 gift certificate.



SOPHOMORE SHOWS SHE CARES – Tiffany Pariseau, a sophomore at Southern High School, was chosen as the December RAM (Random Acts of Maturity) Student of the Month. The character trait of caring was exemplified by Pariseau, who has found multiple ways to assist a new student at the school who is visually impaired. "She has befriended Ashley and helps her during fourth period when she is in the Guidance Office," explained Kelley Davis, guidance counselor. "She sits with her at assemblies. She has been really great." Pariseau was awarded a gift card to Uno Restaurant, the sponsor for the RAM program. In the photo, from left, are Pariseau, Ashley Krieg, and Davis.

She is a constant fixture on the honor roll, took a second-place award in the National History Day competition, and has won the Academic Excellence Award with high honors, which was awarded at a statewide ceremony for gifted children hosted by Johns Hopkins University Center for Talented Youth. Marple involves herself in the community by attending Deep Creek Baptist Church. After high school, she plans to pursue a degree in forensic science/chemistry. Her main career goal is to become a forensic anthropologist.

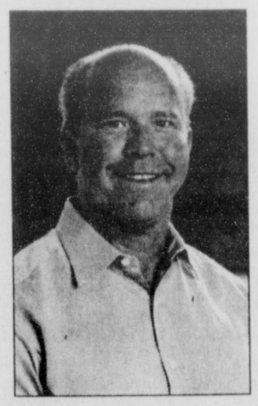
Entrepreneur John Delaney Seeking 6th District Seat



Montgomery County Democratic entrepreneur John Delaney has filed his candidacy for Maryland's Sixth Congressional District.

The 48-year-old Potomac resident holds a bachelor's degree in biology and English from Columbia University and a law degree from Georgetown Law School, which launched his career as a "business builder, job creator, and nonprofit community leader."

"I am running for Congress as a way of continuing my work as a proven job creator," Delaney said. "The unemployment rate in the country is tragic. We have a fundamental challenge – we need an economy that creates good jobs for the middle class. But there is also the long-term challenge – to reverse workforce trends so there is growth and job creation going forward. I understand how to create jobs and the needs of small businesses – and it's small businesses that are the job creation engine."

He noted that this challenge is particularly relevant to voters in the recently reformulated sixth district.

"Maryland has enjoyed the benefits of strong federal spending in our economy," Delaney said. "Based on widely held views of future federal spending patterns, Maryland is vulnerable, and this worries me greatly."

The candidate said for the past year he has led a statewide effort called Blueprint Maryland that has defined this issue as a "call to action" that needs focus.

"I am not a political insider, and I embrace the notion that people, not party politics, choose a candidate," Delaney said. "As an entrepreneur that has created over 1,000 jobs in Montgomery County and as a community leader, I bring a fresh and new perspective to this challenge that is different than the 'politics as usual' that has failed our nation; I am approaching this more as a citizen than as a politician. I view my candidacy as a cause rather than a career, and it is an effort to reform the system that has failed us."

The son of an electrician who earned scholarships to go to college from his father's union, Delaney said he learned at a young age to "roll up his sleeves" and work hard to succeed. Today, the father of four daughters is a self-described community activist in education, social justice, and progressive values. His wife April is an advocate for media literacy for children and their parents.

"There's a critical role for government, there's a critical role for small businesses, and there is a need to move beyond the negative politics and start addressing the challenges we face," Delaney said. "It strikes me that the problems facing our country are solvable, but they need to be solved by different people. They need to be solved through a spirit of compromise and generosity towards others that puts the best long-term interest of the district and country first. While this is viewed by some as inconsistent with partisan politics, it is the right answer to my mind."

Citing Delaney's vision and leadership, former Montgomery County executive Doug Duncan endorsed Delaney's candidacy.

"I was one of many who hoped John would run," said Duncan. "After many years, the Democratic Party has a chance to take back the Sixth Congressional District, and I believe that John Delaney is the candidate with the strongest background to go to Washington and turn our economy around."

Delaney founded two New York Stock Exchange-listed companies headquartered in Maryland by age 40. According to the candidate, his businesses have provided financing to over 5,000 companies, including the small and medium-sized startups that Wall Street and the "big banks" ignored.

Delaney founded Blueprint Maryland, a non-profit dedicated to educating and involving the public in diversifying Maryland's economy and encouraging private sector job growth, and serves in leadership positions on some of the leading non-profit organizations in the region.

"I know that the families of the Sixth District want something better than the impasse we have in Congress today, and John's leadership in the business sector and in the community gives him a keen understanding of leading and accomplishing measurable objectives," Duncan said. "He is a doer."

"My priority is jobs and our economy," Delaney stressed. "My campaign will start with visits to job creators and job training facilities, and this will be the focus throughout the campaign. During the next 90 days I will be providing detailed plans as to how to address the challenges facing our country in employment, education, and energy – my 'Three E Approach' – that is central to our future."

In 2007, Delaney was honored as one of three outstanding individual philanthropists in the Washington, D.C., region. He is a member of the board of directors of Georgetown University, a member of the board of directors of the National Symphony Orchestra, and member of the board of trustees of the Potomac School. He is the immediate past chairman of the board of St. Patrick's Episcopal Day School and a past member of the board of directors of the International Center for Research on Women.

HART FUNDRAISER DEEMED A SUCCESS – Dutch's New Year's Eve Celebration was a success in every respect, according to a HART for Animals spokesperson. The recently opened restaurant served a meal to a sellout crowd of 200; HART ran its annual the Fur Ball Casino and Silent Auction on the lower level, raising $4,500 for its building fund; and the guests danced to the music of the Bobby Nicholas Band until long past midnight. "With an atmosphere reminiscent of Monte Carlo, the casino – under the direction of Eric Robison – was a lively destination for the guests, many of whom sought out local celebrity Darvin Moon, who was dealer at one of the Texas Hold'em tables," noted the spokesperson. Among the winning players was Bill Beem, who donated the $750 he won to the HART Building Fund. The Adoption Center building will be erected this summer at HART's Bumble Bee Road site. The Silent Auction offered baskets donated by Arrowhead Market, Golden Key Property Management, Jeff and Aime Pringle, Tom and Elaine Bosko, and gift cards donated by local businesses, including Wisp Resort, McDonald's, Garrett 8 Cinemas, Advanced Auto, and Christmas Chalet, among others. Completing the auction offerings were a University of Maryland varsity jacket, donated by Studio 24E, formerly of Oakland; an original Holly Yashi jewelry set donated by Schoolhouse Earth; and a framed print of Deep Creek Lake, given by Tom and Susan Hertz. One departing guest summarized the general feeling of the fundraiser with "What a party. Sign me up for next year." HART for Animals Inc. is a charitable animal welfare organization founded in 2003 to improve the condition of homeless animals in the western Maryland region. HART is a 501(c)(3) corporation, and all donations are tax-deductible. For additional information on HART, the Spay/Neuter Clinic, or any HART programs, or to donate to the capital fund campaign, one may visit www.hartforanimals.org. Birding BITS BY Cindy Brook

Resilient Seed

White proso millet is quite resistant to the elements. It holds up well tossed on the ground, even in snow. The outer shell is easily cracked by birds with small beaks, so it is a favorite for sparrows, buntings, red-wings, cardinals, juncos, and more.

• Are you an agelast or an abderian? If you never laugh, you're the latter; if you laugh too much, you're the former.

• There is one species of frog, found in the Southeast Asian country of Indonesia, that has no lungs; it breathes entirely through its skin.

• You might be surprised to learn that the largest employer in the United States is the Department of Defense. Wal-Mart is No. 2, followed by the U.S. Postal Service.

• According to Tibetan tradition, a man must get permission from his lady love's maternal uncle before the couple can get married.'

• If you're in Florida and make a trip to the hair salon, keep in mind that in that state, it's illegal to fall asleep under a hair dryer. Both the client and the salon can be fined.

• It seems that almost every little girl has a Barbie doll, but have you ever thought about what a life-size Barbie would look like? She would be 7 feet, 2 inches tall, weigh 125 pounds and have bust-waist-hip measurements of 40-22-36. • The white rhinoceros is not actually white. The "white" part of the name comes from the Afrikaans word "wijd," which means "wide"; it describes the animal's lips. • Iconic German-American actress Marlene Dietrich once said that her favorite meal was hot dogs and champagne.

Moments in time THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 5, 1643, in the first record of a legal divorce in the American colonies, Anne Clarke of the Massachusetts Bay Colony is granted a divorce from her absent and adulterous husband, Denis Clarke, by the Quarter Court of Boston.

• On Jan. 7, 1785, Frenchman Jean-Pierre Blanchard and American John Jeffries travel from Dover, England, to Calais, France, in a gas balloon, making the first crossing of the English Channel by air. After almost crashing, the two men were forced to throw nearly everything out of the balloon to lighten the ship.

• On Jan. 4, 1847, Samuel Colt rescues the future of his faltering gun company by winning a contract to provide the U.S. government with 1,000 of his .44 caliber revolvers. Though never cheap, by the early 1850s, Colt revolvers were inexpensive enough to be a favorite with Americans headed westward during the California Gold Rush.

• On Jan 8, 1877, Crazy Horse and his warriors -- outnumbered, low on ammunition and forced to use outdated weapons -- fight their final losing battle against the U.S. Cavalry in Montana. On May 6, Crazy Horse led approximately 1,100 Indians to the Red Cloud reservation near Nebraska's Fort Robinson and surrendered. • On Jan. 6, 1925, in Madison Square Garden, Finnish long-distance runner Paavo Nurmi sets a new indoor world record, running a mile in 4:13.5. In the 5,000-meter race, the "Flying Finn" broke another indoor world record in 14:44.6. Nurmi often ran holding a stopwatch to pace himself, an innovation he developed.

• On Jan. 3, 1961, President Dwight Eisenhower closes the American embassy in Havana and severs diplomatic relations between the United States and Fidel Castro's government in Cuba. The action signaled that the United States was prepared to take extreme measures to oppose Castro's regime.

• On Jan. 2, 1971, 66 football (soccer) fans are killed in a stampede at a stadium in Glasgow, Scotland, as they attempt to leave a game. The tragedy was caused by the crush of spectators all leaving at the same time on the same stairway.

Q: Several weeks ago, I found a pair of salt and pepper shakers at a flea market. The set was made by the U.S. Glass Company, and the pattern, in dark amethyst, seems to be "California." I paid $25, and the condition is good to excellent. -- Robert, Lyons, N.Y.

A: Your set was made in about 1900 and probably would retail in the $135 to $150 range. The U.S. Glass Company was actually a consolidation of more than a dozen companies, all based in Pittsburgh. Although it went into receivership in 1907, several of the companies continued to produce ware for several more decades. The rare amethyst color is one of the factors that makes your salt and pepper shakers particularly valuable.

Q: My dad played in several big bands as a sideman throughout the 1930s. He appeared on numerous recordings, and he is missing at least a dozen cuts he is certain he did. Needless to say, I am scrambling to track down the original 78-rpm issues. Can you help me? -- Steve, Binghamton, N.Y.

A: Tracking down older recordings can sometimes be difficult. It is becoming hard to find 78s even in thrift shop. Part of this is because most people have discarded the turntables on which to play older recordings.

One of the better vintage music stores is Richard Gesner's The Music Connection, 1711 South Willow St., Manchester, NH 03103. This is one of New England's largest music stores and is a full-service business. For example, the inventory includes steel Victrola needles, paper sleeves for 16-, 33-, 45- and 78-rpm recordings, cylinders, cassettes, compact discs and even 8-track tapes. It also maintains a customer want list. Another source that might be helpful is Record Finder, P.O. Box 23060, Glen Allen, VA 23060.

A Decision for God

Decisions, decisions... our lives are full of them. Decisions are stressful. People want to help us make our decisions, but differing opinions can increase our confusion and weigh down our spirits. Why not pray about it? Include God in the decision. With Him by our side we have peace and strength as we face the challenges of our lives. Study His Word and learn of His will for you at your house of worship this week. Make your decision for God.

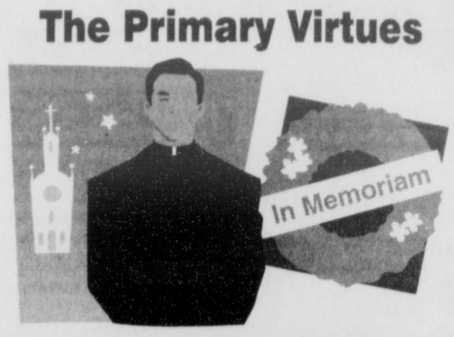
The Primary Virtues



While all the virtues have their role to play in a well-ordered life, some are more central than others. Aristotle thought that justice was the central virtue, at least in part because we are social animals and the virtue of justice concerned the reciprocity between members of society. Justice requires that we give to each other their fair share and not demand more for ourselves than is due us. But courage is also central to the moral life, because it requires courage to say and do the right thing, especially when doing the right thing may entail something fearful or dangerous. Courage is more than just doing one's duty in times of war or standing up to bullies. It is doing the right thing no matter what the circumstances. Temperance or self-control is another primary virtue, because without it we may be moved to act solely for pleasure, and not out of a concern to do what is right. A person who cannot control himself, whether in connection with anger, fear, or pleasure, is bound to be set adrift by his or her passions and by the fleeting emotions of the moment. While all of these virtues are praised throughout the Bible and are probably universal, there can be little doubt that Judeo-Christian morality puts love at the center. If we could just love each other everything else in the moral realm should fall into place.

"Jesus replied: 'Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind.' This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like it: 'Love your neighbor as yourself.' All the Law and the Prophets hang on these two commandments."

'12 Conservation Easement Apps Due February 10

Private landowners interested in protecting their farmland or wetland with this year's funding are encouraged to get their applications in soon. The USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) in Maryland has set Friday, Feb. 10, as the deadline for 2012 first-round funding consideration for the Farm and Ranch Lands Protection Program and Wetland Reserve Program.

The Farm and Ranch Lands Protection Program (FRPP) is a voluntary easement program that helps farmers and ranchers keep their land in agricultural production. The program provides matching funds to state or local governments and non-governmental organizations with existing farmland protection programs to purchase conservation easements. These permanent easements protect agricultural land and important farmland soils by prohibiting conversion to non-agricultural uses.

The Wetlands Reserve Program (WRP) provides an opportunity for landowners to receive financial assistance to protect, restore, and enhance wetlands on their property. WRP helps to reduce flooding, improve water quality by filtering sediment and chemicals, recharge groundwater, and more. In addition, these wetlands provide food and shelter for migratory birds and other wetland dependent species.

WRP offers landowners a combination of permanent or 30-year easements, in addition to 10-year restoration agreements, in exchange for retiring and restoring drained woodland and marginal land from agriculture. In 2012, landowners may receive up to $8,170 per acre for permanent easements. For 30-year easements, applicants can receive 75 percent of the permanent easement value.

For FRPP and WRP, USDA pays all costs associated with recording the easement in the local land records office. Landowners voluntarily limit future use of the land, yet retain private ownership.

While NRCS accepts easement program applications throughout the year, the agency plans to make 2012 funding decisions from the pool of applications received by Feb. 10 first. Subsequent ranking periods will occur until all funds are exhausted. Unfunded eligible applicants will remain on file until additional funding becomes available.

To participate in WRP, private landowners may submit applications directly to NRCS. For FRPP, state and local governments or non-governmental organizations should submit applications directly to the NRCS state office. Interested landowners are encouraged to contact their local USDA service center for more information. Service center locations and more information on the programs can be found online at www.md.nrcs.usda.gov.

Farm Service Agency Reports

2012 DCP/ACRE SIGN-UP BEGINS JANUARY 23

Preston County Farm Service Agency (FSA) county executive director Eric McCartney informs producers that the enrollment period for the 2012 Average Crop Revenue Election (ACRE) Program and the Direct and Counter-Cyclical Program (DCP) will begin Monday, Jan. 23.

"Farmers in Preston County who are interested in enrolling in these programs should schedule an appointment with the FSA office before the June 1 deadline," McCartney said.

Annual contracts are required to be signed to receive program benefits. All signatures of producers receiving a share in DCP and ACRE payments are required by the June 1, 2012, deadline.

For the farm calendar, the following is a schedule of FSA program deadlines coming up in the next several months:

•May 31, 2012 - 2011 crop year final loan availability date for corn, soybeans, sorghum, sunflowers, and pulse crops; and crop acreage reporting deadline for small grains.

•June 1, 2012 - Deadline for 2012 Direct and Counter-Cyclical Program (DCP) enrollment and for 2012 Average Crop Revenue (ACRE) program election; and deadline to enroll in SURE for 2010 crops.

•July 16, 2012 - 2012 crop year acreage reporting deadline for most crops; deadline to file 2011 production reports for most Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP) crops; and deadline to File 2011 Production Data for 2011 ACRE Program.

•August 1, 2012 - Deadline to request a 2012 Farm Reconstitution.

For more information about DCP and ACRE programs or other FSA programs, producers may visit the Preston County FSA office, located in the Corner Mall of the Kingwood Plaza, telephone 304-329-1923, or visit the state FSA web site at www.fsa.usda.gov/wv.

Conservation Prog. Funds Available Until February 17

An important deadline is coming up for farmers, forest, and agricultural landowners who want to sign up for Fiscal Year 2012 Farm Bill Conservation programs. The USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) in Maryland has set the deadline for the initial round of program funding consideration as Friday, February 17. This deadline includes the Maryland Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and Chesapeake Bay Watershed Initiative (CBWI).

EQIP is a voluntary conservation program that supports production agriculture and environmental quality as compatible goals. Through EQIP, agricultural producers receive financial and technical assistance to implement projects that will improve their natural resources. CBWI is a part of EQIP, and provides technical and financial help to producers to minimize excess nutrients and sediments in order to restore, preserve, and protect the Chesapeake Bay.

The deadline for NRCS's National Initiatives (EQIP Organic, Seasonal High Tunnel, and On-Farm Energy) is February 3. Through these initiatives, NRCS seeks to help producers who are certified organic growers or working to achieve organic certification install conservation practices for organic production, help eligible producers plan and implement high tunnels, and help producers to develop farm energy audits that assess energy consumption on an operation, as well as develop energy conservation recommendations.

Applications for NRCS programs can be submitted throughout the year, but those received after the deadline will be held until the next cut-off date.

In FY 2011, Maryland NRCS obligated over $18 million in EQIP and CBWI funds statewide. However, the number of applications received far exceeded the amount of funding available. Agricultural and forest landowners are encouraged to apply immediately to ensure consideration for this funding cycle.

NRCS's natural resources conservation programs help people reduce soil erosion, enhance water supplies, improve water quality, increase wildlife habitat, and reduce damages caused by floods and other natural disasters. Public benefits include enhanced natural resources that help sustain agricultural productivity and environmental quality while supporting continued economic development, recreation, and scenic beauty.

For additional information, landowners are encouraged to contact their local NRCS service center. Service center locations and more information on the programs can be found at www.md.nrcs.usda.gov.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR DRINKING WATER
Town of Oakland Has Levels of Disinfection Byproducts Above Drinking Water Standards

Our water system recently violated a drinking water standard. Although this is not an emergency, as our customers, you have a right to know what happened, what you should do, and what we are doing to correct this situation.

We routinely monitor for the presence of drinking water contaminants. Disinfection byproducts are formed by a chemical reaction of chlorine with the organic material in the water, such as leaves and algae. Testing results show that our system exceeds the standards, or maximum contaminant levels (MCL), for Total Trihalomethanes and Haloacetic Acids. The standard for Total Trihalomethanes is 80 parts per billion (ppb), and Haloacetic Acids is 60 ppb.

The average level of Disinfection Byproducts over the period October 2010 – September 2011 was:

Total Trihalomethanes	156 ppb
Haloacetic Acids	73 ppb

What should you do? You do not need to use an alternative (e.g., bottled) water supply. However, if you have specific health concerns, consult your doctor.

What does this mean? This is not an immediate risk. If it had been, you would have been notified immediately. However, some people who drink water containing total trihalomethanes and haloacetic acids in excess of the MCL over many years may have an increased risk of getting cancer.

What happened? What is being done? The State of Maryland, Department of the Environment has made the byproducts limitations more stringent. Oakland worked to lower the levels of total trihalomethanes and haloacetic acids over the past couple years in anticipation of the new requirements. Unfortunately, we have not able to bring the levels down to meet the new guidelines. As a result, we completed a study on our water system to determine what changes or improvements are necessary to bring our system into compliance. We previously awarded a contract for the design work necessary, to make improvements to our water plants which should bring our levels into compliance, based upon the completed study. The design work is complete, and we are working to finalize some review comments to obtain a construction permit from MDE. We expect to bid and award a construction contract in the next month, pending approval by Maryland Department of the Environment.

For more information, please contact Randy Sharpless, Oakland Water Superintendent, by phone at 301-334-3836, or his mailing address is: Oakland Water Department, 15 South Third Street, Oakland, Maryland 21550.

NOTE: Please feel free to share this information with all other people who drink this water, especially those who may not have received this notice directly (for example, people in apartments, nursing homes, schools, and businesses). You can do this by posting this notice in a public place or distributing copies by hand or mail.

This notice is being provided to you by the Town of Oakland, State Water System ID # 011-0008. 1/12

Governor Earmarks $150K For Local Trail Construction

Gov. Martin O'Malley on Friday announced nearly $23 million in the proposed FY2013 capital budget for state park and other public land projects. Included in the budget is $150,000 for trail construction for state parks located in Garrett County, and another $150,000 for western Maryland recreational access and trail restoration.

"Today, we're proposing to invest $22.7 million from our capital budget to make much-needed improvements to our state parks – an investment that will support nearly 300 jobs in our state, help us make our parks more sustainable, and support our thriving tourism industry," O'Malley said when he made the announcement at Sandy Point State Park. "Our state parks are tremendous economic engines in our state, with a $650 million annual impact on our local economies, a great resource for Maryland families, and a big part of why our tourism industry remains so strong even in tough times."

The funding includes more than $14 million in enhancements from the governor's capital budget, in addition to $8.7 million derived from the Department of Natural Resources annual transfer tax allocation for a diverse set of projects to improve infrastructure, "green" the state's parks, and protect the Chesapeake Bay.

"I applaud Governor O'Malley for making this critical investment in our public lands during these difficult financial times," said DNR Secretary John

CHASING SNOWFLAKES in the annual Snowflake Chase in beautiful Deep Creek Lake State Park on Saturday were over 130 hearty souls who braved the wintry conditions to participate in either the 5-mile run or the 2-mile fun run/walk. Proceeds from the annual event this year will go to the Garrett College Student Veterans Organization (SVO). The event was coordinated by the Queen City Striders Running Club, and a number of volunteers from the SVO assisted in various ways. Dan DeWitt of Frostburg was by far the fastest runner in the 5-mile race, as he blazed a path to the finish line in 29:42, nearly 1½ minutes faster than second-place finisher Chris Behre of Hurricane, W.Va. Public Hearing On Friendsville School Closing Held; Kitzmiller's Is Tonight

Community members filled the Friendsville Elementary School gymnasium last evening to witness and participate in the Garrett County Board of Education's public hearing on the proposed closing of that school.

The event, which began at 7 p.m. and ran until nearly 11 p.m., gave participants the opportunity to express their concerns and grievances with the potential school closing.

If Friendsville were indeed closed, Sue Waggoner, superintendent of schools, stated that its students would be moved to schools in Accident and Grantsville in August. The board plans to make a decision in March.

"Friendsville Elementary has seen a decline in enrollment," Waggoner said. "In the past three years, Garrett County has had the largest percentage of lost enrollment in the state of Maryland. We are not like the federal government – we have to have a balanced budget. We have to work as a team to get things accomplished."

Survey To Assess Public Opinion On Elk Reintroduction

The Maryland Legislative Sportsmen's Foundation (MLSF), the Maryland Department of Natural Resources (DNR), and the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation (RMEF) last week announced plans to conduct an extensive public opinion survey to determine the viability of elk reintroduction to western Maryland. Elk once roamed Maryland, but have been absent since the 1700s.

Social, cultural, and economic questions will dominate the survey, which is scheduled to begin in February and conclude with a final report and analysis in April. The survey will reach a sample of residents across Maryland, with a focus on residents of western Maryland. Consensus from DNR's experts and impacted stakeholders will be necessary for the final decision.

"We are pleased to announce this important step toward evaluating elk reintroduction in western Maryland," said MLSF chairman David Sutherland.

The MLSF signed a contract with Responsive Management, a professional survey firm that specializes in public opinion and attitude surveys on wildlife management issues. The RMEF will underwrite the survey through an MLSF grant. DNR will assist with the technical review of the survey instrument and the final report.

"We recognize the need to ensure a scientific review of public opinion on this extraordinary and important question," said David Allen, president and CEO of the RMEF. "Restoring elk requires a supportive community. We are pleased to be a key partner to that end."

WEIMER NAMED RIDER OF THE YEAR – Local teenager Raeslee Weimer was named PAMX Rider of the Year at a banquet for the Pennsylvania Motocross Association held last month in Johnstown, Pa. She is the first female to ever be awarded this honor. The PAMX Association is made up of motocross riders from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, West Virginia, and Virginia. Weimer's awards also included first place in the women's class for the Thor Spring Championship, and the Grand National Series for 2011. Weimer was also nominated as one of three riders for Youth Rider of the Year. The teen, who is a junior at Southern High School, began her 2011 racing season on a Suzuki RM85 in the Supermini (12-16 age group) and moved mid-season to a much larger motorcycle, an RM250. This was no easy task, family members noted, yet she was able to excel on both bikes as she finished in 4th place overall for the Thor Spring series in the Supermini class in a field of young male riders, as well as 4th place overall in the state championship series in the male-dominated Open C class division. The teen said her 2012 goals include racing in more national level races as well as placing at the top in the Loretta Lynn Amateur National in Hurricane Mills, Tenn., in August. At Southern, the student is a member of student council, the National Honor Society, and the lady Rams varsity basketball team. She is the daughter of Mike and Kimberly Weimer, Oakland.

Adventure Sports Ctr. International Defaulting On $3 Million Of Debt

Adventure Sports Center Inc. is defaulting on $3 million of capital debt. The not-for-profit corporation owns and operates the Adventure Sports Center International (ASCI) on Marsh Mountain in McHenry.

Billed as the world's only mountaintop man-made whitewater course, ASCI offers rafting, riverboarding, and kayaking. The center is scheduled to host the 2014 Canoe Slalom World Championships.

Board of Garrett County Commissioners chairman Jim Raley made the announcement during the commissioners' public meeting on Tuesday afternoon. The commissioners, he said, met in executive session earlier that day to discuss the legal implications of the issue.

"During the construction of ASCI, the organization incurred $3 million in loans from private lending institutions in order to address unanticipated costs that came up during that construction," Raley said. "ASCI is a not-for-profit 501(c)(3) organization. It's not owned by the county, even though the county and the state did provide funding for that particular project."

The banks involved in the loan default are Susquehanna and First United banks, Raley noted.

"We do plan [to have] an update for you (the public) at our Feb. 7 meeting when we have additional information, but at this point that's where that issue stands," the commissioner said.

Raley indicated he made the announcement to make the public aware of the issue, that the commissioners have discussed it, and that the banks are concerned.

"We're trying to be very, very transparent in our discussions," the commissioner said about announcing an issue that was discussed in executive session.

Agreement Signed For Continental Divide Trail Proj.

Garrett Trails is one step closer to completing its Eastern Continental Divide Loop Trail. The Garrett County commissioners signed a property-use agreement this week with the University of Maryland Extension, which will allow a nonmotorized trail to be constructed on Western Maryland 4-H Education Center property near Bittinger.

An agreement is also pending with the Department of Natural Resources that will give the local group permission to construct a trail through the Savage River State Forest for the Meadow Mountain phase of the loop trail.

Garrett Trails members reviewed the agreements for the commissioners and gave an update on some of their many projects on Tuesday afternoon.

"We've made a lot of progress," said Mike Dreisbach, Garrett Trails president. "And I have to tell you, with out the help of the commissioners, this progress would have never been able to make it that far. You guys have been behind us 110 percent."

Since last January, he said, the group has made some "gigantic steps." One of those "steps" is Gov. Martin O'Malley's announcement last Friday that $150,000 is earmarked in the proposed fiscal year 2013 capital budget for state park trail construction in Garrett County. Another $150,000 has been allocated for "western Maryland recreational access and trail restoration."

Garrett Trails is a nonprofit, volunteer organization dedicated to the development of a network of trails that provide access to Garrett County's historic, municipal, and environmental "treasures" that link to trails outside the county.

One of the group's goals is to develop the Eastern Continental Divide Loop Trail, a 150 mile, multi-surface, multi-user pathway that will connect to state parks and forests; populations centers such as Bittinger, Grantsville, Mtn. Lake Park, Friendsville, and Deep Creek Lake; and the Great Allegheny Passage.

Rodney Glotfelty, Trail Maintenance Committee chair, reported on the project's mid-county connector loop at Deep Creek Lake. Garrett Trails plans to construct a pedestrian hard-packed gravel or paved pathway from the Glendale Bridge to Rt. 219, along the same route as a proposed water line.

He said Garrett Trails has been working with the Garrett County Department of Public Utilities and the GC Roads Department to "take advantage" of the waterline extension. After DPU installs the underground line, the pathway could be constructed on top of the finished project.

DOGS SAVED AFTER FALLING INTO LAKE – Two dogs fell through the thin ice on Deep Creek Lake on Sunday, and a number of professional rescue personnel came to their rescue. A call came into 911 at about 6 p.m. reporting a dog having possibly fallen through the ice, and that the animal had been barking for some hours. The dog fell in around the Patterson Marina in the North Glade Cove, according to the report. Rescue personnel responded and found not one but two trapped canines barely keeping their heads above the frigid water. Ice water rescue technicians from both the Deep Creek and Deer Park volunteer fire companies were deployed onto the ice and into the water to save the dogs. The animals were retrieved and immediately taken to the Pineview Veterinary Hospital for treatment. One of the animals is pictured above being cared for. Also responding to the scene were the Southern and Northern Garrett rescue squads. Rescue personnel urge pet-owners to be alert when their animals are near the ice, as it can obviously lead to perilous situations. Photo courtesy of Matthew Krause, area firefighter/paramedic.

BOE Nixes Vote On Grade Level Change; Looking At Alternatives

Upon leaving the executive session of a specially called meeting on Tuesday, the Garrett County Board of Education informed those in attendance that it would remove the vote on grade level reconfiguration from its current agenda.

The decision came as a relief to many of the parents and concerned citizens who turned up to voice their opinions on the proposal. Many used the public comment portion of the meeting to express their thanks to the board for postponing a decision on reconfiguration and also to request more time to come up with solutions on solving Garrett County's school budget losses. Solutions, they hoped, would not involve reconfiguration, school closings, and long bus rides for young children.

The event was held in the cafetorium of Southern Middle School and was called for after the BOE decided against a vote on the reconfiguration proposal at its previous meeting the week before (Jan. 10).

Having twice removed the vote on the proposal to move fifth graders from elementary to middle schools, the board will now look into the viability of leaving the grade levels as they are, or perhaps adopting alternative solutions.

In a presentation before the public comment portion of the meeting, Sue Waggoner, interim superintendent of schools, stated that the board plans to use the coming months to look into kindergarten enrollment rates, as well as staffing needs "at all levels."

She has expressed the importance of parents taking advantage of kindergarten enrollment, as the board is currently working with birth rate statistics. "We need to know where these children are going to attend elementary school," she said. Though effectively halted, the possibility of grade reconfiguration remains on the table.

Waggoner's presentation also contained information on the school system's efforts

Comptroller Announces Changes In Tax Laws, New Customer Service Initiatives

With the tax filing deadline less than three months away, Maryland comptroller Peter Franchot this week announced important changes and new customer service initiatives for this year's filing season. He said that many of the changes are part of his initiative to "go green," saving the state's natural resources as well as tax dollars.

"I'm proud of my agency for the money and resource saving initiatives implemented this tax season," said Franchot. "Our office is becoming more efficient and saving the taxpayers' hard-earned money in the process."

Some of the benefits and changes for this tax season are as follows:

•Filing deadline – Because of the celebration of Emancipation Day in the District of Columbia on April 16, personal income tax returns are due by April 17.

•Electronic filing mandate for tax preparers – Paid tax professionals who prepared 100 or more qualified state income tax returns for tax year 2010 (filed in 2011) are required to file all original individual income tax returns electronically for tax year 2011 (filed in 2012). Each electronically filed return saves the state nearly $2 in processing costs.

•Tax booklets – Tax booklets will not be mailed in 2013. Next year, taxpayers may file electronically, print the tax booklet and forms from the agency's web site or contact the nearest branch office for assistance. This change will save the state nearly $250,000.

•Libraries and post offices – The comptroller's office will no longer supply area post offices and libraries with tax booklets. Each library will receive a CD-ROM of all forms if requested.

•Splitting a direct deposit – Taxpayers can now have a tax refund deposited into multiple bank accounts by using Form 588.

•Earned Income Credit notification – In an effort to ensure all eligible Marylanders claim the credit, starting in 2012 the comptroller must publish the maximum income eligibility for the State Earned Income Credit (EIC) on or before January 1 of each year. The comptroller will also notify the employers of such information, and the employers must notify each employee who may be eligible.

•New Dependent Form 502B – Form 502B will be a required form to be attached to Form 502 to determine what exemption one is entitled to claim. Taxpayers claiming more than two exemptions must use Form 502.

•Increased pension exclusion – Maryland's maximum pension exclusion, which is available to qualifying taxpayers 65 or older, increased from $26,100 to $26,300 for tax year 2011.

• Nonresident Form 505SU – This year, other certain subtractions for which taxpayers may qualify will be reported on Form 505SU. If multiple subtractions apply, taxpayers should be sure to indicate all of them on Form 505SU and attach it to the Form 505.

•Form 502SU – This year, other certain subtractions for which taxpayers may qualify will be reported on Form 502SU. If multiple subtractions apply, taxpayers should be sure to indicate all of them on Form 502SU and attach it to the Form 502.

•Electronic 1099-G – This year, at the bottom of the return in the signature area, the agency has provided a checkbox for taxpayers to indicate that a statement of refund can be sent electronically. Beginning in early 2012, electronic Form 1099-G may be downloaded and printed from the comptroller's office web site. Taxpayers can also request to receive a paper 1099-G at this web site.

•Local tax rate increase – For tax year 2012, Anne Arundel County has decreased its local tax rate to 2.49% and Queen Anne's County has increased its local tax rate to 3.20%. One should note the change on the Form 502D.

"While tax-filing season can be a frustrating time for many people, my office has tried and will continue to work toward making this process as painless as possible," said Comptroller Franchot. "I urge all taxpayers to file their tax returns electronically because it not only guarantees a 72-business hour refund, but it also saves the state nearly $2 each in processing costs. Additionally, we have people on staff to assist you in completing your tax return for free at each of our 11 branch offices located throughout the state."

BOE Announces Requirements For Kindergarten Registration

The Garrett County Board of Education has announced that the annual comprehensive kindergarten registration program will be held in all elementary schools during the month of February. This program is for children entering kindergarten or first grade for the first time in August. Children who will be 5 years old by Sept. 1 are required to register for kindergarten. Younger children are ineligible.

Through the comprehensive registration program, each child registering for school will receive a general (confidential) health interview and dental screening. The Garrett County Health Department will provide immunizations for a fee.

Parents must register any child who will be 5 years old by Sept. 1. The law allows exemptions to the school attendance requirements as follows:

•Permits compliance through the home school instruction regulation;

•Grants a one-year immaturity waiver if the parent or guardian makes a written request to the local school system;

•Allows a 5-year-old to be enrolled in one of three alternative program setting – a full-time licensed child care center, a full-time registered family day care home, or part-time in a Head Start 5-year-old program.

Parents who choose to use one of the exemptions must reguest the appropriate exemption form from the Department of Pupil Services at 301-334-8939.

State regulations require parents to provide evidence of birth (child's birth certificate), an official immunization record, and documented proof of current residency. Documents accepted by the state of Maryland as proof of residency include:

•deed/mortgage agreement

•current property tax bill

•current rental lease or agreement

•current utility bill with applicant's name and address

In addition, parents must complete an Affidavit of Disclosure to verify the residency of the student. Social Security cards are also requested at the time of registration.

Parents of children who meet the above qualifications are asked to fill out a registration blank that can be picked up at a local elementary school or the GC Board of Education building in downtown Oakland. It should be mailed to the designated address. All parents registering children for school will receive a registration appointment.

Registration for kindergarten is to occur at the school for the assigned district in which the child resides. If parents have questions regarding the district in which they reside, they should contact the Pupil Services Department at the above-mentioned phone number.

Students will not be registered or enrolled without the required documents, including proof of residency.

Per Policy and Procedure 431.21, all out-of-area requests should be submitted no later than June 15, and the requests will be acted upon by July 1. Both initial and renewal requests are to be submitted annually.

"WILL WE FIND LOVING HOMES?" – Millions of adorable pets like these are euthanized each year simply because there are not enough homes for all of them. To help put an end to pet overpopulation, the HART Spay/Neuter Clinic will be repeating its "Fifteen for Felines" this year on Wednesday, Feb. 29. For the last three years, HART for Animals has joined the Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) in holding a spay/neuter day for pets. This year will be the 18th Spay Day, which was originated in 1994 by actress and animal activist Doris Day and managed by the HSUS. Fifteen for Felines offers cat neuters for non-feral cats (male cats only) for $15, plus $5 for the rabies vaccine for unvaccinated cats. Proof of vaccination is required, but there are no eligibility requirements. Appointments will be taken on a first-call, first-served basis until the day is full. To make an appointment, persons may call 301-387-7729 between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday to Friday and ask for a Fifteen for Felines time. Supporters Pushing For Legalization Of Medical Marijuana In Maryland

by Mike Bock
Capital News Service

ANNAPOLIS – Less than a year after providing a legal defense for the possession of medical marijuana, proponents are now pushing for Maryland to legalize the drug for licensed patients.

Delegate Cheryl Glenn, D-Baltimore, has introduced HB 15, or the Medical Marijuana Act, which would authorize the use of the drug in Maryland by as early as September. Sixteen states and Washington currently allow some form of medical marijuana, but it is still prohibited at the federal level.

HB 15 builds on last year's SB 308, which provides an affirmative legal defense for anyone who can prove that the drug has been used for medical purposes. However, Maryland law does not provide any legal means for obtaining medical marijuana.

SB 308 was originally intended to provide legal access to medical marijuana, but a number of amendments were made after a House Judiciary Committee meeting last March.

Dr. Joshua Sharfstein, secretary of the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene, said at the meeting that more research was needed on the effectiveness of the drug as a medical treatment.

SB 308 was revised to create the Medical Marijuana Model Program Work Group, a committee that submitted two proposals for medical marijuana legislation in its final report in December. Sharfstein served as the chair of the work group.

The first option would give academic medical research institutions such as Johns Hopkins University or the University of Maryland School of Medical distribution rights to medical marijuana. The second would allow specially licensed doctors to prescribe marijuana to patients, provided they meet a specific set of symptoms. Both proposals would leave cultivation in the hands of state-licensed growers.

HB 15 falls more closely in line with the second proposal, as it does not rely on academic institutions for distribution.

The law would stress strict regulations that limit medical marijuana to patients with debilitating illnesses where no other effective treatment is available.

States such as California have passed laws that decriminalize possession of small amounts of marijuana in addition to allowing medical marijuana to be used.

With HB 15, only patients permitted to use medical marijuana and their doctors will be exempt from punishment. Non-licensed individuals can still be prosecuted for possession.

Last year's bill was sponsored by several delegates and senators, including Sen. David R. Brinkley, R-Carroll, who intends to introduce a similar Senate bill in the following weeks.

The animals and people of Oakland suffered a great loss last week with the sudden passing of Ellen Marie Green.

Ellen was a member of the graduating class of 1971 of Southern High School. She worked for Ernie Gregg after high school before going to work at Garrett County Memorial Hospital. Ellen became a certified medical transcriptionist and then a certified medical coder. She worked for Dr. Joseph Alvarez for many years before joining her friend, Dr. Dona Alvarez, in her practice. Ellen helped Dr. Dona get the office started by running the back office, front office, even painting and decorating.

Ellen was a devoted animal lover. She spent many years as the treasurer for the Garrett County Humane Society. She personally rescued many injured and abused animals over the years. Ellen had a special love of rotweillers. These are dogs that are often misunderstood and therefore neglected. Ellen could always find the good in each dog and provided a safe and loving home for them.

Ellen cared for her sister Theresa from the time of their mother's death until now. Theresa worked at Appalachian Crossroads and made Ellen proud every day.

Ellen had a long, loving relationship with her boyfriend, Tom Richards from Morgantown, WV.

Lucy and Linus, two very friendly bulldogs who kept her company at work every day, also adored Ellen.

Ellen will be missed greatly by her many close friends. She was someone whom everyone could count on. The community of Oakland will not be the same without Ellen. Our lives have been forever changed through this loss.

Tip of the Iceberg?...

Judging from the FY 2013 budgetary desires of Governor O'Malley, should they ultimately be approved by the legislature, we in Garrett County can anticipate even more dire financial straits than we are currently experiencing. The same can be said for most other counties.

The governor has proposed a hike in the sales tax, a hike in gasoline tax, a hike in the flush tax (which we in GC all pay, even though most of our water does not even end up in the Chesapeake Bay), and potentially the most damaging, requiring the counties to pick up half of the teacher pension costs from the state, a move that would shift an additional burden of $239 million onto the counties, some of which are already having great problems making ends meet.

In all probability, the governor will not get everything he wants, even with a legislature that is heavily controlled by his own party. However, he is likely playing the game of "shoot for the moon," with the more realistic hopes of getting some of what he wants.

All of this comes at a time when the general economy of the nation is still struggling, and when counties such as ours are finding it more and more difficult to balance a budget. Garrett County has already lost huge sums of money in Highway User Funds (raided by the state to try to address its own deficit budget) and also money for education, as student numbers continue to drop in the county. Being deemed the fifth wealthiest county in the state (LOL) by some ridiculous formula is yet another major blockage in terms of funding from the state.

While the governor states that his budget proposal also includes spending cuts, they are a bit more difficult to pinpoint. It seems that one thing that is missing and which could have a significantly positive effect on the state's finances would be a freeze on hiring new state employees. Through attrition and cross-training (things that just about every one of us in private business has had to do) are in order.

Garrett County is already embroiled in the excruciating prospect of closing some of our community schools. From the looks of things right now, this could end up being just the tip of the financial iceberg.

To the Editor:

It was with considerable pleasure and satisfaction that I finished reading Ms. Barbara Beeler's letter in your Jan. 5 edition concerning the funding needs and future of the lake. I thought, finally, we have an energetic, competent, and most importantly, knowledgeable advocate for the well-being and future of the lake.

At the same time, I wondered where the Property Owners Association has been all these years. I know it has held countless meetings, but to the best of my knowledge (principally from reading The Republican) and recollection, I can think of nothing positive the POA has accomplished for the lake, apart from the one-time vote against allowing oversized tourist boats on the lake. Even there, however, the leadership practically gaged on the vote, presumably out of concern that its vote might somehow be interpreted as anti-business.

My essential point here is that perhaps the POA should consider saving its membership some money by dissolving itself, and its members should definitely consider directing their funds instead to Friends of Deep Creek Lake.

Sincerely,
William G. Hrindac

To the Editor:

My deep affections go to the children of Christine Minshall Haynes, who passed away this week on Gasparilla Island, Florida, one of many refuges which Chris enjoyed and where her precious family was present during her transition to her next venture.

Chris would have been my choice to steer a Conestoga wagon in Oklahoma prior to Oklahoma statehood. She would have found the perfect acreage and friends when the shot was fired to race to the new territory.

Chris was curious about the earth, and was among those with a quest to make life better and more beautiful. Her philanthropy speaks for itself. The cozy, green and white 1870s cottage she owned for many years was a tranquil, friendly, and endearing place in Mountain Lake Park to share with Chris and for family and friends to sample her recipes and talk about her travels and new wishes.

Chris seemed to enjoy the plain, uncomplicated things in life, and though extraordinary in intellect she was always open to new ideas. Her love for so many aspects of life were numerous. When a friend and I arrived to see her new beach house in Fort Pierce (Fla.), it was amazing to view the talent she had, having just returned from studying art in the Inuit areas of Alaska.

Chris was interested in life and rode the highways with a smile on her face, a face so loved by so many. I shall miss her presence at the MLP Tennis Club. Blessings to Chris and all her family.

To the Editor:

Again the perennial idea of bigger government has bloomed as our newest board of commissioners considers county-wide zoning. I understand your avoidance of the "Z-word," since we resident landowners have, also perennially, made clear that we don't want it. If the terminology is changed, perhaps we can be duped.

This is how government has become the colossal parasite that is consuming from within not just host counties' but also the world's economies. An idea such as zoning can be rejected 50 times, then somehow camouflaged behind new language and touted to some narrow victory. In any sport, the score would be 50-1. To supporters of big government, it's a clear mandate, never to be revisited for a 52nd opinion.

This time, you exploit the "crises" of windmill and gas-extraction operations to demand more regulation. By the time zoning is in place, windmills will be built or not and holes will be drilled or not, but the zoning will remain to flourish and strangle rights and stifle growth. I don't want windmills on my land, nor do I wish to "frack" the strata beneath it. I do, however, want to sleep at night knowing that an out-of-control government hasn't stolen yet more of my freedom. Despite your incomprehensible declaration that (z. . .) regulations "protect, not inhibit, the rights of all property owners," zoning is a taking, a transference of my right to determine the best use of my property to another. Zoning artificially (because it diminishes the field of those who would want it) inflates my property value at the expense of my property rights. This is not a legitimate function of the government of a free people, and those who would make it so squander for short-term gain the wisdom and sacrifice of those who conceived this once-great country.

How am I affected by that inflated property value unless I decide to sell and move? You guessed it: higher taxes that spawn more government.

Perhaps the new "fracking" technology could best be put to use upon our government: Drill it to the absolute core, shake it up, extract the tiny percentage of worthy product, and leave the rest behind. That's what elections should be for, and what I thought our last county election was all about. Perhaps more drilling is in order.

To the Editor:

I was raised in Friendsville. I graduated from Southern. Ten years ago I returned here with my wife and two young daughters to give them what I considered a better education and life.

Study after study demonstrates the central role schools play in community survival. Schools serve as a gathering place and key recreational center. Most importantly, schools foster "a stable pattern in the web of social life that binds individuals together. By default, the school stands at center stage, providing the community with a sense of identity and a common meeting place. Rural schools, in particular, serve as symbols of community autonomy, vitality, and identity."

Closing the school would cost the Friendsville community its branch of the Ruth Enlow Library. It creates the potential of losing the branch of First United and other businesses due to less walk-in traffic. We already know that we are quickly losing our post office. What's left?

The Maryland Department of Planning states:

"The ideal Maryland public school of the future should be a community-centered facility located within a neighborhood that will serve as a community anchor. It should be adjacent to recreational areas and parks and located within walking distance of other community facilities such as libraries and community centers. Community-centered schools serve as catalysts to keep older neighborhoods vibrant."

Ironically, a decision to close Friendsville Elementary School would mean closing a school that I believe this description from the Maryland Department of Planning accurately describes:

"A neighborhood anchor that, where appropriate, supports community use of school facilities, co-location of other uses, and shared use of public school facilities with other public uses so that the building is a community asset after school hours and on weekends.

"The school serves as a meeting place for many community functions; within walking distance of other public amenities, including parks, athletic fields, libraries, museums, and community centers."

The Friendsville school is within walking distance to other points within the community, including the Community Building, the post office, the bank, and local churches. How ironic it is that this would be closing a school that in so many ways resembles the Department of Planning's "ideal Maryland public school of the future."

With the community impact considered, I believe that closing the school will be nothing but detrimental to the community and its future. Friendsville will become a "ghost town" just like Swanton!

To the Editor:

In regard to the 5-year plan proposed by the Garrett County Board of Education, please note that if you look at the organizational chart in the 2012 county budget, the people on top are the voters – not elected individuals. It's not about statistics or how much money has already been given to education, it is about what the voters want.

The voters should have a say in how much money they want to spend on education. If they want more than the "State Suggested," then that is what we should have. We are lucky that we are such a small county that we can do what we want with our money and elected officials are able to hear from the voters personally. If we, the voters, don't want the county to spend money to "realign Glendale Road" or on some other other wasteful project and instead go to education, that is our right as voters.

I cannot believe that with the uproar of all the citizens of Garrett County about the board of education proposal no one will listen to the voters and cut the Garrett County budget elsewhere. Why not give them what they want? Not what the statistics and numbers say. All of this uproar would go away and no one would notice the other cuts to the Garrett County 2012 budget.

Please think of the people of Garrett County, and not the statistics. Give the voters what they want! This is about families and children.

Thank you,
Sherry Leader

To the Editor:

As I hear more information disclosed about the educational budget adjustments for Garrett County schools and the looming deadlines for school closures, I wonder if anyone has bothered to do extensive research on what the short-term and long-term impact those closures will have on our children and our communities.

The proposal set forth by the superintendent states that by closing certain schools and extending bus routes, the savings of these actions will be in the millions. Let's not forget that our children will be shuffled from one bus to another, with the goal of arriving at their final destination – another school farther away – where they will be packed into a classroom with a much higher head count. They will have to ride the bus with much older kids, where the assurance of supervision and protection is spotty at best. These are real concerns that parents are asking questions about and ones they want specific answers for.

I've only just begun to state some of the obvious problems that are evident if the county succeeds with the plan to close these schools. All of these problems come down to one thing – money.

How many problems have been caused or eliminated by money throughout history? I was told by a wise man that there really are no problems – only solutions. So, what is the solution to this problem; this budget reduction for our educational system? Where can we get the money to keep our schools open, even if it's just for another year so we can sort out all the nitty-gritty details for the long haul?

With those questions at the forefront of my mind, I decided to Google resources for education – both government or private funding. One of the programs that any state can apply for to receive a share of grant money is "Race to the Top," a program designed to promote innovation and promising ideas. How many of these programs are out there, with available funds, waiting for those who will take the necessary steps to get the ball rolling?

My hope and prayer is that more people will step up to the plate and put the effort into finding solutions to remedy this problem. They are out there. We just need to be willing to take the initiative, get involved, and be a part of the solution.

To the Editor:

I am sorry if I am confused. But it appears the Garrett County commissioners, along with Delegate Wendell Beitzel, are very busy convincing our governor Martin O'Malley and the state of Maryland to drill for natural gas in the Marcellus shale in Garrett and Allegany counties. Yet they are closing schools. Is there a reason time can be made to try to pressure people into drilling for natural gas, yet cannot be made to find a way to keep schools open and teachers employed? Education taking a back seat to gas drilling? I guess I thought education was more important.

Isn't Delegate Beitzel the same person who wrote the weird release-bears-in-Baltimore legislation? Perhaps he should spend less time trying to be funny and more time keeping local schools open. As our delegate, he should be communicating the needs of "We, the people" of Garrett County to officials down state, not pushing like a freight train for drilling that many county residents are against.

Closing schools will stifle the educational prospects of county children while putting a variety of educators out of work. Remember, educators are a resource. If they lose positions here they have no choice but to seek jobs elsewhere. Then we lose them altogether.

To the Editor:

Some years ago, schools were within walking distance of most homes. Once vehicle transportation became more available, one-room schools were consolidated, and schools were built in nearly all Garrett County communities.

In recent years, there is a trend toward closing of local schools. Red House and Swanton schools and others in Garrett County were closed. This past school year, Bloomington school was closed, forcing busing of Bloomington children many miles. We are facing permanent destruction of our small towns by busing children to schools beyond their local communities.

Some in Garrett County believe that our board of education makes the final decision regarding school closings. This is not true, and while you will hear otherwise, it is a fact that the final decision is made by the Board of Garrett County Commissioners. Since it is the commissioners who formulate and approve the final Garrett County budget, they have ultimate authority to decide this issue. The board of education certainly has input regarding the school budget, but the commissioners have final authority.

Here are some unfortunate results if this trend continues:

1. Children will no longer be able to participate in "after-school activities." This community concept has formed our county and our country – people caring for people; meeting, playing, learning, working, and growing together.

2. Personal closeness in the individual communities will be lost.

3. Children will be bused many miles, during the early morning hours, exposed to more danger than while attending school in their own community.

4. There will be a need for more buses and drivers; there will be more traffic, including travel by parents to schools for evening activities.

5. More cancellations of activities due to inclement weather.

6. Parents traveling long distances to pick up a sick child from school ... imagine traveling 30 miles to collect your sick child!

7. Rearrangement of our school system will force the construction of new buildings, resulting in the destruction of our present buildings.

One cost-effective strategy for reducing spending in the school budget would be to reduce the ratio of supervisors to teachers. We have capable and dedicated teachers. The system is top-heavy in this area.

Also, we can reduce our county budget in other areas. We are currently spending millions of dollars for adventure sports and swimming pools, at the expense of our education budget.

Sincerely,
Thomas E. Doyle

To the Editor:

This letter is concerning Marcellus drilling, and is a follow-up on last week's letter that Brenda submitted.

I am a firm believer in standing up and speaking out on the issues I believe in.

Now I want people to think back in time to the Wright Brothers when they invented the airplane. Can you imagine what air travel would be if they lived today? There wouldn't be any! All the opposition (like we are having right now with drilling), people would say, "Just think of all the air pollution and respiratory problems we will have!" Well, thankfully our protestors didn't live at that time!

We have to think of all the good that comes from a situation and work through any problems.

Why do we need to keep giving our money to enemy nations? We have resources in our own soil that would create jobs and save money in our county!

Just a note: Please keep your letters coming on this issue (pro and con)!

Sincerely,
Ella May Martin

Those whom Gov. O'Malley selected to serve on his shale gas advisory commission have an unprecedented chance in 2012 to affect western Maryland's future.

We will consider reams of technical and engineering protocols and practices from across the country to overhaul Maryland regulations developed long before the first well was ever "fracked" in eastern America. The aim: To create a "Gold Standard" regulatory framework.

It is an ambitious schedule, and the work must be done in time for a lengthy and equally necessary public comment period on draft regulations that surely must start in early to mid-2013. (A final

O'Malley's Budget Targets Top Earners, Wants Tax Hikes, Shift In Pension Costs

by Dave Nyczepir
Capital News Service

ANNAPOLIS – Gov. Martin O'Malley is proposing capping income tax deductions and rolling back income tax exemptions for Maryland's highest earners as part of his plan to close the $1 billion hole in the state's $14 billion operating budget.

O'Malley's plan, unveiled Wednesday morning, would begin capping deductions for Marylanders making more than $100,000 and reduce exemptions for singles making more than $100,000 and couples making more than $150,000.

The exemptions would disappear for singles at $125,000 and couples at $175,000.

The governor said that only two of every 10 Maryland residents would receive a smaller amount in their refund check as a result.

"In order to get us through this recession in advance of other states, and in order to protect the priorities of the people of our state and the futures of our children, there are difficult things we need to ask of one another in these difficult times, and this is one of them," O'Malley said.

Though O'Malley's budget proposal is not reliant upon raising the state's gas tax, he said this is still under consideration, as is an increase in the flush tax on sewer bills.

His critics were quick to point out these taxes would add up.

"It's death by incrementalism," Sen. David Brinkley, R-Frederick, said.

Also controversial is the governor's plan to shift half the burden of teacher pension costs from the state onto county governments. Though the state will take on 50 percent of retired teacher Social Security costs in turn, the proposal projects $239 million in additional costs for local governments.

"I have become convinced that some better sharing of that responsibility is in order, primarily because the counties are much closer to the negotiating table than the state is," O'Malley said.

O'Malley attributed his change of heart largely to Senate President Thomas V. Mike Miller Jr.'s argument that contract negotiations are the major drivers of teacher retirement costs.

"I'll only be satisfied when it's enacted into law," Miller said, when asked if he was pleased with the governor's newfound stance.

The governor stressed that job creation remained his #1 priority while drawing up his budget proposal, going so far as to say this budget was the best at creating and supporting jobs since the recession began.

His plan would allocate $373 million towards school construction, the second-strongest investment he's made and one he claims will spur job creation. However, an increase in the gas or flush tax could conflict with this aim, according to critics.

"He doesn't know how to create a private sector job," Brinkley said of the governor.

The senator would rather see O'Malley stay out of the private sector's way and allow government projects like InvestMaryland to fund innovative startup companies – generating jobs through business growth.

While O'Malley stressed a balanced approach to the budget, opponents assert he hasn't addressed the root problem – spending.

His proposal includes $610 million in reductions and cuts to the General Fund, but the budget is still set to grow by 1.9 percent in FY 2013.

"There's different ways to look at it," O'Malley said, when pressed on the budget increase. "You won't find another administration in the history of our state that has restrained spending as steadily, that has made as many cuts as we have made, and you can cross the numbers all you like."

Warren Deschenaux, the General Assembly's chief budget analyst, is pleased with the governor's proposed changes to the spending line.

Chief among these are the reductions in Medicaid, which will save the state money if implemented this year and continually thereafter, Deschenaux said.

He predicts the gap between revenues and spending will be down to about $400 million by year's end, bringing Maryland closer than it's been in years to being structurally balanced.

"That's tantalizingly close to concluding our dance with the structural deficit," Deschenaux said. "It might even make us think that if we just did a little more we could be done."

Capital News Service's Kelsey Miller contributed to this report.

Man Sentenced To Prison For Theft Charge

Former Oakland resident Timothy Hart Winkler, 28, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Jim Sherbin to serve one year and one day in the Division of Corrections for a theft charge. Winkler pleaded guilty to the charge last week, and sentencing was postponed to Wednesday.

He was arrested and charged in October after investigators with the Garrett County Sheriff's Office recovered a shotgun and jacket that were stolen from an Oakland residence in March, and the person from whom they were recovered identified Winkler as the one who had sold the items to him.

Winkler had been staying at the victim's residence and was a suspect in the crime, but there was insufficient evidence to pursue the charge until a witness came forward and provided to police the location and identity of the person to whom Winkler had sold the stolen property, the state's attorney noted.

Oakland Resident Sentenced To One Year In Local Jail

A 31-year-old Oakland man pleaded guilty in Garrett County Circuit Court last week to possession of marijuana. Related charges against Jamie Lyn Alexander were dismissed upon his plea. Judge Jim Sherbin then sentenced him to one year in the Garrett County Jail.

Alexander was a passenger in a vehicle stopped by Maryland State Police for traffic violations. The trooper smelled the odor of marijuana and observed the driver to be in possession of marijuana. When he searched the car, a quantity of marijuana was found in a bag on the passenger side which Alexander said belonged to him, according to State's Attorney Lisa Thayer Welch.

In an unrelated case Guy Paul Beitzel, 27, McHenry, pleaded guilty in Circuit Court to driving under the influence (DUI) of alcohol and to possession of marijuana. Related charges were dismissed upon his plea.

Sherbin sentenced Beitzel to one year in the Garrett County Jail, with 10 months suspended for the DUI charge. He received a concurrent 30-day sentence for the possession charge.

After serving his jail sentence, Beitzel will be on probation, with conditions that include treatment and the payment of $410 in court costs.

He was the driver of a vehicle stopped by Maryland State Police along Mosser Road, McHenry, for traffic violations last March. The trooper made observations of Beitzel, including the results of field sobriety tests, which led to his arrest for the DUI. A smoking pipe and small bag of marijuana were found in his pocket when he was searched incident to his arrest, the state's attorney noted.

In another court proceeding last week, George Whitt Suiter, 24, Williamsburg, Va., pleaded guilty to possession of CDS–not marijuana. Related charges were dismissed under the plea.

Sherbin then sentenced Suiter to one year in the Garrett County Jail, suspended the sentence, and placed Suiter on probation. Fines and costs totaling $1,885 were imposed.

Suiter was arrested and charged by investigators with the Garrett County Narcotics Task Force last July when the vehicle he was driving was stopped for a speeding violation. After a positive alert by a drug-detection dog, a search of Suiter's vehicle led to the recovery of a quantity of psilocybin (mushrooms) and paraphernalia with a trace of marijuana, according to the state's attorney.

In other proceedings, Desiree Michelle Stannard, 27, and Finn Michael Supan, 28, both of Richmond, Va., appeared in Circuit Court and entered guilty pleas to drug offenses. Stannard pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine, and Supan pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

Stannard was sentenced by Judge Sherbin to six months in the Garrett County Jail, all suspended, and placed on probation. She was assessed fines and costs totaling $1,345.

Supan was sentenced to 30 days in the Garrett County Jail, all suspended, and also placed on probation. He was assessed fines and costs of $605 and ordered to forfeit $487 seized at the time of commission report is due by August 2014.) New York, by comparison, has spent more than three years on its own modernization process. With New Yorkers, many Marylanders share an ethos that having "best management practices" in place – if and when drilling is permitted – may reduce to virtually zero the sorts of problems now being reported almost daily, it seems, in Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

To accomplish my volunteer work as a commissioner, I often struggle to balance commitments to my family and business. Tackling the real core of what "safe-drilling" must be – to protect the public and a natural environment that is our heritage and our future – begins at this year's first meeting, on Jan. 27 in Annapolis.

So, it was with great disappointment that I read last week that western Maryland's top officials sent a letter to Gov. O'Malley advocating for expedited drilling. This follows months of similar public comments from our state representative and senator. Despite vocal, consistent calls for prudence, at dozens of public meetings in the last year, our eight most powerful elected leaders decided to press a divisive campaign to speed up drilling.

That they would try to short-circuit the critical technical review before it is even begun is disturbing enough. But I wish that the three who are also sitting members of the governor's panel had appreciated the disrespect for the group's work that their action reveals.

By appointing to his commission a number of people from the part of Maryland to be affected by this enterprise, our Democratic governor showed good faith. He didn't select only industry executives and campaign contributors, or, as we see, only his supporters. He personally assured me of his determination, and I want to assure the public that many other commissioners remain committed to the duties at hand.

Don't Play Politics with Your Investment Decisions

While the election season heats up, you will hear more and more promises, claims and counter-claims from the candidates. As a citizen, you may or may not enjoy this "political theater," but as an investor, you might be concerned over all the talk about taxes, Social Security, Medicare and other financial topics. Will you need to adjust your savings and investment strategies? If so, how?

Before you think about adjusting your investment strategy in anticipation of any actions coming from Washington, keep a couple of facts in mind. First, few campaign promises become reality. And second, due to our system of government, radical shifts in direction are difficult to implement — which is why so few of them occur.

Still, we may see some smaller-scale — yet not insignificant — changes in the near future. In light of this possibility, what investment decisions should you make? Here are a few suggestions:

• Consider owning investments that are taxed in different ways. No one can predict what will happen with income tax rates or the tax rates that are applied to capital gains and dividends. Consequently, it may be a good idea to seek "tax diversification" by owning investments that are taxed in different ways. For example, when you sell appreciated stocks, you pay capital gains taxes, where interest payments from bonds will be taxed at your individual tax rate. And it's always a good idea to take advantage of tax-advantaged vehicles, such as an IRA and your 401(k) or other employer-sponsored retirement plan.

• Stick with quality. It's a good idea, when owning stocks, to invest in quality companies with diversified businesses. These companies are usually less dependent on a particular government program, and they typically have a global reach, so they may be better able to handle any changes implemented in Washington.

• Stay focused on your long-term goals. Politicians come and go, and our political parties seem to take turns holding the reins of power. Yet your long-term goals — such as college for your children, a comfortable retirement and the ability to leave a legacy to your family — don't really change. By realizing that you are largely responsible for achieving your goals, and by following an investment strategy that's suitable for your individual risk tolerance and time horizon, you can make gradual, but still meaningful, progress toward those goals — no matter what's happening in Washington.

• Review your strategy regularly. With the possible approach of changes in tax policies and in government programs that can affect your retirement security, you'll want to review your investment strategy regularly to make sure it's still on track toward helping you meet your objectives. As part of this review, you may want to seek out more "tax-smart" investment opportunities, while always looking for ways to supply the asset growth you'll need to enjoy the retirement lifestyle you've envisioned.

Aside from voting for the candidates who best represent your interests, you may not have much influence over what goes on in Washington. But by "electing" the right moves to help meet your goals, you can have plenty of control over your investment strategy.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

Sarah Orendorf of Foxtown Road spent Tuesday with me, and together we watched my favorite BBC series, Monarch of the Glen, a wonderful story about a Scottish Highlands aristocratic family. It is filled with very beautiful scenery and a big crowd of interesting and colorful characters.

When the Deep Horizon oil rig blew up and gushed many millions of gallons of American crude oil, it virtually caused the whole Gulf Coast economy to grind to a halt. It costs thousands of jobs from all levels of the job market. From food service workers to cleaning staff at hotels, all jobs were affected.

In the large seafood industry, the hardest hit was the fleet of fishing boats and their small business owners. Many well-off tourists come to the Gulf Coast to hire a boat and go out on a large-scale fishing trip. There are all kinds of hospitality-type services for these fishermen. It affected organic structures like a major coral reef, which suffered the worst long-term damage from the oil-polluted gulf. Coral is a promising resource for new cutting-edge drugs, especially anti-cancer treatments.

We still can't fully estimate the total damage to human resources, financial resources, social structures, and ecology.

One of the causes was probably people looking for various shortcuts to save time and energy.

It is becoming more and more clear to me that some members of Congress view their "governing" job as an opportunity to play games with America's future. In spite of compromise from the White House about extending the debt limit paired with a deficit and debt lowering, they insist on doing it slowly in three little pieces, purely for political advantage. This is what originally caused the reduction in the credit rating, and caused the stock market to be weakened. It also affects Americans' confidence in the future.

Today is the Martin Luther King national holiday. He not only preached about the handful of American racist beliefs and practices, but also about the end of widespread poverty in America. He urged people to spend less on warfare and more on helping the helpless. He was a fully qualified pastor of the Southern Baptist Church, so I am sure he knew better than I do. He never promoted violence as a tool for social change.

This morning, I switched from my current regular television viewing to go back to the Today Show, since it is their 60th anniversary. Many past star anchors were joining this broadcast, like Jane Pauley and Tom Brokaw. I saw many important news stories first on Today. The most memorable was on the morning of Sept. 11, 2001. I watched the planes fly into the Twin Towers in real time.

Wow. I awoke this morning (Wednesday) quite early. Apparently the snow storm blew in – I mean really blew in. It even blew open my front door, and since the outside was about zero with the wind chill, it was very different from how I often awake (because I am usually too hot). It was much different, because as much as I was concerned about going and dealing with the very cold air in my house, I couldn't face getting outside of my blankets.

It wasn't as bad as one Christmas Eve when we were at my Glotfelty grandparents' home for a family gathering. A genuine Bittinger howling blizzard came in, and the basement door blew open, causing quite a few indoor pipes to freeze up.

They had a large birthday celebration in Louisville, Ky., in honor of Mohammed Ali, who turned 70 on Tuesday. I can't remember when his beautiful daughter followed her father's career as a female professional boxer. I think her father threw his gold medal from the Olympics of 1960 into the river in his hometown to protest how he did not have the full rights of an American.

That was about the same time when Martin Luther King did some of his most important work, like the march of poor people into Washington, D.C., in 1963, when they set up a tent city. That was the first Occupy activity.

In Mark Twain's novel Huckleberry Finn, he dabbled in some serious issues about developing America. I wrote a long detailed paper about it as a part of an English master's degree course at WVU. I loved that class, because it was taught by a quite elderly professor emeritus, Dr. Foster. He possessed so much knowledge and insight. Even if I was working (during summer break) and was expecting my first baby, the daily drive to Morgantown was definitely worth the trouble.

I hate to admit that I fell asleep during the excellent game of Tim Tebow against Tom Brady. Well, between the Denver Broncos and the New England Patriots, that is.

When I was most excited about professional football was during the 1970s when the Steelers ruled it. I guess that team was made up of guys about the same age I was. Let's face it, that team was probably more loaded with rare players like Terry Bradshaw and "Mean" Joe Green. There was also the flying wide receiver Lynn Swann and the simply magical player Franco Harris. What else need I say about them, except that they won four Super Bowls? They rarely disappointed their fans.

It just occurred to me that Pittsburgh between the 1960s through the 1970s went through the same transition that America went through a bit later, and was no longer an an ultra blue-collar, heavy-industry city. But the weakening of America's steel industry was I guess because it was cheaper in foreign countries.

At the same time, northern Garrett County lost its own major industry – the brick factory down in the valley, just outside Jennings. Those jobs were well-paid, but very hard, and they ran three shifts. I worked all those shifts during the summer I worked there. It was my first job after I graduated from the University of Maryland in 1975. No male worker believed that I, a college girl, could do the work. But I did it. And without a shred of regret, I jumped at the first theater job that appeared. But it was important that it was essentially part of Pittsburgh's steel industry.

As a manufacturer of fire bricks, I was briefly a member of the United Steel Workers Union, one of the most important unions in the history of America. A few years later, I became a member of what I think is the oldest union, the International Seamstress Union, also called the Ladies Garment Workers. That union made a five-day work week the standard for all American workers, and overtime pay for work beyond that. The only way I could afford to live in Manhattan was the massive amount of overtime that I had to work, because there are no more intense deadlines than a Broadway opening night. We almost worked around the clock many days.

That fall, I guess it was 1980, there was a PBS historical movie, The Scarlett Letter. That election day fell on my birthday, Nov. 6, as it was in 1960. But the thing that was so wonderful about the election of 1980 was how much overtime pay I earned on that day. The union rules said that your birthday was a holiday, so I earned double holiday pay for a very long day. I vaguely remember that one day was enough to pay my rent for a whole month.

Although I enjoyed very much my four years of undergraduate education at the University of Maryland, I never truly hit my stride as a student until graduate school, both at WVU and Frostburg State University when I got my master's degree.

I regret somewhat that I never pursued a PhD, but I had plenty to deal with in my role as a mother and my demanding job as English professor at GCC. Then fate put its foot down on my ambitions firmly in April 1994 when I suddenly became a disabled person. What a shock. I have still not fully learned to deal with it. I really never before experienced a door closing on me. The accumulating obstacles seemed to almost shut me down.

It is a shame that I never achieved fully, since my various abilities and talents demanded me to go further. So now my only real outlet is this column in The Republican. So, like it or not, you are reading something written by a serious scholar. And if that seems like a lecture to some Swanton resident, well, so be it. That is what scholars do. And contemporary America is worth serious examination.

The Bittinger Lutheran Parish council met last week and officers were selected for the new year. Elected were Pastor Randy Richardson, president; Tina Buckel, vice president; Linda Thomas, secretary; and Marvin Beckman, treasurer.

The Bittinger Parish observed "Global Mission Awareness Sunday" during the worship services at each church. A special litany was included during the service, and hymns were selected that had a mission theme.

The regular Fifth Sunday joint service for the Bittinger Parish will be held on Sunday, Jan. 29, at Emmanuel. The service will begin at 10 a.m., and Pastor Randy Richardson extends an invitation to everyone to attend.

A Vacation Bible School planning meeting and dinner will be held Sunday, Jan. 29, beginning at 6 p.m. at the parsonage. The parish Bible School in 2011 will be reviewed, and plans started for the parish VBS for 2012. All members of the parish are encouraged to attend.

SRWA Members To Attend Meeting Of Yough Association

Savage River Watershed Association members and interested persons are invited to attend a meeting of the Youghiogheny River Watershed Association (YRWA) next Tuesday, Jan. 24, 7 p.m., in the Center for Adventure and Outdoor Sports at Garrett College.

Guest speakers Dan Brower and Tony Prochaska of the Maryland Department of Natural Resources will discuss the Maryland Stream Waders program. Stream Waders uses volunteers to monitor and assess waterway health, with the results placed into the Maryland Biological Stream Survey (MBSS) data base.

According to James "Smokey" Stanton, YRWA president, Stream Waders is a potential structure to be used in conducting water quality baseline and continued monitoring of streams in Garrett County.

The presentation will include a map developed by DNR of sites the agency believes should be monitored because of Marcellus shale gas drilling in adjacent states.

Adorable Adoptables

THIS HEALTHY LARGE BLACK LAB (left) was picked up as a stray along Penn Point Road and is currently housed at the Garrett County Animal Shelter. "We can't believe his owner has not reclaimed him yet," said a Garrett County Humane Society spokesperson. If he is adopted by a new owner, he will need to be the only dog in the home. Also at the shelter are a small Jack Russell terrier mix that was given up by his owner, a young very energetic medium-size black Lab that was given up by his owner, and a white cat that was found at Nature's Own Nursery near Deep Creek Lake. "She is very friendly, so we hope her owner is looking for her," said the spokesperson about the feline. Other pets are also available for adoption, including the medium-size tan dog with white markings and the large hound from last week's Adorable Adoptables. "The two sister cats, a tuxedo and a tabby, are still waiting to pair up with you," added the spokesperson. "They are very nice, laid back, and need a home together." The recently featured Australian shepherd was reclaimed, plus two others were adopted last week. The GC Humane Society provides straw free of charge at the animal shelter for residents to use in dog houses. "But call the shelter first before coming in to make sure straw is available," said the spokesperson. "Last week we ran out, and the weather hasn't cooperated for us to refill the supply." For more information, persons may call the animal shelter at 301-334-3553. Located along Oakland Sang Run Road, the county-operated facility is open Monday through Friday. There is an unfortunate trend toward the closing of community schools in Garrett County. Do we want our young children bused, during the very early morning hours, on long rides to a school beyond their local community? If not, we need to express our opinions to the proper authorities and make our voices heard.
How can we do that? Here are some suggestions.

Fire Deaths In Maryland Show 6% Drop In 2011

Maryland state fire marshal William E. Barnard has released a preliminary report revealing 67 Marylanders died in 56 fatal fires during 2011. Those fire deaths represent a 6% decrease as compared to the 71 fire deaths occurring in 50 fatal fires in 2010.

The number of fatal fires in 2011 represents a 12% increase as compared to 2010.

The majority of the victims in fatal fires (44) involved victims age 45 and older. As in years past, more victims in this age group succumb to the effects of fire than those less than 45 years of age.

Seventy-nine percent of all fire deaths in Maryland in 2011 occurred in residential structures. Fifty-seven percent of those deaths occurred between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. when the highest numbers of Marylanders are most vulnerable – while they are sleeping.

"This is the time when most of us depend on life saving devices, such as working smoke alarms and residential fire sprinklers, to provide the extra time needed to escape the ingredients of fire," said Barnard.

Nine counties experienced no fire fatalities: Calvert, Caroline, Cecil, Dorchester, Garrett, Kent, St. Mary's, Somerset, and Talbot. Baltimore City reported 17 fire deaths in 2011, compared to 20 fire deaths reported in 2010, and Anne Arundel County reported one fire death in 2011, while six perished in 2010. Prince George's County reported 16 fire deaths in 2011, as compared to seven fire deaths in 2010.

"Every Marylander needs to exercise personal responsibility to protect themselves and their families by ensuring they have working smoke alarms in their homes," said Barnard. "If you are building a new home, please consider installing residential fire sprinklers. When used in combination, fire sprinklers, working smoke alarms, and fire escape plans provide assistance in helping to protect citizens from the perils of an uncontrolled fire."

The annual deadline for organizations applying for funding support in amounts of $500 or more is March 21. Applications must be mailed or delivered to the Garrett County Arts Council on or before the application deadline to qualify for funding consideration.

According to Karen Reckner, executive director, one of the primary purposes of the Garrett County Arts Council is to support community arts development and the public presentation of local arts programs through this grant program. Raley noted that the commissioners also conducted a 90-minute work session on their proposed land-use management plan. Director John Nelson, Garrett County Department of Planning and Land Development, presented suggestions for the draft, including regulations regarding manufacturing facilities located outside the county's industrial/business parks.

to reduce bullying in schools, topic brought up in public comment at the previous meeting. Parents who wish to access the form on bullying, harassment, or intimidation may do so by visiting the BOE web site: www.ga.k12.md.us.

Following the presentation the board heard public comment. First in line was Mike Robinson, who stated he was against fifth graders attending middle schools.

"A major problem with young children is the issue of insecurity," Robinson stated.

"Moving the fifth graders will only amplify insecurity. The things I've seen as a pastor and counselor cause me to oppose the fifth grade move. We need to look into redistricting and we need to do something to change our downturn of population. In leadership you don't take without offering something better."

Other speakers expressed that fifth graders were unready to attend schools with older children and too young for extended commute times. One such speaker was Monica Sisler, a math teacher from Salisbury, Pa.

"Fifth graders are still very much children," she said. "They need to feel safe and secure. Students are our number one priority."

Trail Project

come in twice, disturb the area twice," Glotfelty said about constructing the trail. "It seemed like a win-win proposal for us."

Garrett Trails sent a letter to 27 Glendale Road property owners last summer, inquiring if they would approve a pathway on their land. The group received 12 responses, with 11 of them favoring the project, according to Glotfelty.

"We thought it would be good if you (the commissioners) sponsored a public meeting with the property owners down there to talk about both the waterline expansion and this additional amenity we could put on top of that," he said.

Commissioner Jim Raley suggested the hearing be held at Dutch's, located along Glendale Road, or Garrett College.

Glotfelty showed the commissioners artist renderings of what the trail might look like when the project is completed.

"As you can see it's a fairly, I think, unobtrusive path that will make it a lot safer for pedestrians and bike riders to ride along Glendale Road," said Glotfelty, who is also the county health officer. "Right now you have a very curved road, limited shoulders, there's no place to jump out of the way. If you're riding a bike and a car is coming in your path, you just pretty much have to bail over the side of the hill. I think it's just a matter of time, from a public health perspective, until we have a death on that highway, just because of the high traffic that you have with pedestrians and bicyclists."

In addition to improving safety, he indicated, the trail would improve Glendale Road properties.

"We can give renters and homeowners an ability to walk right outside their homes and get on a pathway that will be able to take them to the amenities on Rt. 219," Glotfelty said.

Garrett Trails must secure rights of way from landowners before the project can begin. Glotfelty noted that some owners may be concerned about liability issues if someone wrecks his bike or falls off the pathway and gets injured. The health officer stressed, however, that landowners providing "recreational opportunities" are protected under the Maryland Recreational Use Statute. The statute was enacted by the Maryland legislature several years ago to encourage owners and managers to allow public access for recreation use on their lands.

A brochure titled "Maryland Recreational Use Statute and the Private Landowner is available at http://www.nps.gov/ncrc/programs/rtca/helpfultools/recusebrochures/marylandrecliabbrochure.pd.

The commissioners' next public meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 7, beginning at 9 a.m. at the courthouse in Oakland.

Public Hearing

comment portion of the hearing was Spencer Schlosnagle, mayor of Friendsville.

"We need to bring more people into Garrett County," Schlosnagle said to the large crowd.

"Please help us look at overhead, and possibly raising property taxes. I think we can work together to stop the closing of our school. Fifth graders need to be in their community schools. We're proud of this town and community."

Many speakers were given three minutes to address the board and spoke on the issues facing the community and its children. They asked the board to consider the possible detriment to the town, the children, and all of Garrett County.

Mayor Schlosnagle ended the public comment by stating an intent for himself and others to petition on the behalf of Garrett County in Annapolis.

Charlotte Sebold, board president, thanked all those in attendance and those who offered their input.

"This is not a position we're happy to be in," Sebold stated. "We will take into consideration all that you've said, and will do the very best we can."

The public hearing concerning the proposed closing of Kitzmiller Elementary is scheduled for tonight (Jan. 19) at 7 p.m. It will take place in the school's multipurpose room. On Tuesday (Jan. 24), the hearing on the closing of Dennett Road Elementary will be held in the Southern High School gymnasium. It is also scheduled to begin at 7 p.m.

Hilarious Comedy

Moon Over Buffalo by Ken Ludwig

This good time comedy centers on George and Charlotte Hay, fading stars of the 1950s who are playing Private Lives and Cyrano De Bergerac in Buffalo, New York. They receive word that they might have just one last shot at stardom: Frank Capra is coming to town to see their matinee, and if he likes what he sees, he might cast them in a movie. Unfortunately for George and Charlotte, everything that could go wrong does go wrong.

CELEBRATING 40 YEARS OF SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY

"YOU CAN DO IT! WE CAN HELP!" Garrett College Financial Aid counselors stand ready to help students and family members with navigating the financial aid system. Anyone who needs more information about filling out the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) is invited to attend the College Goal Maryland event to held at GC on Thursday, Feb. 2. One need not be applying to Garrett College to take advantage of this informational event. For more information, persons may contact Cissy VanSickle, GC director of financial aid, at cissy.vansickle@garrettcollege.edu. In the photo, from left, are Kathy Fauber, GC financial aid/veterans affairs counselor; Andrew Harvey, financial aid counselor; and VanSickle. Not present for the photo was financial aid counselor Pamela Warnick. All will be on hand at the College Goal Maryland event.

Getting Help With Getting Aid: College Financial Aid Event Set

by Peggy Santamaria

Most people considering attending college are also looking for financial aid. In fact, more than 80 percent of students enrolled across the nation receive some form of monetary assistance to pay the bills for postsecondary education.

The process of finding the funding begins with filling out the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) – the required form to apply for financial assistance for higher education. This can be an intimidating process; however, there is help available.

Cissy VanSickle, Garrett College's director of financial aid, has been guiding people through the funding process for nearly 30 years. She is a true veteran of navigating the often troubling system of qualifying for financial support.

Over her years of shepherding students and parents through the paperwork, VanSickle has seen many changes in the federal aid system.

"The form has actually been shortened from what it was years ago when there were two forms that needed to be filled out," she said. "One parent facing the federal aid form with her daughter years ago told me that she thought that if her daughter could accurately complete the application on her own, she should be awarded a degree simply on that basis. But now, in addition to the shorter application, we also now have help on the Internet that can really simplify the process for students and their families. Even with all these improvements, though, it can still be a challenge."

The need for assistance from a live person is a widespread phenomenon. Recently, a parent stopped in the admissions office at Garrett College and stated that he really wanted to sit down face-to-face with someone who could answer a few questions that came up while he was helping his daughter fill out her FAFSA. Though he himself had a college degree, he found several portions of the form to be confusing.

In response to this need for person-to-person advising about the application process, a statewide event called College Goal Maryland has been slated. The purpose of this forum is to provide free help to students and families completing the FASFA.

In Garrett County, College Goal Maryland will be held at the college on Thursday, Feb. 2, from 6 to 9 p.m.

"This event is not limited to people who plan to attend Garrett College," Van Sickle emphasized. "Everyone is invited to come and get the information that they need. At one previous College Goal event, one of our counselors worked with a student who needed help with his application for grad school. Our financial aid staff will be on hand to help explain the forms line-by-line and assist the students in getting as much aid as possible."

Persons are urged to go online to www.CollegeGoalSundayMD.org or contact VanSickle by e-mail at cissy.vansickle@garrettcollege./edu to obtain a list of forms and financial records to bring to the College Goal Maryland evening.

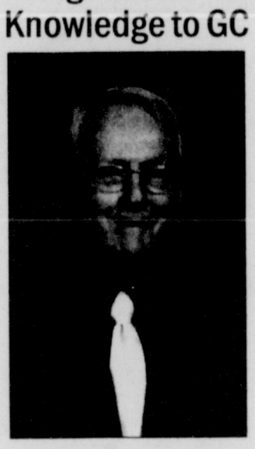
Dr. Truett Rogers Brings Wealth Of Knowledge to GC



by Peggy Santamaria

After retiring from a long career of teaching at Alderson-Broaddus College and West Virginia University's Honors College, Dr. Truett Rogers found himself in an unexpected situation when he accepted a request to teach a history course for the Continuing Education & Workforce Development Division of Garrett College.

Sue Fowler, program director, had approached Dr. Rogers about instructing the history class.

"He was a little uncertain what to think about it at first," she said. "He had not considered teaching continuing education courses."

So Fowler pointed out that the good thing about the not-for-credit format is that the instructor does not need to be burdened with testing and grading, but can simply enjoy the actual teaching.

Dr. Rogers decided to have a go at it, and he began instructing a class of adult students in Appalachian history this past fall.

"I was there that day when Dr. Rogers came out of his first class," said Fowler. "For all his previous uncertainty, he looked really happy, and he said, 'I love adult learners.'"

Dr. Rogers, who had been teaching senior honors students at WVU who were very focused on their education, discovered that his Garrett College students evidenced an equal, if not greater, level of intensity in the classroom.

"I didn't expect this," he said. "These older students were really there to learn. The younger ones are too, of course, but they are focused on getting their degrees. The Continuing Education students actually asked me to give them a reading list. My honors students usually asked me to cut back on the reading list!"

During one session the class was discussing the history of coal mining, poverty, and poor working conditions. Dr. Rogers pointed out that much of this information is simply being forgotten.

"One student suggested we contact Ken Burns (a producer of award-winning historical documentaries) and ask him to do a special on this era," Rogers said. "It surprised me that the students would be that proactive."

He added that Burns recently wrote back saying he could not do this because his schedule is booked for the future, but he thanked Dr. Rogers for the recommendation.

Dr. Rogers, who has a degree in theological studies and a doctorate in Colonial/Revolutionary American history, has published several books and is currently working on another one. Future classes he will be teaching at GC will combine his education and expertise in history and theological studies. This month he will begin instructing a class called Comparative Religion, and in March he will teach the History of Religion in American Politics.

As part of the comparative religion curriculum, Dr. Rogers will present guest speakers.

"In addition to giving out reading lists and having discussion in class concerning student reading, I also have a resource person from each religion we study in attendance to share personal insights in that religious persuasion," he said. "Thus, there will be a Hindu, trained Buddhist teacher, Jewish rabbi, Muslim imam, Roman Catholic priest, and a local Amish representative with us doing their religion's presentation to enter into our discussions and answer questions."

The comparative religion classes will be held at the GC Southern Outreach Center (the former armory) in Oakland on Fridays from 10 a.m. until noon, starting January 27 and running until March 16.

The course Dr. Rogers will teach starting in March, Religion in American Politics, is designed to foster highly interactive classroom debate. More information will be available on this session in the near future.

"Dr. Rogers is a wonderful example of what 'lifelong learning is all about," said Fowler. "His classes represent the high caliber of instruction and learning that can happen for young honor students at a large, highly academic institution or for the average person in a small rural community college continuing education class."

One may register for the class and/or obtain additional information by calling 301-387-3069.

ROTARIANS SUPPORT "I CAN SWIM!" – When last month's meeting of the Grantsville Rotary Club was held at the new Garrett College Community Athletic & Recreation Complex (CARC), members had the opportunity to tour the facility and learn how its programs and amenities benefit the community. Recognizing the importance of the CARC "I Can Swim!" program, which is provided free to all kindergarten-age children in the county, the Rotarians contributed $3,000 to help sustain it. Pictured above, Garrett College president Richard L. MacLennan accepts the donation from Grantsville Rotary president Linda Buckel. Griffin. "This improvement effort recalls the days of the Civilian Conservation Corps, which built many of Maryland's state parks, creating jobs, 'greening' public lands as conservation models, and inspiring millions of visitors with better places to enjoy our state's natural beauty and unique heritage."

Under the leadership of O'Malley, the Maryland Park Service has embarked on a system-wide commitment to green its 66 state parks – which host more than 10 million visitors each year – as models of sustainability and conservation best practices. Strategic actions to date have focused on energy improvements, new state-of-the-art green building design and construction, sustainable trails, and recycling, as well as environmental restoration, including reforestation and stormwater management improvements to help the bay.

In addition to providing recreation opportunities for citizens and visitors, state parks provide summer employment and green jobs training for at-risk youth through the Governor's Conservation Jobs Corps, which has graduated 820 young people since 2008. In 2010 their work on maintenance, landscaping and construction jobs saved the state an estimated $2.7 million, according to the governor's office.

Looking ahead, the state's parks will also serve as outdoor classrooms for the state's new environmental literacy requirements.

"State parks are the epitome of affordable getaways for families, models for living in harmony with nature, and a vital tonic for the mind, body, and spirit," said Tim Casey, chair of the Governor's State Park Advisory Commission. "These strategic investments will benefit millions of Marylanders, increasing access to the outdoors, creating jobs, and restoring the environment for today and future generations."

Rams Top Hampshire At Home Before Falling To University

The Southern High girls' varsity basketball squad used its third quarter with Hampshire to pull away and overtake its opponent, earning a 57-46 home victory on Saturday. The win was followed by a loss to Morgantown's (W.Va.) University High, 64-49. Though the out-of-conference loss snapped the Rams' four-game winning streak, it did not knock the team off its perch atop the AMAC polls – the Rams remain in first place.

Hosting Hampshire, the Rams led 18-10 after the first quarter. The Trojans battled back to tie the score at 28 by halftime before Southern regained the lead in the third. The Rams did not relinquish it.

Southern's Lindsay Brady added seven rebounds to her game-high 14 points, while teammate Hannah Horne also had seven rebounds to go with her 11 points scored. Additionally, Rams Mandy Sweitzer and Alli Shaffer both finished with seven points, while Sweitzer also contributed seven rebounds.

Sierra Blomquist led Hampshire with 13 points. Bethany Barnes and Candy Fitzwater both finished with eight points.

Emma Corbin had 15 points during Hampshire's 52-29 jayvee victory. Crystal Tobery had nine points for Southern.

In Tuesday's game with University, the Rams allowed three of their opponents to score well into double digits, as Sami Gaspar scored 19 points, Tori Boling had 15, and Mariah Callen had 14.

Southern freshman Kambrie Bosley had 10 points, Alycia Horner had nine, and Sweitzer eight points.

University, ranked No. 5 in the West Virginia Class AAA poll, improved to 10-2 with the win.

Southern's loss sets its overall record at 9-4.

University led 19-12 after one quarter and 36-28 at the half before outscoring the Rams 18-6 in the third period, widening the lead to 54-34.

University also won the junior varsity matchup, 54-24.

Southern Boys' Varsity Falls To Bishop Walsh

The Southern High boys' varsity basketball team dropped to 7-4 Tuesday evening, as the Rams were defeated by visiting Bishop Walsh, 72-66, in an Appalachian Mountain Athletic Conference clash.

The contest was close through the first half, with the score knotted at 20-20 at the end of the first quarter, and the Rams down by just four points, 40-36, at halftime. But the Spartans erupted for 21 points in the third stanza while holding the Rams to just 13, giving BW a 61-49 lead going into the final quarter.

Wyatt McBee and D.J. Ritchie were the top scorers for the Rams, netting 16 and 15 points, respectively, while teammate Kurt Gangler was held to just nine points, considerably below his average. Also reaching double figures was Alex Fike, who finished with 14 points and also grabbed a team-high seven rebounds. Ritchie pulled down five rebounds.

Pat Jones netted a game-high 23 points to lead the Spartans, who upped their overall record to 10-3 and their AMAC mark to 5-1. Greg Hendershot scored 20 points and Liam Rhodes recorded 12.

Southern is set to host its intra-county rival Northern tonight at 7:30 p.m. The Rams will follow that game with a road trip to Allegany on Monday. That contest will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The Southern junior varsity squad improved its record to 10-1 by crushing the Bishop Walsh jayvees in the first game, 59-17.

The Rams led 15-5 at the end of the first quarter and continued to stretch that margin until the final buzzer. Southern was paced by Reese Haskiell with 13 points and six rebounds, Kyle Sherbin with 10 points and seven rebounds, Derek Hinebaugh with 10 points and six rebounds, and Greg Baker with eight points. The Rams committed only nine turnovers for the game.

Brandon Reed scored five points to lead the Spartans in scoring.

Southern's boys' teams will be back in action this Friday at home against Northern, then travel to Frankfort next Tuesday. The jayvee games will tip off at 6 p.m., followed by the varsity tilts at 7:30.

Huskies Burned By Tylor Jesse, Alco Campers

Tylor Jesse was practically a one-man wrecking crew who wreaked havoc on the Northern High School boys' varsity Tuesday evening in Cumberland, as the Huskies were crushed by host Allegany, 83-42, in an Appalachian Mountain Athletic Conference game.

Jesse played only a little more than half of the game, but in that time recorded 27 points, 22 rebounds, five steals, and four blocks against the Huskies. He left the game early in the third stanza.

Northern trailed 19-10 at the end of the first quarter, was down 43-17 at intermission, and was behind 68-25 after three periods.

The loss dropped the Huskies to 3-8 overall and 1-6 in AMAC play, while the Campers improved to 9-4 overall and 7-1 in the conference.

Leading the Huskies offensively was Jeremy Bender, who scored nine points. Syd Frazier scored eight points.

Also reaching double figures for Allegany were Madison Wolford with 14 points and Carter Imes with 11.

The junior varsity outcome was much better news for Husky fans, as Trevon Jones drained a 3-pointer with one second remaining in overtime to give Northern a 46-43 win.

Jones led the Huskies with a game-high 23 points, and teammate John Schneider netted 10. Leading Alco's jayvees offensively was Jack Hawkins with 15 points.

Northern Tallies First Win; Beats Allegany In Accident

Northern High School's varsity girls' basketball team was bested in a road game with Keyser, 49-27, last Thursday (Jan. 12), but surged in the second half of its home game with Allegany on Tuesday to halt an 11-game slide. The 43-34 win over the Campers was the Huskies' first of the season.

Keyser's Carly Grady scored 12 of her 18 points during the third quarter. The Huskies had no answer offensively and went scoreless in that period, which ended 39-16 and extended the Golden Tornado's seven-point halftime lead to 23.

Four players scored for Northern, with Allison Yommer leading the way with 13 points. She also led the team with eight boards.

Keyser got a game-high 19 points from Markisha Coleman, though no one else on the roster managed more than three points.

The Huskies won the junior varsity game by five points, 42-37. Emily Fratz had 13 points in the win, and Katie Tasker scored 11 in the loss.

In its next game against Allegany, things looked like more of the same for Northern through the first half. The Huskies trailed 25-10 at the break, but came alive in the second half, both offensively and defensively, beating the fourth-ranked Campers.

Yommer and Kirsten Rayner did most of the damage, but every player seemed to step it up for the Huskies, who had pulled away with seven points by the end of the third period.

Yommer tallied 17 points, eight rebounds, three blocked shots, and three steals. Rayner scored 16 points and grabbed six rebounds.

Aimee Conley had 10 points and Stephanie Dawson eight for Allegany.

NORTHERN SOARS – The varsity girls' basketball squad of Northern High School claimed its first victory of the season Tuesday evening, while hosting AMAC rival Allegany. The 43-34 win may have come as a surprise to anyone who might have left the game at halftime, when the Huskies found themselves trailing 25-10. Northern surged after the break, however, behind the big efforts of juniors Allison Yommer (17 points, eight rebounds, three blocked shots, three steals) and Kirsten Rayner (16 points, six rebounds). Pictured above is Yommer (#22, center left) elevating over three beaten Camper defenders. In the background, from left, are teammates Heather Vincent (#20), Kayla Porter (#5), and Kiersten Butler (#10). In the photo below, Rayner (#3) dices through the Allegany defense. Northern grabbed the lead with five minutes left in the fourth quarter and did not relent.

"We just kept pushing and we were able to extend the lead once we got it," said Northern head coach Ron Opel. "We got timely rebounds down the stretch."

Twelve of Yommer's points came in the second half, while Rayner had 10 points in the fourth quarter. Kiersten Butler came through defensively in the final minutes, sinking four baskets from the free-throw line.

"We handled their pressure pretty well," Opel stated. "That's how Kirsten Rayner got most of her buckets in the fourth quarter – after breaking the pressing defense.

"We did a very good job on defense, too, allowing only nine points in the second half. It was one of the best defensive efforts of our season."

The game was a rematch of an earlier contest played back in December, which ended with Allegany on top by a margin of 49-31.

"Getting the first win is such a relief," Opel said. "We didn't really care who the opponent was, we just wanted to get that monkey off our backs. It feels great."

Northern also took the jayvee win, 34-30. Ashley Murphy had 13 points for the Huskies, and Briana Benko had 13 points for Allegany.

Northern (1-11 overall) will attempt to ride its newfound momentum into Oakland tonight, as it is set to face cross-county foe Southern High. That game is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. On Monday, the Huskies will play host to Mtn. Ridge, also beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Snowflake Chase Held; Winners DeWitt, Kovack

The annual Snowflake Chase lived up to its name on Saturday, as cold weather and snowy roads didn't stop 107 runners and 22 walkers from participating in the 5-mile run and 2-mile fun run/walk at Deep Creek Lake State Park. Proceeds of the race this year will benefit the Garrett College Student Veterans Organization (SVO), and the race served as the kickoff for the Queen City Striders' 2012 Striders Racing Series (SRC).

In the 5-mile event, participants covered 2.5 miles of the park road along Deep Creek Lake, out and back. Upon successful return to the finish line, runners were treated to pizza and soft drinks at Uno Restaurant. Walkers covered the first mile out before turning around to the finish.

In the run, 24-year-old Frostburg resident Dan DeWitt cruised to a win in a time of 29:42, nearly 1½ minutes faster than 23-year-old Chris Behre of Hurricane, W.Va., in 31:04.

DeWitt is in training for the Pittsburgh Marathon under Coach Mike Spinnler of the Cumberland Valley Athletic Club (CVAC). Behre recently graduated from St. Francis University and ran the mile on the Red Flash track team.

Rounding out the top three overall finishers was 26-year-old Cumberland resident David Mertz with a time of 31:30. Mertz also runs for the CVAC and recently took fourth place in Fairmont's Run to Read Half Marathon.

Masters winner and placing fourth overall was 46-year-old Dennis Mickey of Ridgeley, who recorded a time of 32:00.

The fastest female runner for the day was 26-year-old Shannon Kovack, also of Hurricane, W.Va., who crossed the finish line with a time of 34:40. That placed her 13th among all finishers.

Local elite Jen Sober, 38, of McHenry held off Angela Braun, 29, of Uniontown to claim second place, recording a time of 36:32 to Braun's 36:40. Sober and Braun were 19th and 20th overall.

Masters winner for the female competitors was Jane Rossi, 46, Frostburg, who finished in 43:27.

The top finisher among Garrett County residents was Tom Ruckert, 59, Grantsville, who placed seventh overall with a time of 33:27.

In the 2-mile fun run/walk, 8-year-old Camden Koontz of Bedford, Pa., took first overall, recording a time of 20:30. Mary Moran, 57, of Frostburg claimed first place among the female participants and was third overall with a time of 21:07.

Race photographer Darrell Cavey took photos of each runner, and they can be found online at http://www.tristaterunnur.com. Local running club Queen City Striders provided timing, scoring, and finish-line management services for the race.

The Striders note their appreciation to race directors Joshua Armstrong and Kathryn Gardner, and to the volunteers from the Garrett College SVO. Striders club members who managed the finish line and timed and scored the race were Randy Lowe, Les Broadwater, Debbie Carpenter, Joe McQuade, Tom Dawson, Tom Ruckert, George Nolan, Cindy Whiteman, Keisha McGeady, Bob Stephens, and Dave Ritchie.

Full results and age group awards are available at http://www.qcstriders.org. Questions about the event and/or the club can be e-mailed to qcstriders@gmail.com.

Undermanned Laker Men's Squad Overwhelmed By Hagerstown, 95-73

With only seven players able to see action last night, the Garrett College men's basketball team was overwhelmed by visiting Hagerstown CC in a Maryland JUCO contest, 95-73.

The Lakers fell behind 13-5 in the early minutes of the game, came back with a 33-20 surge to take the lead, but then fell behind for good when the Hawks went on a run just before intermission. The Lakers trailed 43-35 at the break.

The visitors' lead stretched to 20 points early in the second half. A slight comeback by the Lakers pared that advantage to 11 points, but they would get no closer.

Devon Miller led the winners with a game-high 24 points. Antonio Jenifer finished with 21 points, Raymar Watson recorded 15, and Alister Chisholm added 13.

The Lakers were paced by Antonio Butler, who recorded 21 points, nine rebounds, and five assists. Matt Gibson also reached double figures with 12 points.

The loss dropped the Lakers' overall record to 10-9 and their JUCO mark to 4-6. They will host Harford CC this Saturday, with a 5 p.m. tipoff. They will entertain Cecil CC next Wednesday in a 7 p.m. start.

SURROUNDED BY DEFENDERS in the photo above is Garrett Laker Armond Perez during last night's clash between the Lakers and the Hawks of Hagerstown Community College. The scene was somewhat symbolic of the outcome of the contest, as the Lakers fell by a score of 95-73. With only seven players dressed for the game, Garrett fell behind early and could not recover. Putting up two of his team-high 21 points in the photo below is Laker Antonio Butler. Also identifiable is Garrett's Guila Panzo (#32), who chipped in with nine points. Local "Hoopers" To Be Featured At WVU Women's B'Ball Game

The WVU women's basketball team will have some extra "hoopla" at the Play4Kay game on Saturday, Feb. 18. The game and related events will focus on heightening breast cancer awareness, and a featured component of the day will be a Brenda's Body Shop "Hoop Hope Hooray" performance.

This community wide dance project has been led by Brenda Brosnihan, owner of Brenda's Body Shop in Oakland. The halftime show will involve participants dancing with pink hula hoops with pink ribbons depicting the names of breast cancer survivors and honoring those who died from the disease.

"Hoop Hope Hooray represents the importance of healthy lifestyle choices, breast cancer awareness, and early detection," Brosnihan said. "Participants purchase the honor ribbons for their hoops, and the money raised is donated to the Kay Yow Cancer Fund™."

Anyone can purchase a ribbon for the hoops by contacting Brenda's Body Shop. The name on the ribbons will also be displayed at the game on the "Jumbotron."

Brosnihan led a Hoop Hope Hooray campaign in Garrett County last fall for another related charity. The effort raised over $22,000.

"We are excited to be invited to WVU to do our Hoop Hope Hooray dance," she said. "We take an old-school idea like the hula hoop, which has literally been around since the days of Ancient Egypt more than 3,000 years ago when children would fashion circles from dried grapevines and swing them around their waist.

"Our dance uses the hula hoop as a prop, and no hula hooping skills are required. It's a fun dance that mothers, daughters, and grandmothers can all do together. The hoops are decorated pink with WVU accents along with the cause ribbons, very colorful, creating an impact that's emotional and visual."

Brosnihan was notified yesterday that members of the women's team will attend a Hoop Hope Hooray dance workshop on Jan. 29 at the shell building in Morgantown.

"For us that's really cool because many of my students will get to meet the players, take pictures, and be on the video created by WVU's media department," Brosnihan said.

"We hope everyone will get their pink on and attend the game on Feb. 18, to enjoy an evening of athleticism and activism, a winning combination for women in sports and life," she said.

Dance workshops to learn the halftime show are being held at her shop on Sunday, Jan. 22, from 4 to 5:30 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 31, 7 to 8 p.m., and Sunday, Jan. 29, from 4 to 6 p.m., and then at the shell building on Sunday, Feb. 12, from 4 to 6 p.m.

Brosnihan noted that Bethany (Savage) Hammer, Washington Redskins cheerleader and WVU alumna, will help teach the dance as well as perform with the group.

"Bethany was a student of mine for more than 12 years, and working with her on this project is a lot of fun," said Brosnihan. "She is an inspiration to all our students who are participating in the dance, as well as those from West Virginia and the tri-state area.

Registration for the event is available at hoophopehooray.com.

Scheffel Records Upset Of Highly Ranked Spartan

Former wrestling standout at Southern High School George "Brutus" Scheffel, a redshirt freshman member of the West Virginia University wrestling team, upset nationally ranked Dan Osterman of Michigan State in East Lansing, Mich., on Saturday to help the Mountaineers defeat the Spartans, 23-12.

Scheffel recorded a 9-6 decision over Osterman, who came into the match ranked 23rd in the country in the 149-pound division.

Scheffel fell behind early in the match, 4-1, but was able to rally in the second period by converting three takedowns, which gave him an 8-6 advantage. He was then awarded an escape point in the third period to seal the victory.

"It felt great to get to avenge the loss I had against Osterman at the Reno Tournament of Champions," said Scheffel. "Most of the points he had in the first period were from my mistakes, so I just tried to stay after him. As a team, we had momentum heading into my match, but we had even more after I was able to get a win."

Scheffel, a 2010 graduate of Southern High School and a four-time Maryland state champion, currently has a 15-9 personal record with the Mountaineers. He was sidelined for the entire 2010-11 season because of a broken leg and was thus redshirted coming into the current season.

Scheffel will be back in action this weekend when the Mountaineers host Bloomsburg and Clarion in a tri-match.

Supan was the driver and Stannard a passenger in a car that was stopped by Garrett County sheriff's deputies in July for a speeding violation. After a drug-detection dog gave a positive alert, the vehicle was searched and various drug and drug paraphernalia items were seized.

In an unrelated case, Zane Aaron Kisner, 41, Oakland, pleaded guilty to driving under the influence of alcohol per se. Related charges were dismissed upon the plea. Sherbin then sentenced Kisner to three months in the Garrett County Jail, which was suspended.

He was placed on probation, with conditions that include completing alcohol counseling and paying fines and costs totaling $445.

Kisner was charged by deputies with the Garrett County Sheriff's Office last August after his vehicle was stopped for traffic and equipment violations. Based on his observations and the results of field sobriety tests, the deputy arrested Kisner.

Also last week in Circuit Court, Robert Hengust Stewart, 29, Oakland, pleaded guilty to driving while impaired by alcohol. Sherbin granted probation before judgment to Stewart and placed him on one year of probation. Fines and costs totaling $425 were imposed.

In June 2011, Stewart was charged by a Maryland State Police trooper who stopped the truck Stewart was driving for an equipment violation. Based on observations and the results of field sobriety tests, Stewart was arrested.

Also last week, charges of DUI and related violations against Robert Eugene Elliott, 64, Cumberland, were placed on the stet (inactive) docket in Circuit Court. Elliott was advised that the charges will remain in this status if he abides with all requirements of the Motor Vehicle Administration and drives only when validly licensed and in accordance with any other conditions imposed by MVA.

In January 2011, sheriff's deputies responded to the parking lot of a local business for a suspected intoxicated driver. They met with Elliott and charged him after determining he was under the influence at the time.

In an unrelated case, charges of possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia against James Milton Tucker, 55, Oakland, were dismissed. The state's attorney said there were "evidentiary issues" with witnesses appearing, and the charges did not warrant further consideration.

Tucker was charged after co-workers found a pill bottle with a small quantity of marijuana in a vehicle Tucker regularly used. Sheriff's deputies investigated.

In another proceeding, child abuse and sex offenses against Sherwood Stanford Solomon, 60, Oakland, were dismissed by the state in court last week. Citing evidentiary issues, the state's attorney indicated her office and the Department of Social Services would continue to monitor the situation with the alleged victim in the case.

Solomon was charged by Garrett County sheriff's investigators upon information and evidence received during an investigation last June.

Pa. Driver Sentenced To 18 Months For Possession Charge

A Pennsylvania man was sentenced to 18 months in the Garrett County Jail by Judge Leonard J. Eiswert after being found guilty on a possession not marijuana charge.

Maryland State Police responded to a minor single-vehicle accident along Rt. 42 in August. Winegrove was reportedly found to be hiding a bag of cocaine in his mouth when deputies were investigating the accident. He was also allegedly found to be in possession of a quantity of marijuana, as well as paraphernalia. He was not prosecuted on possession of marijuana and two possession of paraphernalia charges.

In other court news, Lenora Marie Green, 52, Grantsville, was given a probation before judgment (PBJ) verdict on a failure to obey a lawful order charge. She was sentenced to 30 days suspended and fined $500, of which $400 was suspended. She was also placed on one year of unsupervised probation. Green was arrested by Maryland State Police in September after she was reportedly involved in an incident in Grantsville involving alcohol. He was not prosecuted on possession of not marijuana, and possession of paraphernalia.

Rebecca Margaret Guthrie, 41, Accident, was given a PBJ verdict on a confinement of an unattended child charge and sentenced to one day of unsupervised probation and fined $100. She reportedly left her 7-year-old home alone without supervision. She was arrested by Garrett County sheriff's deputies in September. Guthrie was not prosecuted on a contributing to the condition of a child charge.

Aaron Crisp Leatherwood, 22, Westminster, was given a PBJ verdict on a possession of paraphernalia charge and placed on one day of unsupervised probation and fined $100. He was stropped in July by MSP and found to be in possession of a quantity of Ecstasy, Adderall, and hash, as well as a marijuana grinder and a smoking pipe. He was not prosecuted on a possession not marijuana charge.

Christopher S. Porfido, 25, Branchville, N.J., and Justin S. Passafaro, 24, McAfee, N.J., were each given a PBJ on possession of paraphernalia charges and sentenced to one day of unsupervised probation and fined $100. They were arrested in July by Garrett County sheriff's deputies after police reportedly found a quantity of marijuana and two smoking pipes in their vehicle during a traffic stop. They was not prosecuted on possession of marijuana charges.

Terry Andrew Harsh, 44, Eglon, W.Va, was given a stet verdict on a second-degree assault charge that stemmed from a domestic dispute on Oak Street, Oakland, investigated by GC sheriff's deputies in September. He was ordered to have no contact with the victim.

Alan Lee Pingley, 31, Terra Alta, W.Va. was given a stet verdict on second-degree assault and theft less than $1,000 charges that stemmed from a domestic dispute at a Frick's Crossing Road home investigated by GC sheriff's deputies in August. He was ordered to have no violent contact with the victim.

Jeffrey Eugene Worek, 20, and Conor Langdon Nash, 20, both of Pennington, N.J., were each given a stet verdict on possession of marijuana charges that stemmed from a traffic stop by MSP in July. They were ordered to complete 40 hours of community service.

Scott Anthony Bowman, 31, Accident, was found not guilty on a second-degree assault charge that stemmed from a July domestic dispute at an Accident home investigated by MSP.

FTC TEAMS WIN BIG IN ANNAPOLIS – Garrett County's 4-H and GEARS sponsored FIRST Tech Challenge (FTC) Robotics teams rose above all others once again at the Maryland FTC Qualifying Tournament at the USA Naval Academy in Annapolis this past weekend. G-FORCE Team 2818 went undefeated throughout the tournament to earn the Winning Alliance Award trophy, along with their sister team, the 4-H Techno Clovers. During the semi-final round, pictured above, G-FORCE raised two crates to 81" and Techno Clovers raised one crate to 93" using their scissor-lift robots. Drive teams and spectators look on as the referee attempts to measure the height of the basket at the top of Techno Clovers' scissor lift. Drivers for Techno Clovers are Derrick Maust, Kendrick Bender, and Eric Beitzel. Drivers for G-FORCE are Alex Miske, Andrew Hauser, and Levi Lantz. This alliance score of 437 broke this season's highest FTC score in the country of 254. G-FORCE also won the Inspire Award, which is the most prestigious FTC award, and is given to the team that "truly embodied the challenge" of the FTC program. For its robot design, Techno Clovers received the PTC Design Award, which recognizes design elements of the robot that are both functional and aesthetic. Both teams were finalists for several other awards. The teams and their families also met with Senator George Edwards and Delegate Wendell Beitzel (below), were introduced during the legislative session, and toured the historical Maryland State House. The groups also toured the USA Naval Academy Engineering Department and visited the Naval Museum. The teams presented Edwards and Beitzel with a gift basket full of Garrett County products to thank them for taking time to talk with them and for setting up a tour for the families. In the front row, from left, are Miske, Robbie Browning, Justin Maust, Tim Gotsch, E. Beitzel, Jeffery Bender, and Melody White. DNR Will Give Results Of Survey On Brook Trout

The Maryland Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Fisheries Service will host an open house from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 4, to present the results of the brook trout population study in the Savage River watershed.

Field research by scientists at DNR and the University of Maryland's Center for Environmental Studies (UMCES) Appalachian Lab has shown declining trends in Savage River brook trout populations. Dr. Robert Hilderbrand of UMCES and DNR Fisheries biologists will be on-hand to share the results and discuss the current status of Savage River trout populations. Visitors will be able to ask questions and offer their thoughts.

The open house will take place at Allegany College's Continuing Education Building, located at 12401 Willowbrook Road in Cumberland. Visitors are encouraged to stop by at their convenience. According to a DNR spokesperson, it should not take more than a half hour to observe and process the information. Interested citizens may also view the information and offer comments online at dnr.Maryland.gov/fisheries.

Ruth Enlow Offers Online Auto Database

The Auto Repair Reference Center, an online database containing a comprehensive collection of automobile repair reference information, is available on the Ruth Enlow Library's web site: www.relib.net. The database contains information on most major manufactures of domestic and imported vehicles, covering more than 37,000 vehicles from 1954 to the present.

ARRC can be accessed from a library computer or remotely. From within the library, users can go to www.relib.net, click the "Research" tab and then the "Fix-It" button, before selecting "EBSCO Auto Repair."

Users accessing the database remotely should follow the same steps, except that they will be asked for a patron ID number (library card number) after selecting "EBSCO Auto Repair." Users should enter the 14-digit card number (with no spaces) in the field provided.

Brochures about this free service are available at the Ruth Enlow Library location. Questions may be addressed to the Oakland reference desk at 301-334-3996, ext. 100.

Garrett Trails Rep To Speak At G'ville Business Meeting

The Greater Grantsville Business Association has scheduled its upcoming meeting for Wednesday, Jan. 25, at 8 p.m. The event will be at Penn Alps. Guest speakers for this event will be representatives of the Garrett Trails organization.

In 1999, the Garrett County commissioners requested formation of a task force to create a county trails plan. With the early efforts of the trails task force, according to a spokesperson, came the realization that a permanent organization was needed for the work of trial planning, development, and promotion.

In 2008, Garrett Trails was founded as a non-profit organization, with the expressed mission of "developing a well-used network of outstanding quality trails that provide access to Garrett County's historic, municipal, and environmental treasures and link to trails outside the county."

In 2011, Garrett Trails finalized a study for a 150-mile comprehensive trail within the county. Garrett Trails engages a committed volunteer board of 21 professionals in the development of trail plans and progress.

The organization is funded in great part through donations and fundraisers such as the 10th annual Taste of Garrett (June 18). According to a spokesperson, Garrett Trails' accomplishments currently include over 2,500 hours of volunteer time in Garrett County, an ARC grant for its 150-mile trail study, the creation of county trail maps, and trail construction.

Those interested in further information concerning the Garrett Trails organization may visit www.garretttrails.org.

Seminar On How To Take Online Sewing Class Slated At GC

"How to Take an Online Sewing Class" is the title of a one-evening seminar offered by the Continuing Education and Workforce Development Division of Garrett College on Monday, Jan. 23, at 7 p.m.

This session, instructed by Michelle Umlauf, was designed to familiarize people with the process of using a home computer to enjoy the benefits of taking her sewing classes without leaving home.

Umlauf will explain and demonstrate the equipment and methods used to access her online classes, also referred to as webinars. Each of her webinar "classes" will be recorded, so if one cannot participate at the scheduled time, the class will be available via recording.

To attend a future sewing webinar, the following things will be needed: access to a high speed Internet connection (satellite works fine), a laptop or personal computer, access to a cell phone or landline as a backup, and a headset for the laptop for optimal audio.

It is recommended that people attending the "How to Take an Online Sewing Class" seminar bring a laptop, head set, and cell phone to the class in order to work through any technical challenges.

Anyone who registers for this seminar and signs up that evening for future webinar classes will receive a discount off the registration fee. Those registering for three in-person classes will receive a discount of 50 percent off the least expensive class.

For more information or to register for this class, persons may call 301-387-3069.

Ask The Everyday Scientist

HIGGS BOSON (PART II)
by Dr. Tom Sheahen

Q. The Higgs Boson is the center of attention in physics research currently. Why is this so important?

A. Last week I concluded by saying that physicists want the Higgs Boson to be found, and the sooner the better. That's why it's in the news nowadays.

During the 20th century, tremendous advances in physics took place: General Relativity and Quantum Mechanics in the first third, Quantum ElectroDynamics and Quantum ChromoDynamics in the second third. Today we refer to "The Standard Model," meaning that collection of theory and equations that provide a fairly thorough description of the forces in the known universe.

But "fairly thorough" also means "not complete," and perhaps the most persistent philosophical question is "Why is there something instead of nothing?" The physics-based question that expresses the same idea is "Why is there mass?" or "What causes particles to have mass?" We don't exactly know, but our theories are getting better all the time.

There is good agreement that atoms are made out of electrons, protons, and neutrons; and those in turn are made up of combinations of quarks, a class of particles more fundamental than protons and neutrons. Quarks come in families, with different values of charge and spin, but also some additional properties in quantum dimensions, with names like "color." Quarks never appear alone, but only in certain combinations. The mass of each particle is determined by details of how each combination forms.

The theory that brings all the quarks together into an understandable array is called Supersymmetry (SUSY). This theory is based upon symmetry principles, which are found again and again in nature; the equations have great elegance and mathematical beauty, and physicists look at the theory and say, "Of course! How could it be any other way?"

The notion that mathematics underlies all of nature is a very appealing belief, held by nearly all physicists. It's our most essential guideline. Propose a theory that violates one of the basic symmetry principles, and your theory gets trashed instantly. Nevertheless, there is a strong principle of caution:

Over centuries, experience has shown that it's better to do experiments than to trust theory, because there may be surprises hidden beneath any initial theory. Aristotle's physics is an excellent example of how easy it is to overlook something (friction); nearly two millenia passed before somebody (Galileo) did an experiment to show Aristotle's reasoning was incorrect. No theory, however beautiful mathematically, can survive a contrary experimental result.

Over in the adjacent branch of physics known as String Theory, theorists of today are doing all sorts of beautiful math, but the lack of experimental predictions leaves that theory unconfirmed, at risk of derision by critics.

In SUSY, by knowing that certain particles exist, other "partner-particles" are predicted to exist, and their masses should be comparatively large. So far the theoretical predictions have been vindicated by observation of successively heavier particles, the masses of which fit nicely into the anticipated patterns. Part of that theory asserts the existence of something called the Higgs Field, and with it the very massive Higgs Boson. It plays a pivotal position in the associations among particles expected under SUSY, causing quarks to have mass. Peter Higgs proposed the idea in the 1960s, but without experimental confirmation, it remains speculation after nearly half a century.

The question naturally arises "Why is it so important to go looking for heavier particles?" The reason is because detecting such theoretically predicted particles is the one way to confirm or deny the validity of the underlying theory. Supersymmetry theory has great appeal on mathematical grounds, but is it really the correct description of the forces in the universe?

The realm of theoretical particle physics is not a sure thing, by any means. One of the possible outcomes is that the Higgs Boson exists at such a high energy that the large hadron collider can't reach it. Another is that there may be additional fields and particles beyond the single-field Higgs model. Then again, maybe the Higgs Boson doesn't exist after all, and a different theory is needed.

There is a lot at stake here. Finding the Higgs Boson would greatly enhance the credibility of SUSY theory, reinforcing our commitment to a mathematical description of nature.

Occasionally the Higgs Boson has been termed the "God Particle." That title is the result of a joking quip by Leon Lederman about 25 years ago. He was head of FermiLab in those days, which at the time was the world's most powerful particle accelerator. Lederman remarked that authors always managed to sell more books by finding a way to include the word "God" in their titles, and mused that he might be able to get more funding by announcing they were looking for the "god particle." That name caught on. It has absolutely no theological significance whatever.

Dr. Sheahen lives at Deep Creek Lake and has taught physics at Garrett College. Persons wishing to submit questions for this column may e-mail them to newsroom@therepublicannews.com.

SCHEFFEL ACCEPTS POSITION WITH GOP CENTRAL COMMITTEE – The Garrett County Republican Central Committee recently met to appoint a person to fill the vacancy in its ranks that resulted from the death of Arzella Parsons. "I'm glad this opportunity has been made available to me. I feel that everyone needs to be active in their political affiliation in order to make a difference, and I look forward to working with the other members of the committee to achieve that goal," stated Scheffel. KEEP YOUR FAMILY SAFE – PREVENT CARBON MONOXIDE POISONING

by Lynn Little, Extension Educator, Family and Consumer Sciences University of Maryland Extension

You can't see or smell carbon monoxide, but at high levels it can kill a person in minutes. Carbon monoxide (CO) is the most common cause of poisoning death in the United States, often caused by fuel burning appliances that are not functioning properly. Approximately 500 deaths and 15,000 visits to the emergency room occur annually because of unintentional CO poisoning. Older adults over age 65 are especially vulnerable to unintentional CO poisoning because of their high frequency of pre-existing medical conditions.

Prevention is the key to avoiding carbon monoxide poisoning. Have your fuel-burning appliances, including gas and oil furnaces, gas water heaters, gas ranges and ovens, gas dryers, gas or kerosene space heaters, fireplaces, and wood stoves inspected by a trained professional at the beginning of every heating season.

Choose appliances that vent their fumes to the outside whenever possible, have them properly installed, and maintain them according to manufacturers' instructions.

If you cannot avoid using an unvented gas or kerosene space heater, carefully follow the cautions that come with the device. Use the proper fuel and keep doors to the rest of the house open. Crack a window to ensure enough air for ventilation and proper fuel-burning.

Don't idle the car in the garage, even if the garage door to the outside is open. Fumes can build up very quickly in the garage and living area of your home.

Don't ever use a charcoal grill indoors, even in the fireplace.

Don't sleep in any room with an unvented gas or kerosene space heater.

Don't use any gasoline-powered engines (mowers, weed trimmers, snow blowers, chain saws, small engines, or generators) in enclosed spaces. Never use portable generators on balconies or near doors, vents, or windows. Never use portable generators near where you and your family sleep.

Know the symptoms for CO poisoning. Symptoms for exposure to low concentrations of CO include mild headache and breathlessness when doing moderate exercise. Continued or acute exposure can lead to flu-like symptoms, including severe headaches, dizziness, tiredness, nausea, confusion, irritability, and impaired judgment, memory, and coordination. Don't ignore symptoms, particularly if more than one person is feeling them. You could lose consciousness and die if you do nothing.

If you experience symptoms you think could be from CO poisoning, get fresh air immediately. Open doors and windows, turn off stoves, ovens, heaters, and similar appliances, and leave the house. Call the poison center immediately at 1-800-222-1222. The poison experts will let you know if you need to seek further medical attention.

Half of all unintentional CO poisoning deaths could be prevented with the use of CO alarms. Unfortunately, less than one third of American homes have them installed. Install a CO alarm on every floor of your home and within hearing range of each sleeping area. Carefully follow manufacturers' instructions for their placement, use, and maintenance. Unlike smoke alarms, CO alarms may expire after several years.

American FFA Degree Awarded To B. Rodeheaver

Bradley Rodeheaver, a member of the North Garrett FFA chapter, received his American FFA Degree at the 84th National FFA Convention recently in Indianapolis, Ind. Earning this degree means that Rodeheaver is one of a select group of individuals recognized for years of academic and professional excellence.

The American FFA Degree recognizes demonstrated leadership ability and outstanding achievements in agriculture business, production, processing, or service programs.

Rodeheaver is the son of Bob and Joyce Rodeheaver, Accident. He has raised beef and swine for the Garrett County Fair for the past 10 years. He has been active in the North Garrett FFA Chapter, where he served as president, vice president, and treasurer. He also competed in many judging competitions through FFA.

He was a member of the Oak Hill 4-H Club, where he served as president and treasurer.

Rodeheaver is currently a student at West Virginia University in pursuit of an agribusiness management and rural development degree. He hopes to stay active in beef production and agriculture.

Enrollment Set For Area DCP, ACRE Programs

USDA Garrett and Allegany Farm Service agency (FSA) county executive director (CED) Michael R. Kozier reminds producers that enrollment for the Average Crop Revenue Election (ACRE) Program or the traditional Direct and Counter-cyclical Program (DCP) begins Jan. 23 and runs through June 1.

"Farmers in Garrett and Allegany counties who are interested in enrolling in these programs need to add this important deadline to their list of 'must do' jobs," Kozier said. "Producers should contact the local county office to set up appointments."

Annual contracts are required to be signed to receive program benefits. All signatures of producers receiving a share in DCP and ACRE payments are required by June 1.

For more information about DCP and ACRE programs or other FSA programs, persons may contact the county FSA office or visit the state FSA web site at www.fsa.usda.gov.

PRODUCERS REMINDED OF DEADLINE FOR LIVESTOCK ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Livestock owners who had disaster related losses in 2011 are reminded to visit the Preston County Farm Service Agency Office before January 30 to file an application for payment through the Livestock Indemnity Program (LIP) or the Livestock Forage Disaster Program (LFP).

The Livestock Indemnity Program (LIP) provides assistance to eligible livestock owners and contract growers for eligible livestock deaths in excess of normal mortality because of adverse weather, including losses due to floods, blizzards, disease, wildfires, extreme heat, and extreme cold.

Producers must have filed a notice of loss by the earlier of 30 calendar days of when the loss of livestock was apparent or December 29, 2011. A notice of loss can be reported to the FSA office by phone, fax, or e-mail. Eligible livestock deaths must have occurred in the calendar year for which benefits are being requested. An application for payment must be filed no later than 30 calendar days after the end of the calendar year in which the loss of livestock occurred. For 2011 losses, the application for payment must be filed no later than January 30. Late-filed applications will be disapproved.

The LPF provides financial assistance to livestock producers who suffered grazing losses because of a qualifying drought or fire. Qualifying droughts will be determined based on U.S Drought Monitor ratings. Grazing losses from fire are only applicable to rangelands managed by a federal agency. Applicants must submit their completed application and all documentation no later than 30 calendar days after the end of the calendar year in which the grazing loss occurred. For 2011 losses, the application for payment must be filed no later than January 30. Late-filed applications will be disapproved.

To be eligible for Livestock Forage Disaster Assistance Program (LFP) producers must: have certified all farm/ranch acreage, have previously obtained crop insurance or enrolled in the Noninsured Disaster Assistance Program, provide verifiable documentation of produced/purchased forage or feedstuffs, and provide documentation of beginning and ending livestock inventories. To assist producers, a farm visit can be arranged to assess the eligible disaster condition and loss, which may suffice for some of the required documentation. A measurement service fee will be charged.

Note: Eligible farmers and ranchers who meet the definition of "Socially Disadvantaged," "Limited Resource," or "Beginning Farmer or Rancher" do not have to meet the crop insurance requirement.

To obtain additional information on the Livestock Disaster Assistance programs, producers are invited to visit the Preston County FSA office, located in the Corner Mall of the Kingwood Plaza, or telephone 304-329-1923.

Strange BUT TRUE

• During this election season, it might be good to keep in mind the following sage observation, made beloved humorist Will Rogers: "The American people are generous and will forgive almost any weakness with the exception of stupidity."
• Mountain goats aren't actually goats; they're antelopes.
• Those who study such things say that a mosquito flaps its wings 1,000 times every second.
• If you've ever been to London -- or if you've seen a movie that was set there -- you might remember the iconic black taxicabs that are ubiquitous in that city; the high roofs set them apart from other vehicles on the streets. The headroom offered did once serve a purpose. When the cars were originally designed, top hats were still de rigueur for a properly dressed gentleman, and the high roofs allowed a man so attired to enter and leave the vehicle without knocking off his hat.
• You might be surprised to learn that some ants can live more than 15 years.
• Yes, there's a name for it. The next time you're opening a bottle of wine, take a moment to consider the spiral part that is inserted into the cork: It's known as a worm. • Washington is the only U.S. state named for a president.

Thought for the Day: "Television news is like a lightning flash. It makes a loud noise, lights up everything around it, leaves everything else in darkness and then is suddenly gone." -- Hodding Carter

Moments in time
THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 28, 1855, the Panama Railway, which carried thousands of unruly miners to California via the dense jungles of Central America, dispatches its first train across the Isthmus of Panama. The track went through Panamanian jungle roughly along the route followed by the present-day canal.
• On Jan. 24, 1908, the Boy Scouts movement begins in England with the publication of the first installment of Robert Baden-Powell's Scouting for Boys. In September 1909, 10,000 Scouts showed up at the first national Boy Scout meeting in London.
• On Jan. 27, 1926, John Logie Baird, a Scottish inventor, gives the first public demonstration of a true television system in London. The "televisor" used mechanical rotating disks to scan moving images into electronic impulses, which were transmitted by cable to a screen.
• On Jan. 29, 1936, the U.S. Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., elects its first members: Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Honus Wagner, Christy Matthewson and Walter Johnson. The Hall of Fame has elected 296 individuals in all.
• On Jan. 23, 1968, the U.S. intelligence-gathering ship Pueblo is seized by the North Korean navy and charged with spying and violating territorial waters. Negotiations to free the 83-man crew of the U.S. ship took nearly a year. The crewmen reported horrific treatment at the hands of the North Koreans.
• On Jan. 26, 1979, "The Dukes of Hazard," a television comedy about two good-old boys in the rural South and their souped-up 1969 Dodge Charger known as General Lee, debuts on CBS. The show was known for its car chases, stunts and General Lee, which had an orange paint job and a Confederate flag across its roof.
• On Jan. 25, 1980, on arrival at Tokyo's Narita International Airport, Beatle Paul McCartney is found to be carrying nearly half a pound of marijuana in his baggage -- an amount he assured Japanese authorities was intended solely for his personal use. Facing a seven-year prison sentence, McCartney was instead released and quickly deported from Japan.

Q: I have a Pez dispenser of Walt Disney's "Goofy." I purchased it during the 1970s and now would like to sell it -- if the price is right. -- Bill, Palm Coast, Fla.
A: Your Pez dispenser came in two designs, one with ears that moved, the other with the ears fixed. The swinging ears model generally sells for about $30, the other $15 to $20.

Q: I have a set of dishes, service for six, acquired during the 1950s. Each piece was available in boxes of Duz soap powder. They are identified as being the "Golden Wheat" pattern, and each is trimmed in 22k gold. Are they worth anything with the gold trim? -- Donna, Lyons, N.Y.
A: The gold trim contains such a small amount of the precious metal that it doesn't add much to the value. Dishes were popular premiums throughout the 1930s, '40s and '50s and often were found in the containers of oats, cereals and other popular kitchen products. "Dish Nights" at movie theaters also were popular. Between features, lucky ticket holders won dishes and other prizes.

Q: My family owned and operated a service station in New Mexico during the 1940s. While clearing out a storage locker recently, I found a small collection of gas-station memorabilia, including vintage oil cans, road maps and several interesting old signs. How can I determine if they are worth keeping? -- Carl, Rio Rancho, NM
A: One of the better references is "Warman's Gas Station Collectibles: Identification and Price Guides" by Mark F. Moran (Krause, $24.99). Moran's guide features more than 1,800 illustrations in full-color of gas-station cans, bottles, signs, pumps, globes and other related items, in addition to current retail prices. This is a fun book that should be helpful.

Make Someone's Day

When was the last time someone beamed at you and said, "You made my day!"? Whatever's going on, it is important to realize that we never know when we might be making a life-altering impact with a small kindness or an extra consideration. God may be using us for His particular purpose. Would you like to learn more about God working through you? Worship at His House this week, it will make your day!

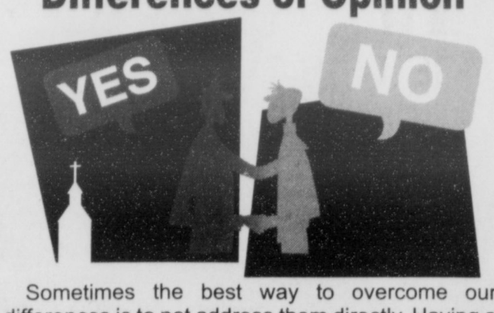
Getting Along Despite Differences of Opinion



Sometimes the best way to overcome our differences is to not address them directly. Having a conversation does not have to have a point, and certainly doesn't require that we get the other side to agree. Even if we end up disagreeing on some important point or points, we can usually agree to disagree in a more agreeable way if everybody feels like they've been heard. If we came together to discuss theology and we have serious differences of opinion we will probably not have a very civil conversation. But, if we come together to just converse with each other about whatever might come up and can be civil in our general conversations, we are more likely to have civil conversations about the theological matters which we might disagree about. Another very important thing to facilitate civil conversations is to try to meet our interlocutor on the basis of their individuality rather than pigeonholing them into some category. When liberals categorize their interlocutors as "evangelical Christians," for instance, they are likely to overlook the huge differences possible among individuals who consider themselves evangelical Christians. Forcing people to agree with you is a kind of violation of their God-given right to come to their own conclusions. We don't need for there to be complete consensus on most of the moral, religious or political issues which we disagree about, but we do need for us to be able to live together despite those disagreements.

"Be completely humble and gentle; be patient, bearing with one another in love. Make every effort to keep the unity of the Spirit through the bond of peace."

Ephesians 4: 2-3

Learning Links Offers Special Ed. Resources

Maryland families and educators seeking early intervention services and special education information now have an online resource at their fingertips through a new web site: MarylandLearningLinks.com.

Created through a partnership of the Maryland State Department of Education's Division of Special Education/Early Intervention Services, and the Johns Hopkins University School of Education's Center for Technology in Education, MarylandLearningLinks.org is a web site which provides information about the Individualized Family Services Plan and Individualized Education Program processes, family involvement, and other topics and trends related to special education. The site features a number of interactive tools, blogs, and newsletters aimed at administrators, teachers, service providers, and parents.

"We know that students thrive when their support system is equipped with the best information," said Bernard Sadusky, Maryland interim state superintendent of schools. "MarylandLearningLinks.org provides users with critical ideas and resources, all free of charge and available just a click away."

Developed through Maryland's State Improvement Grant, the site offers helpful information for families and educators working with children with disabilities, from birth through age 21. The web site offers users the benefit of an online community. Parents and educators may join, participate, and share in an ongoing conversation, all designed to strengthen student learning.

"We're proud that our partnership with MSDE's Division of Special Education and Early Intervention has produced a premier destination for educational resources," said Jackie Nunn, director of the Center for Technology in Education.

"From its content to design, Maryland Learning Links serves as the bridge between research and practice, linking general and special educators, parents, and professionals. We look forward to teachers from across the state sharing their resources and advice, and for parents to connect with professionals to better understand and inform the process and practice of education their children."

Record Number Of Candidates File For Sixth District Congressional Race

by Madeline Marshall
Capital News Service

The race for Maryland's 6th Congressional District will be a crowded one, with eight Republicans and five Democrats filing by last Wednesday's deadline.

The candidates are attempting to unseat incumbent Rep. Roscoe Bartlett, R-Frederick, who has never won a primary election with less than 70 percent of the vote since his first election in 1992. But he has never faced as many challengers.

Even with eight Republican candidates, including state Sen. David R. Brinkley, R-Carroll, and Delegate Kathy Afzali, R-Frederick, in the race, 85-year-old Bartlett says he's not worried.

Many were expecting Bartlett to retire, but he is committed to keeping his seat.

"Every day is one day closer to retirement. I can't tell you if that's weeks or months from now, but obviously it's years. I'm in this race," Bartlett said.

Others running include Republicans Robert Coblentz of Williamsport, Robin Ficker of Bethesda, Joseph Krysztoforski of Frederick, Brandon Orman Rippeon of Bethesda, and Peter James of Germantown, with Democrats Sen. Rob Garagiola, D-Montgomery, John Delaney of Potomac, Milad Pooran of Jefferson, Charles Bailey of Sharpsburg, and Ron Little of Gaithersburg.

Maryland GOP Chairman Alex Mooney had formed an exploratory committee and weighed running, but he ultimately decided not to and endorsed Bartlett.

Former Montgomery County councilwoman Duchy Trachtenberg entered the race early, but withdrew on Jan. 4 because of illness.

"It's going to be a competitive race among both Democrats and Republicans," said political science professor Michael Cain of the Center for the Study of Democracy at St. Mary's College of Maryland.

The large number of Republican candidates "does say something about the Republican Party now.... There are a lot of candidates for president too," Cain said.

Some candidates, like Garagiola and Delaney, are from parts of Montgomery County that were in District 8 until this year's redistricting process, which put roughly half of Montgomery County in the 6th District.

"I would not be running in District 8 because I think Chris Van Hollen is a terrific congressman. I'm a Democrat, and now, based on the redistricting process, it's an open race," Delaney, an entrepreneur, said.

Redistricting, which occurs every 10 years based on census data, has been controversial this year, with lawsuits claiming racial discrimination and gerrymandering. Because Democrats dominate state government, their party drew the new congressional district maps.

"I was so mad about the redistricting that I decided wasn't going to let them win, and I jumped in the race," Afzali said.

She said she believes the 6th District was split for Democratic political gain and has fought against the plan. She hasn't ruled out a petition campaign to stop the redistricting plan approved by Gov. Martin O'Malley.

"Holding this seat for the Republicans is crucial," Afzali said.

Ficker agrees that Democrats drew the 6th District for their own political gain.

"I think the district was drawn to put gas-tax Garagiola in Congress," said Ficker, who lives in Montgomery County and sees the redistricting as a chance to run in an otherwise Democratic area.

"I think the districts were made more fair and representative. It's almost a 50/50 district. So it is a district where you have to fight to win and no one is going to get it for free," said Garagiola's campaign manager Sean Rankin.

Other candidates see it as a challenge, but better for the voters.

"It's going to force all the candidates to talk about the issues instead of people voting by default," said Republican candidate and systems analyst Robert Coblentz.

"It makes it more interesting and it's really better for the voters. They have more options," he added.

Eighteen Vying For Seat Held By Sen. Cardin

by Robert Baird
Capital News Service

Eighteen candidates – eight Democrats and 10 Republicans – emerged to challenge incumbent Sen. Ben Cardin, D-Md., by last Wednesday's primary election filing deadline.

Cardin, 68, a relatively popular incumbent, was elected in 2006 after a long career in both Annapolis and Washington. He has been vocal in the Senate on environmental and fiscal issues.

State Sen. Anthony Muse, D-Prince George's, and former Secret Service agent Daniel Bongino are among the more prominent candidates in the hunt.

Cardin faces eight opponents for the Democratic primary: Raymond Blagmon of Upper Marlboro, J.P. Cusick of Hollywood, Chris Garner of Severna Park, Ralph Jaffe of Baltimore, Blaine Taylor of Joppa, Ed Tinus of Whaleyville, Lih Young of Rockville, and Muse.

Ten candidates have filed for the Republican nomination: Joseph Alexander of Harford County, Daniel Bongino of Severna Park, Robert Broadus of Clinton, William Capps Jr. of Laurel, Richard Douglas of Bladensburg, Rick Hoover of Glen Burnie, David Jones of Baltimore, John Kimble of Beltsville, Brian Vaeth of Baltimore, and Corrogan Vaughn of Baltimore.

Cardin has already collected $2.4 million this election cycle through the end of September 2011, according to the Federal Election Commission. No other candidate even comes close to his totals. He also has a long record as a Maryland legislator and congressman.

"Cardin has been a champion for federal employees and he's brought a lot of money in for transportation upgrades," said Sue Walitsky, Cardin's national communications director.

A recent Gonzales Poll says over a third of GOP voters would consider voting for Cardin.

One of the better known candidates considering a run decided to bow out. Eric Wargotz withdrew from the race this week, citing a lack of campaign funds. Wargotz, who ran against Sen. Barbara Mikulski in the 2010 race, said Maryland senators have displayed a lack of leadership on "The Hill."

"Cardin and Mikulski both have a history of not wanting to upset the apple cart or take a position," Wargotz said.

Michael Cain, director of the Center for Study of Democracy at St. Mary's College, said Muse's challenge is the greatest threat to Cardin. But Cain said Muse, a state senator and Prince George's County pastor, faces an uphill battle.

"He may have a lot of support in Prince George's County, but that's not the only place you have to win," he said.

Cain said he thinks the real challenge for Cardin lies in the primaries, but that he would have no trouble winning the general election if nominated.

"I'd be real surprised if the Republicans put a whole lot of money into [Maryland]. I just don't see it happening," he said.

Key Democrats have already thrown their support behind Cardin, including President Obama. Of the 33 senators up for re-election, 21 are sitting Democrats.

The Maryland primaries will be held April 3.

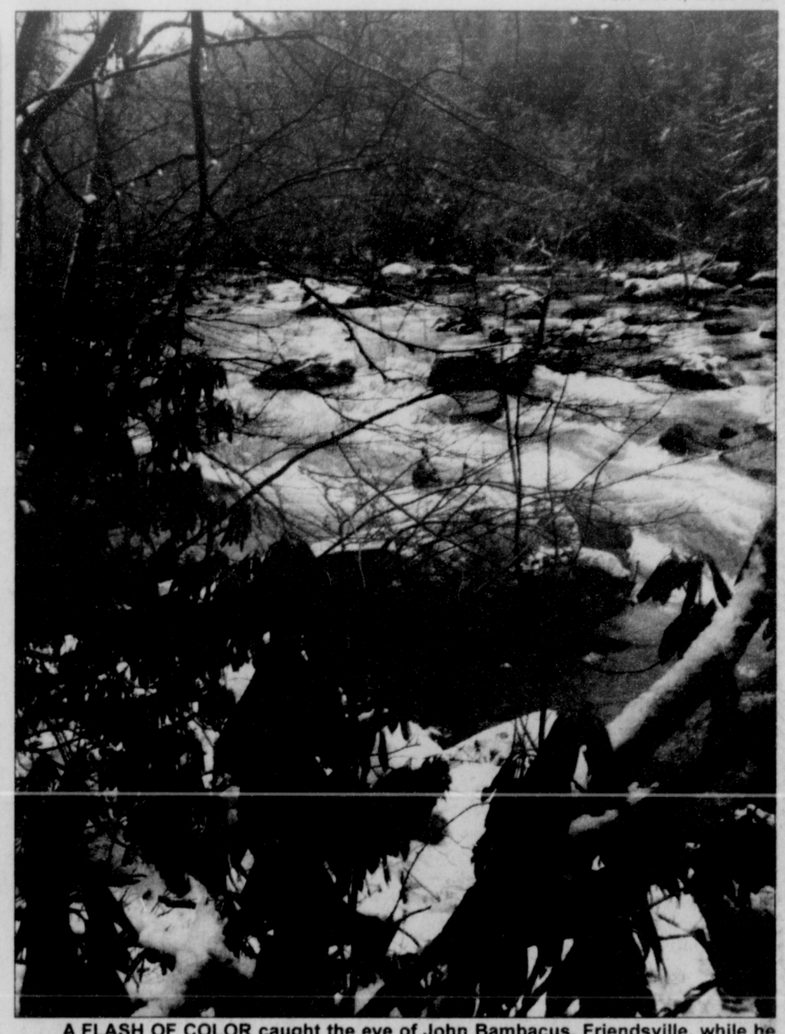
A CRYSTAL WONDERLAND – The mountaintop was encased in ice over the past weekend, with a significant ice storm taking place early Saturday morning that turned the county into crystal. And even though the sun shone throughout the day on Sunday, the ice remained, creating views in every direction that were nothing short of stunning. This photo was of course taken near the Oakland train station, with an iced red berry in the foreground. The forecast is calling for a mixed bag of ice and rain early this weekend, turning to all snow on Sunday. Photo by Lisa Rook.



A FLASH OF COLOR caught the eye of John Bambacus, Friendsville, while he was hiking along the Youghiogheny River just south of Friendsville on Saturday, and to his surprise he observed three kayakers ignoring the frigid temperatures and enjoying the elevated water levels of the Yough. He captured one of them "on film" with his cellphone. The unusual weather conditions for January in Garrett County continue, with warmer than normal temperatures and far less than normal snowfall. Winter, which seemingly has hardly begun, will likely begin to wind down within the next six weeks or so. Of course, the proverbial ground hog of Punxsutawney, Pa., may present a different forecast next Thursday...

Proposed Doubling Of Flush Tax Worries Some Legislators

by Ellen Stodola
Capital News Service

ANNAPOLIS – A number of legislators are concerned that Gov. Martin O'Malley's proposal to raise the flush tax from $2.50 to $5 a month to help clean up the Chesapeake Bay could be too much for constituents to handle, especially in a bad economy.

The flush tax, which raises funds for updates of wastewater treatment plants, as well as septic systems and stormwater management, costs each household a total of $30 a year. But O'Malley's proposal for the Bay Restoration Fund ties the fee to consumption, with $5 being the average that most people will pay per month. Those who use less water could pay less, but high-volume users could pay upwards of $60 a year.

Though many legislators agree that the Chesapeake Bay is a priority, they also have to consider what this would mean for Maryland residents.

"Believe me, I'm on the side of cleaning the bay up," said Delegate Jay Jacobs, R-Kent. "But it's going to be a very difficult year for me to vote for any increase."

Jacobs said he is not opposed to the fee, but based on feedback from his constituents, he doesn't feel that an increase is the right choice at this time.

Proponents of the increase argue that if the flush tax is not at least doubled, there are a number of wastewater treatment plants that would not have the same funding opportunities as others in the state. Some facilities have already been upgraded while others are waiting for necessary modifications, said Alison Prost, the Chesapeake Bay Foundation's Maryland executive director.

In addition to supporting O'Malley's plan, the Chesapeake Bay Foundation is calling for an additional doubling to $10 a month. This would allow jurisdictions to start better addressing the problem of stormwater, which is a serious

Board Of Ed. Holds Elementary School Closure Hearings

The Garrett County Board of Education recently held its public hearings for the potential closings of Kitzmiller and Dennett Road elementary schools. The hearing for Kitzmiller Elementary was held last Thursday (Jan. 19) in that school's multipurpose room, while the hearing for Dennett Road Elementary took place on Tuesday in the gymnasium of Southern High School – a venue chosen to accommodate the large crowd expected by the board.

Both events began with a presentation by Sue Waggoner, interim superintendent of schools. Those presentations showcased the fiscal problems faced by the county and the BOE, namely the trending loss of enrollment and Maryland's wealth formula, which ranks Garrett County as the state's fifth-wealthiest county despite its large number of students who qualify for free and reduced meals.

"This is like a grieving process as we're dealing with the potential loss of our schools," Waggoner said. "We're looking at every aspect of this situation while trying to make tough decisions."

Waggoner also talked about trying to attract some of Garrett County's 294 homeschooled students into the system through the use of technology and offerings in advanced-placement courses. This addition of students would potentially increase state funding, though, as Waggoner explained, this would require some support from lawmakers in Annapolis, as Maryland currently does not permit funding for part-time students.

Del. Beitzel Proposes Amendment To "Lock Down" Chesapeake Bay Fund

With the likelihood that the General Assembly will be asked to double, triple, or even quadruple fees paid by Maryland's citizens for Chesapeake Bay cleanup, Del. Wendell Beitzel filed House Bill 121. The bill would amend the Maryland State Constitution to prohibit, or "lock down," the transfer of funds from the two major sources of revenue for bay cleanup efforts in the state.

The Chesapeake Bay Restoration Fund was established in 2004 for the purpose of providing funds for bay cleanup, wastewater treatment plant upgrades, cover crop funds, and septic system upgrades. One of the sources of funding is an annual fee, which has popularly been called the "flush tax."

"Each year, Maryland's citizens are required to pay for cleanup of the Chesapeake Bay," Beitzel said. "This bill simply provides that if citizens are told that the fees they are paying are dedicated for bay restoration, then government should be required to use the funds only for this purpose."

During the 2011 General Assembly session, Gov. Martin O'Malley's budget transferred $290 million from the Bay Restoration Fund and the Chesapeake and Atlantic Coastal Bays' 2010 Trust Fund into the state's general fund. The funds are to be replenished with general obligations bonds, which require additional interest costs and limits the amount of bond funds available for other state capital projects, according to Beitzel.

"The stated needs for bay restoration far exceed available funding, and to raid the dedicated funding programs for other purposes is deplorable," Beitzel said. "These actions are a fundamental cause for the recommendation to double, triple or even quadruple the 'flush tax.' Now, the citizens of Maryland are expected to pay more to remedy the situation."

Man Arrested In Connection With Local Burglary

A Bloomington man was arrested by Garrett County sheriff's deputies on felony theft and burglary charges that stem from an investigation into a reported burglary that occurred Jan. 16.

Tyler Lee White, 20, was charged with first-degree burglary and felony theft. He reportedly broke into a Lee Road, Bloomington, home, where tools and a firearm were stolen. Most of the stolen items were recovered during the investigation. White was later taken before a District Court commissioner, who set his bond at $5,000.

Edwards, Beitzel Seek Increased School Funding

Sen. George C. Edwards (R-Dist. 1) and Del. Wendell R. Beitzel (R-Dist. 1A) announced yesterday that they will pursue a statewide legislative effort that would cap losses of state funding for K-12 education incurred by Garrett and Allegany counties.

Gov. Martin O'Malley's fiscal year 2013 budget includes a 5.5 percent cut in funding for Allegany County and an 11.8 percent cut in funding for Garrett County. This is on top of the approximately 6 percent cut that these two jurisdictions took in funding during the FY 2012 budget.

"The state really needs to look at how the wealth formula is computed," Edwards said. "This bill would be a benefit to Garrett and Allegany counties and potentially others if we can get it passed. It would also give the state time to study how we compute wealth for K-12 education and look at appropriate various changes to the formula."

This is the second year in a row that Garrett and Allegany counties have received the largest cuts in K-12 education funding for the state, the senator noted. The state's portion of education funding is based on a formula commonly referred to as the "wealth formula" and student enrollment. These two factors are used to calculate the money that is distributed statewide for the educational needs of the counties.

"The futures of the children of Garrett and Allegany counties are being jeopardized due to massive losses in state funding for education,"

OTT PRESENTING COMEDY – Moon Over Buffalo, a comedy by Ken Ludwig, will open next week with a "pay-what-you-can" dress rehearsal on Tuesday, Jan. 31, at 8 p.m., and the rest of the run from Feb. 1 to 5. The shows on Feb. 1-4 are at 8 p.m., and Sunday's presentation is at 2 p.m. Tickets for the Feb. 1, 2, and 5 shows are $8, and $10 for Feb. 3 and 4. Reservations are strongly encouraged for all performances and can be made by calling 301-334-5640, ext. 1. The plot involves Charlotte and George Hay, an acting couple who are on tour in Buffalo in 1953 with a repertory consisting of Cyrano de Bergerac and Noel Coward's Private Lives. "Fate has given these thespians one more shot at starring roles in the movie The Scarlet Pimpernel, and film director Frank Capra himself is en route to Buffalo to catch their matinee performance," said director Jane Avery. "Will Charlotte appear or run off with their agent? Will George be sober enough to emote? Will Capra see Cyrano, Private Lives or a disturbing mixture of the two? Hilarious misunderstandings pile on misadventures in this valentine to theatre hams everywhere." The cast is pictured. In front is Jack Spencer. Standing in the first row, from left, are Kerry Dillsworth, Brandon Lewis, Frank Shap, Ashley Roush, Erin Peacock, Jen Virts, and Judy Bertsch. In the back, same order, are Mikey Virts, Paul Blank, and Marshall Thayer. Amy Marple is the stage manager and Tania Feller is assistant stage manager. The play is being produced via a special arrangement with Samuel French Incorporated and is funded in part by the arts councils of Garrett County and Maryland.

Governor's Proposed FY '13 Budget Shows Decreased Aid For Education

Gov. Martin O'Malley presented his proposed fiscal year 2013 budget for the state of Maryland last Wednesday. As predicted by local officials and lawmakers, the document includes reductions in state aid to Garrett County, particularly in the area of education.

Total aid to local government is a proposed $31.95 million (including retirement payments for the Board of Education, Ruth Enlow Library, and Garrett College personnel). This is $2.625 million, or 7.6 percent, less than for FY 2012.

The governor's budget calls for a 9.9 percent, or $2.264 million, decrease for local primary and secondary education funding, which includes allocations for special education and student transportation. This cut is mainly the result of an increase in the county's wealth (based on a state formula) and a decrease in student population.

O'Malley also plans to cut state aid for local teacher retirement by 1.9 percent, or $914,000. The total loss in state aid for local primary and secondary education, therefore, is a proposed 11.8 percent, or $3.178 million, compared to FY '12.

Garrett County will not be alone in its loss. Entities across the state will be asked to begin paying for their educators' retirements.

"Among the tough choices in the FY 2013 budget is sharing teachers' retirement costs with local governments," the O'Malley administration states in the budget document. "Currently, the state pays the entire cost of teacher pensions, totaling $946 million in FY 2013. Teacher salaries, the key cost driver of pension costs, are determined by local jurisdictions."

O'Malley's proposal requires locals to pay 50 percent of the combined costs of Social Security and teachers' retirement contributions. Local entities currently pay for Social Security only, which accounts for one-third of the combined costs.

"The administration is proposing several measures to mitigate the impact of this cost shift, including increasing local revenue, enhancing aid to less wealthy jurisdictions, and providing targeted budget relief," the budget plan states.

The proposed budget lists $3.756 million for Garrett College. This includes direct aid, unrestricted grants, and optional/state retirement. The FY 2013 allocation would be $20,000 more than the previous year's.

Local libraries are slated to receive $119,000 in state aid, plus $72,000 for personnel retirement payments.

O'Malley's capital budget includes $122,000 for the Loch Lynn Community Park Trail Project, $95,000 for Oakland's Glades Park Path Extension/Fence Repair Project, $260,000 for the Grantsville Waterline Extension Project, and $300,000 for Oakland Water System improvements.

Funding for Department of Natural Resources' development projects includes $150,000 for the planning phase of trail construction in local state parks; $150,000 for the planning phase of the Western Maryland Recreational Access and Trail Restoration Project in Garrett County; $20,000 for new roofs for Bear Creek Fish Hatchery Wildlife Manage-

Dates For 2012 Winter Fest Are Announced

The fifth annual Oakland Winter Fest celebration will be held Feb. 17 to 19, as announced this week. Sponsors are currently being sought to help fund the ice sculptures that will be carved on site throughout the town for the weekend celebration of winter.

Volunteers are also needed to help with the events of the weekend, which will include live ice sculpting by professional ice artist Bill Sandusky, a progressive dinner on Friday, Feb. 17, and ice games on Saturday such as ice bowling and a snowman building contest. If the weather is right, a snowmobile race will also take place.

Jim Johnson is heading up the event, assisted by several individuals, including Ray Miller, who will provide horse-drawn sleigh rides and who assists in planning the progressive dinner, the traditional kick-off event. Participants will depart from the town's new Transportation Museum for the first course of the meal, and have each course at a different locale.

Lillian Steele is organizing vendors for the event, and Regina Gearhart is serving as the event treasurer. Flyers are being distributed with detailed information, and more information will be published as the event nears. There will be a bonfire, a Snowflake Toddler contest, and many other events.

To offer assistance or to sponsor a sculpture, persons are asked to contact Johnson at 301-334-3352 or 301-616-4008.

Maryland Delegation Sets Aside Most Partisanship For President's Address

by Mark Miller
Capital News Service

WASHINGTON – President Obama set out a blueprint for an economy "built to last" – calling for business tax reform, an end to oil subsidies, citizenship for immigrant scholars, and clean energy development – and challenged Congress to set aside partisan politics and get things done.

"None of these reforms can happen unless we also lower the temperature in this town. We need to end the notion that the two parties must be locked in a perpetual campaign of mutual destruction," Obama said in his State of the Union address Tuesday. "With or without Congress, I will keep taking actions that help the economy grow. But I can do a whole lot more with your help. Because when we act together, there is nothing the United States of America can't achieve."

The call to action was well-received by the Maryland congressional delegation – even from Republicans.

"He gave a great speech. He always gives a great speech," said Rep. Roscoe Bartlett, R-Frederick. "Most of it could have been given by a Republican, except for some parts."

Those parts include what Bartlett said was a mischaracterization of the capital gains tax, a second tax on that income, he said.

"I would expect most wealthy people to have a lower percent (of tax paid) because most of them are living on capital gains," he said.

His fellow Republican Rep. Andy Harris was less charitable, saying, "There was just nothing new this year.... He's just playing the blame game."

Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Mechanicsville, agreed with Bartlett – at least on the quality of the speech.

"I thought it was an excellent speech," he said, adding that he and his whip's office "are going to continue to make sure, as the president said, that we're operating efficiently and effectively."

The substance of the speech was "a very forceful statement" for long-term economic development, said John Sarbanes, D-Towson. He also remarked on Obama's call for cooperation, saying that's when the nation works best.

Gov. Martin O'Malley, who attended the speech, praised the president's address for its "fearlessness" and said Obama focused on the important things – jobs and job creation.

Obama took the Congress to task, almost ordering the members to approve his agenda.

"As long as I'm president, I will work with anyone in this chamber to build on this momentum. But I intend to fight obstruction with action, and I will oppose any effort to return to the very same policies that brought on this economic crisis in the first place," Obama said.

Partisanship brought the nation to the brink of default on its debts over the summer, as the White House and House Republicans repeatedly could not close a deal on raising the debt ceiling – the amount the government is permitted to borrow. Later, a bipartisan commission failed to agree on a plan to cut the national debt by $1.2 trillion – a condition of the deal that solved the debt-ceiling stalemate – triggering expected cuts after November's election.

A vote on the issue is scheduled in the Senate today, where it's expected senators will vote down a House bill expressing opposition to an automatic hike of $1.2 trillion, included in the deal finally negotiated in August.

But this week's vote just calls attention to the fact that the Obama administration and Republicans cannot reach agreement on fiscal issues, particularly with the presidential election on the horizon.

Rep. Chris Van Hollen, D-Kensington, who served on the bipartisan panel that tried to reach a deficit-cutting deal, said Obama delivered a good summation of his term so far.

"He made it clear that we're stronger together, but we can't wait," Van Hollen said.

The Maryland delegation at least put on a good show of bipartisanship for the State of the Union speech.

Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., and Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, both the senior women senators from their party, sat together, heeding the call from the moderate think tank Third Way and the grassroots moderate group No Labels to set aside partisan labels during the address.

They were joined in defying the conventional party seating arrangement by Maryland's junior Sen. Ben Cardin, who sat with his co-sponsor on his "Hotel for Heroes" bill, Sen. Roger Wicker, R-Miss.; and Bartlett, who for the second year sat next to his colleague on the House Committee on Small Business, Rep. Judy Chu, D-Calif., as well as House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., who is originally from Maryland.

Cardin said sitting with Wicker "wasn't just symbolic; we really want to work together...."

"We have to rebuild America," Cardin said, "We have to invest in our roads, bridges, and energy grids."

Bartlett also brought a guest to the event, U.S. Army Reserve Sgt. Joseph Beeman, a wounded warrior from Cascade, in Bartlett's 6th Congressional District; as did Van Hollen, D-Kensington, who brought John Mendez, an outreach worker for Bethesda Cares, which works on public policy on homelessness and poverty.

Celebrate Recovery Program To Begin On Feb. 10 In MLP

The first Celebrate Recovery program in Garrett County will kick off on Friday, Feb 10, at Faith Evangelical Free Church in Mtn. Lake Park at 6:30 p.m. Celebrate Recovery is a 12-step based recovery program that incorporates eight principles found in the Beatitudes in the Gospel of Matthew.

The program was developed by John Baker in 1991 at Saddleback Church in Lake Forest, Calif., with input from Rick Warren. Celebrate Recovery is designed to help people address a variety of "hurts, habits, and hang-ups," including alcohol and drug addiction, sexual abuse, domestic violence, sexual addiction, and gambling addiction.

"We will meet together weekly in a safe and confidential setting," said Linda Stephens, local program coordinator. "Participants will work through the 12-step recovery program, which – together with the eight principles that Jesus taught us in the Beatitudes – are to address their addiction and deepen their relationship with Jesus."

She added there will be meaningful and challenging teachings, combined with participants' recovery stories. Participants will work through each step at their own pace in their own time.

"We hope to create a supportive and caring environment that will allow us to open up as individuals and address our hurts, habits, and hang-ups," Stephens said.

A church spokesman emphasized that this is a community program and not a "church program."

"The impetus for bringing the program to the community was the realization that we have a hurting community where many of our friends, family, and neighbors are suffering from addictions and hurts," he said. "We are going to start small with one meeting on Friday evenings, but we hope that in the future there will be meetings on other nights and in different locations. We also hope to have occasional dinners for participants."

No reservations are necessary. Snacks and childcare will be available.

For further information about participation or helping with the program, persons may contact Stephens at 301-334-8647 or CelebrateRecoveryOakland@yahoo.com.

Commission Seeks Recommendations For Hall Of Fame

The Garrett County Commission for Women is seeking recommendations of outstanding women for induction into the Garrett County Women's Hall of Fame. Nominees should be women who have made outstanding contributions to Garrett County and are role models for tomorrow's female leaders, a spokesperson said.

The Garrett County Women's Hall of Fame was established in 1995 as a permanent means of recognizing the significant contributions of Garrett County's women throughout the area's history.

Participation in the process provides an opportunity to recognize the many talents and contributions of extraordinary women, the spokesperson said. Up to three women will be inducted each year. Both historical and contemporary women are eligible for the Garrett County Women's Hall of Fame. These women represent the past, the present, and the future vision of Garrett County, the spokesperson said.

Information about the criteria and qualifications for the award, as well as the nomination form, are available as a packet at each location of the Ruth Enlow Library. Nominations must be postmarked by Feb. 17. All questions and nominations can be directed/submitted to: the Garrett County Commission for Women, c/o Garrett County Commissioners, 203 South 4th Street, Room 207, Oakland, MD 21550, or to Joanne Harsh at 301-334-9766.

Organizations and individuals are invited to nominate. Under the guidance of the Garrett County Commission for Women, a selection committee representing a cross section of citizens of the county will review the nominations and make recommendations to the commission. After final review and approval, the commission will announce the inductees, and the honored women will be recognized for their contributions during a breakfast ceremony in their honor to be held at Dutch's at Silver Tree on March 24 at 9:30 a.m.

portion of the meetings many speakers made emotional pleas to keep their community schools open. They discussed the impact such action would have on the development of students, the life of their communities, and the long-term problems that overcrowded schools would have on the county as a whole.

While addressing the audience at Kitzmiller Elementary, Leo Martin, mayor of Mountain Lake Park, stated that he supported the town of Kitzmiller keeping its school.

"I challenge the Board of Education and the commissioners to come together and find an alternative," Martin stated. "The board can cut its budget without closing schools, and there is nothing wrong with raising taxes for education.

"The county commissioners should meet with the board and find a better way."

ment buildings; $15,000 for cabin chimney renovations at Herrington Manor State Park; $500,000 for cabin renovations, $15,000 for new fuel dispensers, and $30,000 to stabilize the nature center foundation at New Germany State Park; $37,000 to renovate the exterior of the Savage River State Forest office; and $15,000 to renovate the office/store at Swallow Falls State Park.

Under "Miscellaneous," the proposed budget shows $437,000 in local health grants, $2.538 million in disparity grants, and $76,000 for local Program Open Space projects.

The allocation for public safety in Garrett County would be the same as in FY '12. In FY '13, police aid would be $155,000 and fire/rescue allocations would amount to $200,000.

"To create jobs, a modern economy requires modern investments, and that's why our proposed budget for FY 2013 invests in job creation and its key ingredients: education, innovation, and rebuilding our state's infrastructure," O'Malley said when he unveiled his budget. "We balance these modern investments with fiscally responsible revenues and cuts that will bring our six-year total to $7.5 billion, the most of any six-year period in Maryland's history. Our budget is a pro-jobs, pro-opportunity, pro-growth budget that takes a balanced approach of cuts, revenue and investment."

To close a budget gap of approximately $1 billion, the FY '13 budget includes almost $800 million of reductions.

"Additionally, the FY '13 budget plan constrains total budget growth to only 1.9 percent, excluding the appropriation to the Rainy Day Fund; reduces general fund spending, after the appropriation to the Rainy Day Fund, to below the FY 2012 level; complies with the General Assembly's Spending Affordability Committee (SAC) guideline for the sixth consecutive year; cuts the structural deficit by more than half – 59 percent, exceeding the SAC recommendation of 50 percent; and preserves $837 million of cash resources in the Rainy Day Fund ($673 million) and unallocated fund balance ($164 million)," the O'Malley administration notes in the budget document.

Seek Funding

said Beitzel.

During the 2011 legislative session, Edwards and Beitzel led legislative efforts to cap the losses a local jurisdiction receives in education based on the wealth formula. That bill was met with opposition from the O'Malley administration.

The western Maryland legislators, however, convinced other lawmakers to include extra education funding for Garrett and Allegany counties in FY 2012. This funding was included the passage of the alcohol tax. That funding, however, was good for only one year.

"We have heard the outcry of Garrett and Allegany County citizens, and we are taking that message to our colleagues in Annapolis to help us minimize the loss of education funding from the state," said Edwards.

Because of the budget cuts, the Garrett County Board of Education is examining the possible closure of up to three elementary schools: Friendsville, Kitzmiller, and Dennett Road.

"The citizens from these areas have made it clear that these schools are at the heart of the community and closing them would cause irreparable harm for the students and their families," Beitzel said.

Tax Worries

issue because it runs off when it rains, sending pollutants into drinking water and the bay, Prost said.

"Without additional dedicated funding for stormwater, we are not going to get the job done," Prost said.

Sen. Richard Colburn, R-Dorchester, said he recognizes the importance of the flush tax, but opposes the increase at this time.

"I can say that the Bay Restoration fee has been used beneficially for a lot of wastewater treatment plants. It has been well utilized, and has given us money that we wouldn't have had otherwise," Colburn said.

Legislators are particularly concerned about the flush tax being tied to water consumption, and the impact that could have on rural areas and industries such as farming which require a lot of water.

Sen. Jim Mathias, D-Worcester, said he wants to hear the debate about the increase in the flush tax before making up his mind. He said he is open-minded and recognizes this could be beneficial to the Eastern Shore, where tourism and the fishing industry rely on clean water.

But Mathias worries about the financial burden on families and businesses.

"When we did the initial flush tax, it was a different economy," Mathias said.

Friendsville Driver Arrested On DUI, DWI Charges

A Friendsville woman was arrested by Maryland State Police last Thursday following a traffic stop on Marsh Hill Road, McHenry.

Police were responding to a report of a possible intoxicated driver, when they witnessed the suspect vehicle fail to stop for a stop sign. The driver was identified as Mindy McCarty, who appeared to be intoxicated. McCarty was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, driving while impaired by alcohol, DWI while transporting a minor, and failure to stop for a stop sign. She was later released from police custody.

Oskoui was charged with failure to control speed to avoid a collision.

Well Put, Warren...

Whoever emerges as the Republican candidate for president is going to have his hands full in the run against President Obama. While the GOP is hoping that the continuing problems with the economy and the growing federal deficit are going to be good news for the challenger to Obama's seat, the Republicans are somehow going to have to address the disparities in the federal tax system.

The primary disparity that has come to light in recent days is the percentage of income paid in taxes by the average American worker compared to those paid by the extremely wealthy. Mitt Romney's tax returns released this week show that for the past two years the former governor "earned" over $42 million, yet paid only 13.9% of that in taxes.

Meanwhile, most of us in the largest part of the proverbial bell curve who earned only a fraction of what Romney did paid somewhere in the neighborhood of 30-35% in taxes.

Billionaire (and Democrat) Warren Buffet has also in recent weeks spoken out about the unfairness of the current system, which allowed him to pay just 17.4% of his income in taxes last year, while his secretary paid about 35%.

Proponents of the current system (mostly Republicans) note that it is because most of the income of both Romney and Buffett was from capital gains, which are taxed at a different rate in our current system. They also argue that leveling the playing field in the way that President Obama proposed in his State of the Union address this week (a minimum tax rate of 30% on those who earn a million dollars or more) will serve to stymie job growth since it is generally the wealthy who provide jobs.

Frankly, there is no argument that will justify this discrepancy in the minds of the voting public. It is a total non-starter. No matter how one tries to defend it, this will be viewed as a clear case of unfairness – unfairness created by both wealthy members of Congress and not-so-wealthy members of Congress who, because they depend so heavily upon campaign contributions from the wealthy, are willing to craft tax laws that will benefit their benefactors, with fairness not even considered. While the argument that it is, in general, the wealthy who provide jobs is valid, there have to be other, fairer incentives that can be provided by the government to large business owners to encourage hiring.

The real scenario of a person who works a 40-hour week for $60,000 salary and pays $20,000 of that to the government in taxes (33%, leaving him $40,000), standing beside another person who does little work for a $20,000,000 "salary" and pays $2,800,000 of that to the government (14%, leaving him "a paltry" $17,200,000) is unfairness in its purest form. No argument supporting this scenario is going to fly in the minds of the majority of Americans.

In Buffet's words, "Debbie (his secretary) works just as hard as I do and she pays twice the rate I do. If this is a war, my side has the nuclear bomb. We have K Street (Washington lobbyists). We have Wall Street. Debbie doesn't have anybody. I want a government that is responsive to the people who got the short straw in life."

Well put, Mr. Buffett.

Letters to the Editor

Writers of letters to the editor are reminded that letters will not be published if they exceed 400 words, do not include contact information, and / or are deemed to be libelous.

To the Editor:

Time and time again, Tom Doyle writes letters to the editor of The Republican that are blatantly false, misleading, and unsubstantiated. He has again done this in a letter to the editor published January 19.

Mr. Doyle writes that the final decision to close a public school is under the authority of the board of county commissioners. This statement is wrong. Under the Annotated Coded of the State of Maryland, Education Article §4-101(a) provides that "educational matters that affect the counties shall be under the control of a county board of education."

Education Article §4-109(c) provides that "with the advice of the county superintendent, the county board shall determine the geographic attendance area for each school established under this section." Education Article §4-120(a) provides "If a county board considers it practicable, it shall consolidate schools." COMAR 13A.02.09 specifically sets the process for the closing of schools. 13A.02.09.01A provides that "each local board of education shall establish procedures to be used in making decisions on school closings."

Based upon the above, although the board of county commissioners funds the county share of the board of education budget, that body has no official say in the school closure decision-making process. Rather, such decisions are made by the county boards of education subject to the right of interested parties to file an appeal to the state board of education.

What never ceases to amaze me is Mr. Doyle has elected to remain misinformed, and time and time again fails to provide truthful information. The county has extended personal invitations to Mr. Doyle to meet and listen to accurate information. On every occasion he has declined or not responded, and has chosen to remain misinformed in an attempt to mislead the readers of this newspaper.

Commentary, criticism, and circulating deceptive and ambiguous statements only add to the sensitivity and indifference of the very difficult and complex decisions that the Garrett County Board of Education must make in the forthcoming months. The process to finalize complex and heartbreaking decisions that our public school system is faced with is difficult enough for the elected board of education members, administrators, employees, and their families. The final determination is problematical enough without injecting division and unsubstantiated blame into the equation.

County Administrator

The 11th annual Lisa Wade 5K Run and 4th annual Corey's Course were held this past July, sponsored by the Georges Creek Soccer Club.

The families of Lisa Wade and Corey Broadwater would like to thank those who supported our events. Over 300 were in attendance, with 276 completing the Lisa run/walk. Corey's Course was changed to a kids' dash this year, and was a big hit with the children and adults, as well. Our success wouldn't have been possible without the businesses, organizations, and individuals who donated time, finances, door prizes, and refreshments.

Major sponsors included Garrett County businesses: D&L Coal, DSH Services, G&S Coal, WEPCO Credit Union, and Williams Chiropractic Clinic. Other Garrett County supporters include: Railey Realty, Long and Foster, Santa Fe Grille, Smiley's Pizzeria, and Uno's.

We wish everyone a healthy and prosperous 2012, and hope that you will join us in thanking these businesses with your patronage throughout the coming year. Lisa's Run and Corey's Course will be held this year on Saturday, July 14, in Westernport.

To the Editor:

I am writing to voice my concern over the impending closing of Mountain Glade Adult Day Care. My mother has attended there for over three years now. It has been a wonderful place for her to go and that allows her to remain active, not only physically, but mentally as well. Last week I learned, with much sadness, that due to economic difficulties and a decrease in government funding, Diakon will be closing the doors of Mountain Glade in March.

Unlike community centers, Mountain Glade is unique in that it not only provides an affordable, safe, clean, and caring environment for the elderly and disabled to stay during the day, but also provides a trained, licensed staff who can administer medication and monitor medical concerns. They are, without a doubt, top-notch in treating their clients with compassion and dignity. Mom has come to think of them as family.

Garrett County is an economically depressed area. Most families cannot afford to stay home to care for their loved ones or hire the necessary help while they go off to work. Where will these folks go once the center closes? There isn't another center in the area like Mountain Glade. The next closest is located in Finzel, which is too far away to be considered a feasible alternative for those of us who reside in the southern half of the county.

It seems that in today's society, when budget cuts are needed, senior citizens and those of low income are the ones who are targeted. Mountain Glade Adult Day Care is a much needed service here in Garrett County. Please don't take that away.

Sincerely,
Barbara Rodeheaver

To the Editor:

Doesn't anybody is our State Department know anything about foreign policy? The concern we're having with Iran could have been avoided decades ago.

Let's step into the time machine and go back to the 1980s. Iran and Iraq were at war with each other, with Iraq the eventual winner. A couple of years later (1990), Iraq invaded Kuwait, which it had every reason to do so – but that is another story. This resulted us going to war against Iraq for two reasons – to cut Iraq down to size and ensure Israel to be the dominant superpower in the Middle East, and for the Pentagon to test its new weapons.

After Desert Storm forced Iraq out of Kuwait, Saddam Hussein was still in power – something we couldn't stomach. Our government is notorious for labeling everyone they despise a dictator.

Now push the lever forward to 9/11. The planning and training for the attacks took place in Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia. But instead of going to war against the former, George W. Bush used 9/11 as a pretext to invade Iraq. It's like Franklin Roosevelt declaring war on Brazil after the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor.

Now Iraq is destroyed and Saddam Hussein is dead. We could have used him and Iraq as a leveling tool against Iran today.

Stay tuned, folks. It's only a matter of time when we are at war again – with Iran.

To the Editor:

Once again I agree with our editor (Jan. 12 editorial) in expressing disappointment with our legislators and our county commissioners in asking Governor O'Malley to expedite the Advisory Commission study on the impacts of Marcellus well drilling and get moving now on the drilling. This is not a position that I, and many others, share or support, and as a landowner and leaseholder I feel dismayed that they would try to rush this process through when there are so many fracking health and safety issues reported daily in our neighboring states that could profoundly affect my neighbors, my family, and the value of local properties.

To rush this process through is to accept that you can trust that the fracking industry is ready to assure the safety of its drilling process to the residents of Garrett County. All of my research as a librarian has given me no such assurances. Please look into what is happening now in Bradford, PA. If you have access to the Internet, view the video the "Marcellus Shale Reality Tour" (easily located on YouTube). This is a current documentary of a group of bipartisan community leaders who boarded a bus, traveled to Bradford, and interviewed people affected by gas drilling there. It is well worth 40 minutes of your time.

There are those who may question my motives, or claim that I am simply anti-drilling. Nonsense. I have a lease and would like nothing more to be a "shale-millionaire." I would like nothing more than to see GC find a way to safely fill our coffers, provide jobs, and save our schools and our way of life. I just have not seen the research that this industry does not come without potential, huge consequences to the health, safety, and quality of life of many individual landowners.

Please get educated. Research what is happening in our surrounding states in your libraries, in the news, and on the Internet. Facebook "Save Western Maryland" gives daily updates of what is going on in the news, blogs, etc., on the topic. Stay informed with www.CitizenShale.org, a local organization committed to educating the public on the issues of drilling.

Review, research, and form your own opinions, but please do not allow those who are taking a responsible approach to investigating this issue be rushed into an industrial procedure that has the potential to profoundly and negatively impact local citizens' lives.

Sincerely,
Dana Shimrock

To the Editor:

Several years ago, Democrats used to sport a bumper sticker that read, "It takes guts to be a Democrat in Garrett County."

Actually it takes more than guts. It takes a thick skin and a lot of hard work. It is a fact that Democrats are outnumbered 2-1 by Republicans in this county. Therefore, as Democrats we have to work twice as hard to accomplish our goal of promoting political responsibility through informed, active participation in our community.

In our last election our Democratic candidates worked very hard in their bid for political office by showing their concern, commitment, and dedication to the people of Garrett County. As a Democrat and a member of the Democrat Central Committee, I was very proud of the effort and examples set by James "Smokey" Stanton, Eric Robison, Bill Welch, Everett Deberry, and Skylar Hebden in their campaigns for election. They might not have won, but at least they made the Democrat presence something to be considered. They gave us something to build on. As times change, people change, and we will have Democrats elected in Garrett County in the future. It's going to be an uphill battle to change people's way of thinking in a county where being a Republican seems to be hereditary, but it can be done.

Therefore, I extend an invitation to any Democrat in the county to join the Democrat Club, or to serve by filling one of the vacancies on the Central Committee. With all the work that needs to be done it is important that we have every committee seat filled. It is our job as committee members to create an interest in the Democratic Party, to promote the ideas and principles of the party by supporting and electing qualified, dedicated candidates at all levels of our government.

Central committee meetings are usually held once a month in a central location with all meetings being open to the public. I invite anyone to call me for information about the Central Committee at 301-334-4643, or Rosalie Finch at 301-334-4076 for information about the Democrat Club. We have a busy time ahead to secure the re-election of President Obama, a Democratic senator, and the election of a Democrat for the 6th Congressional District. Please consider joining us in serving the people of Garrett County.

To the Editor:

The dictionary defines the word "irreplaceable" as "something too good, valuable, rare, unique, etc., to be able to be replaced if lost." These words could readily be substituted with an alternate definition, namely: "Dr. Karl Schwalm."

Dr. Schwalm recently announced his retirement from medicine following a 30-year career serving Garrett County and surrounding West Virginia communities. I have known Dr. Schwalm for 28 of those years, and I believe I can speak with authority regarding his skill, character, and humility.

Throughout his career, Dr. Schwalm cared for young and old alike; for those with insurance and those without; and at all hours of the day, or days of the week. He completed those duties without tribute, glamour, accolades, or public recognition. He was motivated by compassion, and paid by triumph over the disease at hand. Dr. Schwalm is one of those modest individuals who went about his work almost unrecognized; yet to the keen observer, Dr. Schwalm's profound presence and lasting impact is more accurately noticed.

He has been part of the legacy of numerous medical care providers who have assisted in building the excellent healthcare delivery system we all enjoy in Garrett County today. Along with his colleagues at the Garrett Medical Group, he helped create a primary care delivery model wholly focused on the patient. Unfortunately, this can obscure the personal and professional effort and energy it took to achieve such positive outcomes. That is what I hope to rectify with this letter.

I simply want to expose the fact that many in our community owe their good health – and their very lives – to Dr. Karl Schwalm. There is no greater gift one can give, and no greater debt do we owe, than to Dr. Schwalm for his quiet, deliberate, unending focus on the needs of others.

There are a lot of adjectives one could use to describe to a man like Dr. Karl Schwalm: physician, healer, caregiver, teacher, expert, sage, and confidant. But beyond the obvious medical descriptive terminology, the word I choose to remember him by is simply "friend."

Throughout his career here, Karl Schwalm has been a friend to his patients, his hospital, his colleagues, and his community. That makes him and his wife Sharon irreplaceable. You can never replace a friend. Friends will always be with you. And that is how I wish to always recall my irreplaceable friend, Karl Schwalm, M.D.

To the Editor:

Before the county commissioners make any decision on the financial problems associated with the ASCI whitewater course, the citizens of the county should see a full and public disclosure of all of the financial records, salaries, and budgets of the organization for the past five years.

I find it rather hard to imagine that an organization making $800,000 per year cannot pay its mortgage. ASCI director Matt Taylor admitted to the press that loan payments had intentionally not been made for 18 months, yet there has been no public disclosure of the situation until it became a crisis. Transparency of all of the facts on the matter is paramount in light of the millions of dollars in public funding the center has received.

Who sits on ASCI's board of directors and why and when did they make the decisions that they did? A quick check of some readily available public records hints at the fact that several local elected officials and county staff have not only served on the board, but might have also made the decision to not honor their debt. Is this not a conflict of interests?

Matt Taylor has been quoted as stating, "ASCI's default is part of a structured process to eliminate the debt." Excuse me? We're not going to pay our bills as part of a process to pay our bills? The default was intentional and now ASCI wants taxpayers to bail them out. Will it be through the county acquiring the project, or perhaps the college? I hope not.

The truth is that ASCI was conceived by politicos and land developers with no sound financial basis for long-term sustainability. Through a complex strategy of swaps and deals, land developers received money for land, tax benefits, a free amenities package, and inflated land values. The business community at the lake allegedly received "economic development," which simply translates to increased revenue and profits for a few.

Perhaps the people who should step up and save ASCI are the businesses that supposedly benefit from this failed venture. Why, when we are closing our community schools, does anyone think this is a taxpayer problem to solve?

To the Editor:

At a time when Garrett County schools are threatened with closure, the Adventure Sports Center International's (ASCI) executive director mounts a public relations campaign requesting $3 million from the commissioners.

ASCI has been operating for five years and has not come close to paying for itself – and it won't, despite well over $24 million of government money already invested.

WARMING UP THE CAR
by Dr. Tom Sheahen

Q. How long should I warm up my car on a cold morning?

A. Not very long at all, perhaps a half minute; and furthermore, it doesn't make much difference how cold the morning is!

Unlike the human body, the metal of an engine block doesn't "feel" the cold. All that is really necessary is that a little oil is sprayed around inside the engine, and that depends almost entirely on how well the oil pump is working, a little on the viscosity (thickness) of the oil, and very little on the temperature itself.

To a person, the difference between 14° F and 50° F is really very noticeable, but to steel, that's just the difference between 263° K and 283° K, and the corresponding expansion of metal with temperature is negligible. However, people tend to think of their cars as an extension of their own personality, and so they wait, thinking the engine is about as warm as the driver. The very same person who would drive off immediately at 50° F will let the car warm up for 10 minutes at 14° F.

The mistake here is in driving off instantly at 50° F. To get the oil circulating, every car needs a little warm-up time – about 30 seconds is plenty.

One thing that's easy to do in advance: At an oil change before winter, put in oil with a viscosity rating of 5W-30 (as contrasted to the usual 10W-30). That is slightly lighter weight oil, less viscous, and will circulate easier on cold mornings. Then in spring and summer go back to 10W-30 oil.

The really important thing to watch in wintertime is the coolant. If your engine block were to freeze and crack in the winter, you're out several thousand dollars for a new engine. The customary mixture in nearly all cars is 50/50 water with ethylene glycol (anti-freeze), and that will protect against freezing down to –34° F. (The coldest day I ever experienced was –22° F, so there's an adequate safety margin there.) Use a 50/50 mixture all year around.

Another thing to pay attention to is the windshield-washer fluid. Buy fluid rated for sub-zero temperatures, keep the container reasonably full, and don't thin it out by mixing it with water! At $1.50 per gallon on sale, you can afford it. You definitely don't want to be out driving some cold day, spray your windshield, and suddenly have ice form right in your field of view.

Dr. Sheahen lives at Deep Creek Lake and has taught physics at Garrett College. Persons wishing to submit questions for this column may e-mail them to newsroom@therepublicannews.com.

CELEBRATING 40 YEARS OF SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY

Myths & Facts About Financial Assistance For Higher Education

by Peggy Santamaria

College Goal Maryland, a free event for everyone interested in getting answers and assistance with the financial aid process, will be held at Garrett College next Thursday, Feb. 2, from 6 to 9 p.m. Participants are eligible to win one of three $500 scholarships which can be used at any college.

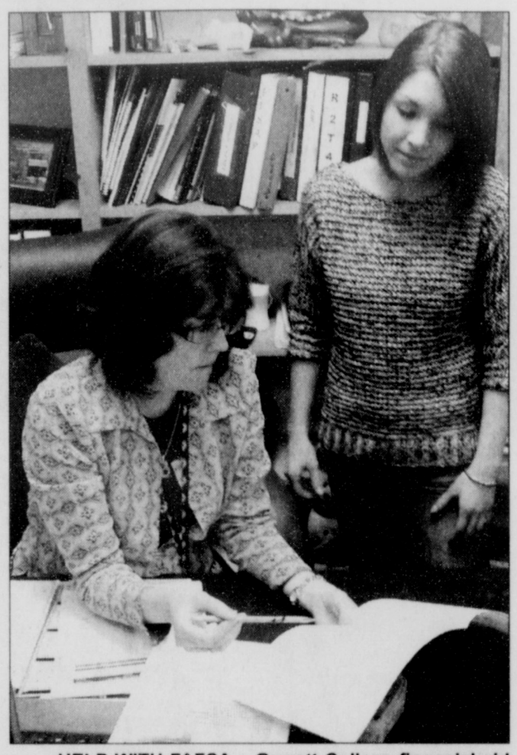
Finding the funding for a college education is often the first hurdle of earning the degree or certificate that the student is striving for. Financial aid is available for a majority of the students who apply, according to Cissy VanSickle, director of financial aid at Garrett College.

"Many people don't know how the financial aid process works. This is understandable. It can be complicated," she said, adding that financial aid counselors attend regular training sessions so they can be equipped to help applicants get the greatest amount possible to defray college expenses and to dispel some of the widespread myths about financial aid.

The following are several of the most commonly held misconceptions about financial aid:

•Myth: "Financial aid is only for people with very low incomes. My family's income is too high."

Fact: The only way to find out if one qualifies is to fill out the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). The formula used by the federal government to figure the amount a family is expected to contribute to a child's college costs considers a number of factors, including income, number of college-age children, age of the parents, and the number of persons being supported by the household. Costs above that contribution can be covered by financial aid or low-interest government or private loans. There are some loans that may be used to cover the cost of the family contribution. Most schools will not consider applicants for college grants and scholarships if they have not applied for federal aid by filling out the FAFSA.



HELP WITH FAFSA – Garrett College financial aid counselor Pamela Warnick is pictured going over some of the details of the FAFSA form with student Amber Stephens. Warnick is one of the four counselors who will be available to assist families with applications for financial aid during the College Goal Maryland event on February 2. See story for details.

•Myth: "My high school grades aren't good enough to qualify for aid."

Fact: Most federal and state aid is based on financial need, not grades. Most programs will require that the student maintain an average grade point average to keep the aid. Many private scholarships and merit aid offers, grades don't count as much as one might think. Many use other criteria: financial need, leadership, residence, major, and heritage.

•Myth: "I won't be eligible for financial aid because I'm only going to college part-time."

Fact: Financial aid is available for part-time students. Students should check with the college's financial aid office for information on aid for part-time students.

•Myth: "Last year my brother didn't qualify for financial aid, so I shouldn't bother applying this year."

Fact: This may not be true because the number of family members in college has a big impact on financial aid eligibility.

•Myth: "The application process is too complicated. I can't do it."

Fact: Most colleges require only the FAFSA in order to apply for assistance. Much of the information needed to fill out the FAFSA is found on family tax returns. On the 2012-2013 FAFSA, students and parents are urged to use the new IRS Data Retrieval Tool that automatically pulls information from the IRS tax return and places the information in the correct FAFSA fields. In addition to the form's directions, there is also online and telephone support available. The FAFSA can be filled out online and saved for future reference.

•Myth: "There isn't enough aid for everyone."

Fact: Federal student aid from the U.S. Department of Education is the largest source of aid in America, providing over $150 billion in grants, work-study, and federal loans for students attending four-year colleges or universities, community colleges, and career schools. The state of Maryland also has an extensive array of financial aid programs in the form of grants, scholarships, and other awards for students who want to further their education beyond high school.

•Myth: "Millions of scholarship dollars go unclaimed every year."

Fact: The statement that private scholarship dollars go unclaimed is unfounded. This is what professional scholarship search services would like applicants to believe, because they want to be paid for their services. Individuals can do their own search for scholarships. One recommended search is www.fastweb.org.

College Goal Maryland at Garrett College is open to students and families regardless of what college they are applying to. For more information, persons may contact VanSickle via e-mail at cissy.vansickle@garrettcollege.edu.

In order to complete the FAFSA at the College Goal Maryland Program, students and parents will need to bring the following:

•Social Security number;

•2011 income tax return (if completed);

•2011 W-2 forms and other records of money earned;

•2011 untaxed income records – Social Security, Temporary Assistance to Needy Families, welfare, or veterans benefits records;

•2011 personal bank statements;

•2011 business and investment mortgage information, business and farm records, stock, bond, and other investment records; and •alien registration card (if student is not a U.S. citizen).

MARYLAND HOMEOWNERS' MORTGAGE INTEREST DEDUCTION IN JEOPARDY

In his recently introduced budget, Governor Martin O'Malley has proposed to reduce the mortgage interest deduction for many Maryland homeowners, according to Mary C. Antoun, chief executive officer of the Maryland Association of Realtors.

"Since 1913, the tax code has protected mortgage interest deductibility. Maryland shouldn't be the first state to scale back the most important tax benefit homeowners receive," stated Antoun. "Everyone is well aware of the burdens Maryland homeowners are facing. Many homeowners have watched the value of their homes decrease. One-fifth of Maryland homeowners are currently under water, and now homeowners find the one constant reliable tax benefit to owning a home under attack."

If tax deductions are capped, as proposed by the governor's budget, many Maryland homeowners will lose some of the value of their mortgage interest deduction and the deductibility of state and local property taxes.

"These two principal real-estate related deductions accounted for almost 70% of total deductions claimed by Maryland taxpayers in 2008," noted Antoun. "Maryland homeowners already contribute a substantial proportion of taxes to local and state coffers."

Maryland is one of the most real estate tax dependent states in the country, ranking 10th among all states. The state has one of the most aggressive real estate tax structures in the country, ranking 11th among all states in terms of total real estate tax burden. In addition, taxes on real estate are the primary source of revenue for Maryland's local jurisdictions.

"Housing and real estate account for almost one-fifth of Maryland's gross state product," said Antoun. "Traditionally, the housing sector leads the economy out of recession and into more robust growth, but that can't happen if we keep putting hurdles in its way."

The Maryland Association of Realtors is the largest Maryland professional trade association, serving over 22,000 members, and is dedicated to preserving the vitality of the real estate market.

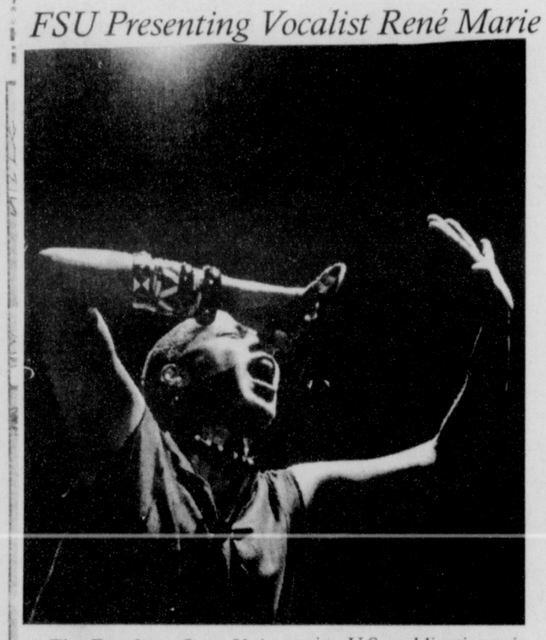
FSU Presenting Vocalist René Marie



The Frostburg State University Cultural Events Series will present jazz vocalist René Marie on Saturday, Feb. 11, as part of its new club series, Live at StarScape. The 8 p.m. performance at Windsor Hall, Town Centre, Cumberland, will feature music from Marie's 2011 release, Black Lace Freudian Slip, and will include pianist Kevin Bales, bassist Kevin Hamilton, and drummer Quentin Baxter.

Marie's musical style integrates elements of jazz, soul, blues, and gospel, a spokesperson said. Her performances include interpretations of old standards as well as original compositions.

"Although she did not embark on a professional career until the age of 42, her performances reveal the resilience and energy of a survivor; she often explains that the strength she found in music helped her to leave an abusive marriage," the spokesperson said.

Since 1996, she has received critical acclaim from major U.S. publications, including the Los Angeles Times, the Washington Post and the Chicago Tribune. She has appeared as the headliner at major festivals, such as the Kennedy Center's Women in Jazz Festival, the Edinburgh Jazz Festival in Scotland, and the Shanghai Jazz Festival in China. She has also received several awards, including Best International Jazz Vocal CD by the Académie Du Jazz, the oldest and most independent awards organization in France.

As part of the Cultural Events Series Arts for Enrichment program, Marie will present a free educational session before the performance. The free interactive session, in which Marie will discuss her career in the music industry, will take place at 4:30 p.m. in Windsor Hall.

Tickets are $20 for adults and $14 for youth under age 17. Corporate and group discount rates are also available.

For more information, persons may contact the Cultural Events Series box office at 301-687-3137 or visit CES's web page at ces.frostburg.edu.

The Cultural Events Series is sponsored in part by the Allegany Arts Council with funds from the Maryland State Arts Council.

The band was formed in August 1979 as the Garrett Highlanders, founded and organized by the late Hon. Fred A. Thayer and Charles P. "Chip" Evans. The band's first public performance was in 1980. Officially adopted by Garrett College in 1989, the band continued as an affiliate program of the institution until 2007, when the band accepted an invitation to associate with the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department.

GC Arts Advocates To Attend Md. Arts Day: "Many Voices, One Song"

Maryland Citizens for the Arts (MCA) will host the 14th Maryland Arts Day in Annapolis on Wednesday, Feb. 8, and several arts advocates from Garrett County will attend the event. The theme of the commemoration day is "Many Voices, One Song."

"More than 400 arts advocates and leaders from across the state will converge on the state capital to meet with legislators to emphasize the importance of public support of the arts and the critical role the arts play in an economically and culturally vibrant Maryland," said Douglas Mann, chairman of MCA.

Details about the event can be found at www.mdarts.org.

The day-long session will begin with greetings and remarks from Maryland lawmakers, including Senate President Thomas V. Mike Miller, Speaker of the House Michael Busch, and Department of Business and Economic Development Secretary Christian Johansson.

The lead sponsor for the 2012 Maryland Arts Day is Susquehanna Bank. Additional support is provided by the Maryland State Arts Council and the Community Arts Alliance of Maryland.

MCA will present the Sue Hess Maryland Arts Advocate of the Year Award during the course of the day. The award is presented to an individual whose advocacy efforts have significantly increased support for and public recognition of the arts in Maryland. The 2012 recipient is Toby Orenstein, founder and artistic director of the Columbia Center for Theatrical Arts in Howard County. Orenstein was inducted into the Maryland Women's Hall of Fame, and in 2005 she was honored for Outstanding Service to Educational Theatre by the Maryland Theatre Association.

The day's keynote speaker is to be Bashi Rose, a Maryland theatre artist and filmmaker. He is a co-founder of Nommo Theatre/Film. His works have been produced in Baltimore, Washington, D.C., and New York City. He has conducted drama workshops in a Hagerstown prison and several prisons in Jessup, under the auspices of the Friend of a Friend Mentoring Program founded by Marshall "Eddie" Conway and Dominique Stevenson.

In 2007 Bashi partnered with his wife, Sharayna Christmas-Rose (founder of Muse 360), to form a youth arts program, Dancing Many Drums (DMD), through which Baltimore youth have the opportunity to learn about themselves and the African diaspora using dance, theater, music, and visual arts.

Performing at Maryland Arts Day will be Piedmont blues singer and guitarist Warner Williams and his musical partner and harmonica player Jay Summerour. Recently recognized as a 2011 NEA National Heritage Fellow, Williams is a Takoma Park native who has been making music for more than 60 years.

There will also be briefings on the state budget, communication training, and advocacy strategies, according to MCA director John Schratwieser.

"Participants will have the chance to meet with their representatives and convey their own messages about the economic, cultural, educational, and social impacts of the arts in their districts and across Maryland, Schratwieser said.

Most of the events of the day will take place at the Miller Senate Building, President's Conference Center West/East, beginning at 9 a.m. and continuing until approximately 3:30 p.m.

COMMISSIONER GIVES PRESENTATION – Garrett County commissioner Bob Gatto addressed the Oakland Rotary Club during a recent meeting. He began his talk by thanking the Rotary and other service organizations for all they do to meet the needs of Garrett County citizens. His presentation included comments on the decline in local property assessments and its effect on county revenues. Gatto also noted the county position on Marcellus shale natural gas drilling and stressed the need for economic development to become a high priority in Garrett County. The Oakland Rotary Club meets each Thursday at noon for lunch at the Garrett County Memorial Hospital Community Service Building in Oakland. Rotary president Tracy Bemiller (left) is pictured presenting Gatto with a certificate of appreciation for his informative presentation.

FEBRUARY SUN – As February begins, the sun appears in front of the stars of Capricornus, moving a degree a day eastward relative to the stars. At 9 p.m. on Feb. 16, the sun enters Aquarius, where it remains until midday on March 11. Both of these star groups are nearly lost in the sun's glare in February. The star group Pisces is to the east of Aquarius, so it sets after the sun, appearing low in the southwestern dusk. The star group Sagittarius, to the west of Capricornus, rises before the sun and is visible low in the southeastern dawn. In early February, sunrises in Garrett County are at about 7:20 a.m., while sunsets are at about 5:43 p.m. (10.5 hours of daylight). Around the end of February, Garrett County's sunrises are at about 6:55 a.m. and sunsets occur at about 6:05 p.m. (11.2 hours of daylight). So during February, the stars are last seen at around 6:10 a.m. (early dawn) and then reappear at about 7 p.m. (late dusk).

FEBRUARY MOON – As February opens, the evening moon is just past half full in the evening sky. To the right of the moon is the planet Jupiter. Along the straight or left edge of the moon, the sun there is rising, lighting up the crater rims and mountain ranges. Those with binoculars or telescopes can see the craters and lunar terrain best at this moon phase or shape. On Feb. 3, the moon appears above the star group Orion in the southern evening sky. On Feb. 7, the moon is full, rising as the sun sets and hanging in the sky all night long. On Feb. 9, the moon appears to the right of the yellow planet Mars in the late evening sky. On Feb. 12 and 13, the moon appears near the planet Saturn in the southern dawn. On Feb. 14, the moon appears half-full in the southern dawn sky. On Feb. 21, the moon passes north of the sun, swinging from the morning sky (to west of the sun) to the evening sky (to east of the sun). At 6:45 p.m. on Feb. 23, the crescent moon appears low in the western dusk. Below and to the left of the moon is the planet Mercury. On Feb. 25, the crescent moon appears to the right of the brilliant planet Venus in the western dusk. On Feb. 26, the crescent moon will be to the right of the bright planet Jupiter. On Feb. 29, the moon appears half-full, once again at its best for viewing craters and mountains with binoculars or a small telescope.

FEBRUARY PLANETS – The five nearest planets are easily seen by eye, four of them shining steadily in contrast to the twinkling stars. Of the five, Mercury is usually the most difficult to see, at a low angle to the sun and seen very close to the horizon. Mercury can be seen very low in the western dusk in the last week of February when it sets more than an hour after the sun. The brilliant planet Venus is great in February with its setting time increasing from three to nearly four hours after sunset. Venus sets at about 9 p.m. in early February, which slides to nearly 10 p.m. in late February. The bright planet Jupiter is easily seen in the evening sky; it's setting time is just after midnight in early February. By late February, Jupiter will be setting just before 11 p.m. In early February, the planet Mars rises in the east at about 8:45 p.m. By the end of February, Mars will be rising at about sunset (6:05 p.m.). In February, Saturn is a southern dawn object. At the start of February, Saturn rises at about 11:35 p.m., sliding to 10 p.m. as the month ends.

FEBRUARY STARS – The bright winter evening stars in February are on full display all through the evening hours. In fact, the bright stars in the southern evening sky make a "W." Look for Orion with his three-star belt. Just above and to the left of the belt is pinkish Betelgeuse, the top middle star of the "W." Orion's belt points down and left to Sirius, the left bottom star of the "W." Above and further to the left is Procyon, the left top star of the "W." Below and to the right of the belt is Rigel, Orion's brightest star. Rigel is the right bottom star of the "W." Orion's belt points right and up to Aldebaran, the top right star of the "W." High over Orion is the bright golden star Capella. Farther to the west of Capella are the Pleiades, or 7 Sisters star cluster, resembling a tiny dipper. The Big Dipper is in the north-northeastern sky, with its scoop on top and handle below. The two top stars of the scoop point down and left to the North Star.

FEBRUARY PROGRAMS – Frostburg State will resume its sky shows in February with Sunday programs at 4 p.m. in Compton Science Center. The programs will as usual show the current evening sky sights. The February main feature will be "Bears and Their Skies," reviewing the different species of bears (from polar regions to the tropics) and the sky sights they would see. The program will end in the Science Discovery Center where we have a fine collection of bear specimens on display. To receive a Planetarium schedule (or bookmark), persons may telephone 301-687-7799 and give name and mailing address. Persons may also access the Planetarium section of the Frostburg State web site at www.frostburg.edu/planetarium.

Dr. Doyle writes this column for those who like to identify the brightest stars, planets, and sights in their backyards.
